Chapter 1 Bower Manuscript

- 1 See on Kucā: A. Stein (1921).
- 2 See on this site: A. Grünwedel (1912).

- 4 G. Bühler (1891a).
- 5 *Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, 1890, 222-223.
- 6 A.F.R. Hoernle noticed that G. Bühler and he independently arrived at essentially the same conclusions (IA 21, 1892: 29). G. Bühler (1891b: 302) expressed the same opinion.
- 7 *Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, April 1891, 54-64. See on this article: G. Bühler (1891b: 303-305).
- 8 The Bower Manuscript; Facsimile leaves, Nagari transcript, romanised transliteration and English translation with notes, edited by A.F. Rudolf Hoernle, published by order of the Government of India and under the patronage of the Bengali Government, Archaeological Survey of India, New Imperial Series, Vol. XXII, Calcutta 1893-1912. The revised translation of parts I-III was published as Vol. XXIII of the Archaeological Survey of India, New Imperial Series, Calcutta 1909, Reprints of the complete edition (in three volumes), New Delhi 1983 and 1987. The Introduction appeared separately in IA 42 (1913) and 43 (1914). An early version of the annotated translation of part I was published in 1891: An instalment of the Bower Manuscript (JASB 60, 135-195). Hoernle (1891b) also wrote another long article on the Bower Manuscript in the same year: A note on the date of the Bower Manuscript (JASB 60, 1891, 79-96; see on this article: G. Bühler, 1891b), reprinted with alterations and additions in IA 21, 1892, 29-45. Early versions of the annotated translations of parts IV and VI were published in 1892 (Another instalment of the Bower Manuscript, IA 21: 129-145. The third instalment of the Bower Manuscript, IA 21: 349-369). Moreover, Hoernle wrote an article on the relationship between the Bhelasamhitā and the Bower Manuscript: The Bheda Samhitā in the Bower Manuscript, JRAS (1910): 830-833. See also Hoernle (1908) and (1909).

The edition of the Bower MS contains a long Introduction (ninety-five pages) in eight chapters: (1) the discovery of the Bower Manuscript: its date, locality, circumstances, importance, etc.; (2) description of the Bower Manuscript; (3–4) the script, the scribes, and their wages in the Bower Manuscript; (5) the date of the writing of the Bower Manuscript; (6) on the sources and the date of the Nāvanītaka; (7) language and composition in the treatises of the Bower Manuscript; (8) subject and contents of the treatises in the Bower Manuscript. Hoernle added a number of appendices to the sections on the seven parts composing the Bower MS: an appendix to part V: The Pāšaka-kevalī; appendix I to part VI: On the Nāgas, Nāgarājas and other supernatural beings; appendix II to part VI: The Khandhavatta-Jātaka; an appendix to parts VI and VII (written in 1911): The Mahāmāyūrī Vidyā-rājñī. The edition ends with a complete Sanskrit index, a general English index, a list of emendations, and a list of misprints.

A considerably shortened version of Hoernle's Introduction to his edition appeared in D. Chattopadhyaya (1982): I, 116–140.

Reviews of Hoernle's edition of the Bower MS were written by J. Jolly (ZDMG 53, 1899: 374–380; ZDMG 67, 1913: 363–371).

Another edition of the Bower MS, based on Hoernle's text, is: Nāvanītakam or the Bower Manuscript, critically edited with various readings and restorations for the first time from the Editeo (sic) Princeps of the late Dr. Hoernle, by Kavirāj Balwant Singh Mohan, Mehar Chand Lachman Das, Lahore 1925 [IO.San.D.245]; this edition, which has a small number of footnotes, adds, as an appendix, two versions of the Harītakīkalpa from the Aśvinīsam-hitā (see Aśvinīkumārasamhitā).

Many books and articles on Indian medicine or Sanskrit literature in general devote a number of pages to the Bower MS or are entirely concerned with it; see: ABI 106–110 and 235–239; AVI 282–284; P. Cordier (1903b): 339–343; A.A.M. Esser (1942); Jaggi IV, 21–24; J. Jolly (1901): 14–15 (C.G. Kashikar 18–19); Jyotir Mitra (1974): 66–70; A.B. Keith (1973): 509–510; P. Kutumbiah (1969): Introduction XXXI–XXXIV; R.C. Majumdar (1971): 261; V.N. Pandey (1992); V.N. Pandey and A. Pandey (1988); S.K. Ramachandra (1985): 72–73; P. Rāy (1956): 68–69; J. Filliozat in L. Renou and J. Filliozat (1953): 157 and 675–676; K. Saha (1985); S.N. Sen (1986): 233–234; V. Sharma (1960); G.P. Srivastava (1954): 91–96 and 137–139; V. Šukla I, 129–132; Vrddhatrayī 166–185; Wintermitz II, 366 and III, 544–545; H.R. Zimmer (1948): 51–52.

See on Hoernle: G.A. Griersons's necrology (JRAS 1919: 114-124).

- 9. The Bower MS was returned by Hoernle to its owner, Colonel Bower, in April 1898; it was purchased, in 1898, by the Bodleian Library in Oxford (see M. Winternitz and A.B. Keith, 1905: *110 sqq.).
- 10 See chapter two of Hoernle's Introduction to his ed. for more details.
- 11 See chapter five of Hoernle's Introduction for details on the date of the writing of the Bower MS. Compare G. Bühler (1891b) and J. Jolly (1913): 365–366. J. Filliozat (L. Renou and J. Filliozat, 1953: 675–676) had his doubts about the accuracy of Hoernle's dating of the MS.
- 12 The fact that the Bower MS was written by different hands was already noticed by Babu Sarat Chandra Das, to whom the MS was made over for deciphering by the Asiatic Society of Bengal in 1890; Babu Sarat Chandra Das failed to make out its contents. G. Bühler (1891) also arrived at the conclusion that the MS was written by different scribes.
- 13 See Hoernle's Intr., 30 and 37. Yasomitra is mentioned at the end of part VI and in line three of part VII. See also K. Watanabe (1907: 263), who argues that Yasomitra is either the name of the one who copied the Mahāmayūrī (in parts VI and VII) or the name of an influential person who made a scribe copy the MS for him.
- 14 See chapters three and four of Hoernle's Intr. for more details about the script and the usages of the scribes.
- 15 See chapter seven of Hoernle's Introduction for more details on language and composition in the treatises of the Bower MS.
- 16 A number of short introductory remarks are in prose (preceding I.50; preceding II.404, 917, 947, 950, 960); three formulae (II.395–395, 715, 784) are probably in prose.
- 17 See the list in Hoernle's Intr., 82-83.
- 18 See Hoernle's Intr., 84, on more details.
- 19 Compare the opening chapter of the Carakasamhitā.
- 20 Metri causa for Hārīta.
- 21 Not mentioned elsewhere in āyurvedic literature. G. Mukhopadhyaya (HIM III, 667) refers

- to Krtasambhava, a medical authority whose name occurs in the Kāśyapasamhitā, as a name possibly related to Śāmbavya. Śāmbavya is the name of a teacher according to MW.
- 22 Kāśirāja appears to be a proper name; it does not mean 'king of Kāśī'. V.N. Pandey (1992: 235) advanced the thesis that Kāśirāja is in all probability identical with Divodāsa Dhanvantari, while Suśruta is Suśruta the Elder, the author of the Suśrutasaṃhitā; he fails to mention that the Suśrutasanthitā does not contain a laśunakalpa.
- 23 Four types of digestive fire are mentioned: sama (regular), viṣama (irregular), manda (slow), and tīksna (very active).
- 24 Bidalaka is the more usual form.
- Visvanadha Sharma (1960) advanced the view that the title Nāvanītaka refers to its author, Navanīta. This improbable interpretation was accepted by V.N. Pandey and A. Pandey (1988: 5; see also V.N. Pandey, 1992: 230). The title Nāvanītaka, which points to the work being an extract from earlier treatises and its being compared to the butter extracted from milk, is repeated at the end of chapters 1, 3, 4, and 8 of part II. The term siddhasaṃkarṣa, used to characterize the work as an extract (saṇkarṣa) of approved (siddha) (formulae), may also be regarded as an alternative title (VN. Pandey and A. Pandey, 1988: 5; VN. Pandey, 1992: 229–230); it precedes the title Nāvanītaka at the end of chapters 3 and 8. G. Bühler (1891b: 304) had already his doubts on the title of the treatise, which was, in his opinion, either Nāvanītaka or Siddhasaṃkarṣa. Compare the views of G. Hāldār (Vṛdhatrayī 165) on the derivation of the word nāvanītaka.
- 26 I.e., astringents, to be used, for example, in diarrhoea.
- 27 Actually seven formulae; the text reads five formulae; two may have been added to the original number of five.
- 28 The last two leaves of this chapter are missing.
- 29 See on these recipes: P.K. Gode (1950c).
- 30 Chapter eleven is incomplete at the end.
- 31 The peacock (mayūra) is the traditional enemy of snakes. Compare the role of the mythic bird Garuḍa, who also affords protection against snakes and their bites (see J.Ph. Vogel, 1972). See on the association of the peacock with youth and immortality and the importance of its flesh for the royal table: A. Chattopadhyay (1993a); H.-P. Schmidt (1980).
- 32 I.61-68: a formula for a purgative in the form of boluses, said to act as a rasāyana and vrsya, and to be curative of all diseases.
- 33 II.217-132: the formula of mahākalyāṇakaghṛta, taught by Ātreya to Agastya; it differs from the formula for this well-known ghṛta in other medical works. II.588-589: the formula of āgastyamodaka; the same formula (agastyamodaka) is found in Vangasena (arśas 147-148). II.905-909: a formula making grey hair turn into hair of a deep dark colour; an almost identical recipe for a rasāyana, not attributed to Agastya, is found at II.768-773.
- 34 See Hoernle's Intr., 64-66; compare Hoernle (1909): 861-868. Contributions of the Aśvins are: II.75-77, mātulungaguṭikā; 80-84, another variety of mātulungaguṭikā; 85-86, gulmacūrna; 96-101, haridrācūrna; 216-222: laśunaka- or laśunādyaghṭta; 223-225, jvaraharaghṭta; 241-244, viṣaharaghṭta; 251-257, bindughṭta; 287-312, amṭtataila, a complicated rasāyana, used by Cyavana and Mārkandeya in order to obtain a long life, free from disease and decrepitude; 418-425, an āśvinayoga against raktapitta, taught by the Aśvins to Vāsava (i.e., Indra), but originally deriving from Brahmā; the same formula, also attributed to the Aśvins, but without the introductory verse, occurs in Soḍhala's Gadanigraha (prayogakhanda, cūrnādhikāra 64-69) and in Vangasena (raktapitta 93-98); 575; 579; 618-625, aśvagandhābasti; 716-737, pippalīvardhamānakalpa (see Hoernle's

- exposition, Intr. 65–66; compare Hoernle, 1909: 864–868); 773–781, an āśvinarasāyana, communicated by the Aśvins to Viśvāmitra, but deriving from Viśvāmitra himself according to the last half-verse (see Hoernle's Intr., 64); 810–813, three gruels, to be used as aphrodisiacs; 917–949, the harītakīkalpa, as expounded by Brahmā to the Aśvins.
- 35 See Hoernle's Intr., 62–63; compare Hoernle (1909): 874–876. I.8: present among the sages in the Himālayas; II.35–37: Iagudacūrna; 71–75: śārdūlacūrna; 108–119: amṛtaprāśa; 127–132: mahākalyāṇakaghṛta, taught by Ātreya to Agastya; 271–276: balātaila; 715: on caution in diet and on sexual abstinence; III.25–36: agnighṛta.
- 36 I.8: present among the sages in the Himālayas; II.802–804: three gruels against diseases caused by deranged vāta, pitta, and kapha; a mantra is added.
- 37 II.225: the āśvinajvaraharaghṛta is esteemed by Brahmā; 241: the dhānvantaraghṛta is esteemed by Brahmā;419: derives originally from Brahmā; II.917–947: the harītakīkalpa, expounded by Brahmā to the Aśvins.
- 38 II.784 (in prose): the bārhaspatya bṛhatkaraṇa makes a person strong and stout.
- 39 II.188-200: Cyavana, when of great age, was restored to youth by the cyavanaprāśa; 287-312: Cyavana regained his youth by the use of the amrtataila.
- 40 II.232-240: dhānvantaraghṛta; 968-974: Dhanvantari expounds the citrakakalpa to Keśava.
- 41 I.8: present among the sages in the Himālayas.
- 42 I.8 (Hārita, metri causa pro Hārīta): present among the sages in the Himālayas.
- 43 II.454-459: the samasaktukaghṛta is highly esteemed by Janakeśvara (i.e., the Creator).
- 44 II.1081: an avaleha against vomiting in children; 1097–1099: a recipe against urodghāta in children. Hoernle regards this Jīvaka as the famous physician of that name, known from Buddhist literature. V.N. Pandey and A. Pandey (1988: 13–14; see also V.N. Pandey, 1992: 235–236) are convinced that the Vṛddhajīvaka of the Kāśyapasaṇihitā is referred to; they claim that the recipes, attributed to Jīvaka, are taken from Khilasthāna 17 and 18 of the Kāśyapasaṃhitā. The Kāśyapasaṃhitā has a separate chapter on uroghātacikitsita, which does not contain Jīvaka's formula. The Jīvaka of the Bower MS is also supposed to be the same as the Jīvaka of the Kāśyapasaṃhitā by Atrideva (ABI 236), G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 170–171), and B.B. Mishra (1969: 97).
- 45 II.935: a purgative formula.
- 46 I.8: present among the sages in the Himālayas.
- 47 I.8: present among the sages in the Himālayas.
- 48 I.9: Suśruta turns to the muni Kāśirāja for information on the properties and uses of garlic.
- 49 II.1010-1040: Kāśyapa's pills against children's diseases. So far none of the recipes has been traced in the Kāśyapasamhitā, also called Viddhajīvakīyatantra. V.N. Pandey and A. Pandey (1988: 14) claim that recipes, attributed to Kāśyapa, are taken from Khilasthāna 17 and 18 of the Kāśyapasamhitā (references are not given; Khilasthāna 17 and 18 are about śotha and śūla in children, while Bower MS II.1010-40 contains recipes against many disorders).
- 50 II.968-976: the citrakakalpa, expounded by Dhanvantari to Keśava, i.e., Visnu.
- 51 III. 10-14: a formula for an oil against skin diseases, was given by Māṇibhadra, out of compassion, to a monk on the point of death. Māṇibhadra, well known in Hindu, Jain, and Buddhist literature, is a yakṣa, famous for his friendly disposition to people in trouble.
- 52 II.312: Mārkandeya obtained a long life by the regular use of amrtataila.

- 53 III.36-53: the formula of siddhārthataila, devised by Nārāyaṇa.
- 54 II.883-884: a powder against timira, highly esteemed by Nimi.
- 55 I.8: present among the sages in the Himālayas.
- 56 II.782: the formula of a brhatkarana (i.e., a rasāyana), appointed by Śaiveśvara; this preparation endows a man with the strength of Visnu and makes an old man young again.
- 57 I.922: when Śakra (i.e., Indra) drank of the amṛta, a drop fell on the earth and became the medicinal plant called harītakī.
- 58 I.8: present among the sages in the Himālayas; not mentioned elsewhere in āyurvedic literature.
- 59 II.633-637: the formula of havuṣābasti, composed by the royal sage Suprabha in āryā verses; this enema (basti) is used for rasāyana and vājīkaraṇa purposes. Suprabha is not mentioned elsewhere in āyurvedic literature; various persons of this name are known (MW; PW).
 the āśvinayoga against raktapitta, taught by the Aśvins
- 60 I.8-9: present among the sages in the Himālayas; he asks Kāśirāja for information on garlic.
- 61 II.329-336: the formula of sahacarataila, ordained by Svayambhū.
- 62 II.846-847: the formula of an aphrodisiac, called indrapriya.
- 63 II.319-324: the formula of mūlakataila, a rasāyana, composed by Vādvali. A Vādbali is referred to in the hitāhitādhyāya of Ugrāditya's Kalyāṇakāraka as one of those w opposed to a non-vegetarian diet. Vādvali is mentioned in the second Vārttika o a y yana to Pānini 6.3.109 (see Hoernle's note to Bower MS II.319-324).
- 64 II.418-425: an āśvinayoga, taught by the Aśvins to Vāsava (i.e., Indra).
- 65 I.8: present among the sages in the Himālayas.
- 66 II.773-781: a rasāyana formula, communicated to Viśvāmitra by the Aśvins, at the end said to derive from Viśvāmitra, and to be highly esteemed by the sages. V.N. Pandey (1992: 236) suggests this Viśvāmitra to be the father of Suśruta.
- 67 P. Cordier (1903b: 341) published a partial list; he communicated all his parallels to Hoernle privately in October 1904 (Hoernle, 1909: 868).
- 68 See J. Jolly (1893) and (1893b).
- 69 These were first discovered by P. Cordier, as acknowledged by Hoernle (Intr. 58, note 91). The Bhelasaṃhitā presents many variants of the readings in the Bower MS.
- 70 See Hoernle's Intr., 58, and Hoernle (1909): 868–871.
- 71 The Bhelasamhitā has only a small part of the formula in the Bower MS (II.329-336).
- 72 Hoernle supposed that this mantra, related to a similar one in the Carakasannhitā (Sū.8.28), got displaced in the Bower MS by some error of the scribe (Hoernle, 1909: 870).
- 73 This discovery is due to P. Cordier (see Hoernle, 1909: 868); P. Cordier mentions two of these recipes (the balātaila and gaṇdamālāyoga) in one of his articles (1903b: 341).
- 74 See Hoernle's Intr., 59; Hoernle (1909): 871-874.
- 75 A picchābasti, different from that in the Bower MS, is described at Ca.Ci.14.224-228.
- 76 Intr., 59-61; Hoernle (1909): 884-885.
- 77 This claim is uncritically repeated, for example, by O.P. Jaggi (IV, 23), P. Kutumbiah (1969, Intr. 33), and V.N. Pandey and A. Pandey (1988: 12).
- 78 See also R.F.G. Müller (1932): 797-798. V.N. Pandey (1992: 235) advances that the ā-mātīsāra prescriptions are not directly quoted from Suśruta, but through Bhela as an intermediary, which proves, in his view, that the Bhelasanihitā is one of the sources of the Uttaratantra. The disagreements between Bhela and Suśruta show that this assertion is hazardous.

- 79 Intr., 59; Hoernle (1909): 884.
- 80 See also R.F.G. Müller (1932): 798.
- 81 P. Cordier (1903b); references are absent from this article.
- 82 See Hoernle's remark in the Emendations to his ed. of the Bower MS. The formula of mahābindughrta, attributed to Kṛṣṇātreya in Niścalakara's Ratnaprabhā (ad Cakradatta, udara 59-62), is indeed closely related.
- 83 See Hoernle's notes, abounding with references to parallels from many medical treatises. A number of formulae of the Nāvanītaka form part of medical treatises which are of a much later date (e.g., Vangasena's Cikitsāsārasamgraha; see Hoernle's notes to I.106–108, 129, 131; II.22, 418–425); they are probably taken from the floating medical tradition.
- 84 See Hoernle's table of formulae to which no parallels were known to him (Intr. 88-91).
- 85 Cakradatta, kustha 97-100: from the Nāvanīta; aršas 120-126: from the Nāvanītaka.
- 86 The verses quoted from the Nāvanīta ad Cakradatta, kāsa 48-49, are identical with Bower MS II.160-161. See also ABI 237 and Vrddhatrayī 167.
- 87 The six quotations from a Nāmanīta in Anantakumāra's Yogaratnasamuccaya cannot be traced in the Nāvanītaka.
- 88 Quoted in Candrata's Yogaratnasamuccaya.
- 89 Nāvanīta: ad Cakradatta, raktapitta 79-81, kāsa 48-49. kuṣṭha 97-100; Nāvanītaka: ad arśas 120-126, vātavyādhi 180-184, kuṣṭha 104-110; Nāvanītakasaṃhitā: ad nāsāroga 29-31; Nāvanītatantra: ad svarabheda 12.

- 92 The Appendix to part V contains, in a tabular form, Hoernle's critical edition of those parts of Garga's work which correspond to the fragments of part V. See also Hoernle's Intr., 92, where he presents a Gujarātī text with English translation on the modus operandi in cubomancy. See on the Pāśakakevalī, its various titles, the manuscripts, editions, etc.: NCC XII, 76–77; CESS A 2, 122–126 and A 5, 84–86. See also NCC V, 48 (Pāśakakeralī by Garga). The work was studied and translated into German by A. Weber (1859); it has been edited at *Kāšī in 1884, at *Madras in 1890, and by *J.E. Schröter (1900). The game with dice called pāśa(ka) is found in several texts, for example: Nīlakahati'a's commentary ad Mahābhārata, Virātaparvan 50.24 (ed. Poona), Śūdraka's Mrcchakatika, and the Vidhurapandita-Jātaka (Nr. 545) (see S. Oleksiw, 1980–81). See on Indian divination: E. Balfour (1967): I, 959–961; G.M. Bolling (1911a); *E. - 94 See the beginning of part VI. The story about the monk Svāti is also found in the Bhai-sajyavastu of the Mūlasarvāstivādin-vinaya (see J.L. Panglung, 1980:66-67); it has a parallel in the Khandhavatta-Jātaka (Nr. 203) and its commentary (see on this Jātaka, its interpretation, and its relationship with the Khandhaparitta: P. Schalk, 1972: 13-21; L.A. Waddell, 1912/13: 163-164). The incident of a monk, bitten by a snake, is also found in the Samyuttanikāya and Anguttaranikāya (see E.M. Hare, 1962:81-82), as discovered by S. von Oldenburg (see G. Bühler, 1893: 271); compare the versions of the tale about Upa-

- 101 A similar introduction occurs at the beginning of the Kalpasthāna of the Hārītasanhitāand the laśunakalpādhyāya of the Kāśyapasanhitā.
- 102 The lasunakalpa hasbeentranslated into German by L. Aschoff (1900), who also collected comparative date on garlic from Greek and Latin literature. J. Jolly (1893) published an article on the lasunakalpa, in which he presented additional material on the subject from Sanskrit medical literature. See also Bhagwan Dash (1978): 169–188.

- 105 The Bower MS states that garlic is called rasūna from the absence of the salty taste in it, whereas many other treatises say that the acid taste is absent. See Hoernle's notes for more details on the differences between the Bower MS and other medical texts.

- 117 Compare the parallel at A.h.U.16.3cd-5ab, where respectively vāta, pitta and rakta together, and kapha are mentioned.
- 118 Compare anupāna, the type of drink required in combination with a particular drug.
- 119 Hoernle interprets l\u00e4va rasa as an infusion, prepared from lava, which is either l\u00e4maijaka or lavanga; lava and l\u00e4va are synonyms of lavanga (a clove), for example in Gang\u00e4dhara's Gandhas\u00e4ra.
- 120 This term also occurs in the Bhelasamhitā (Ci.4.91) and Aṣṭāngasaṇgraha (Sū.21.1; see Indu). See on unmardana: A.D. Satpute (1989): 232.
- 121 A mole according to Hoernle. The term 1bhīl occurs in the Cakradatta (kṣudraroga 61-62), where Śivadāsasena explains s eing t e same as jaṭula. Abhīlu, jaṭula, jaṭumaṇi, and piplu are synonyms (Amarakoṣa 2.6.49; Gayadāsa ad Su.Ni.13.41; Madhukoṣa ad Mādhavanidāna 55.35; Śivadāsasena ad Cakradatta, kṣudraroga 58-60). Suṣruta's description of jaṭumaṇi (Su.Ni.13.41) does not tally with the characteristics of a pigmented mole, because a jaṭumaṇi is reddish, which rather points to a haemangiomatous naevus.
- 122 An unknown disease or a corrupt reading.
- 123 Hoernle's translations are confusing; at II.334 he renders alāsaka as tympanitis, which is probably right because the term occurs in a series of vāta diseases (this means that it is used in the sense of alasaka); at II.748 the correct reading is, as noticed by Hoernle, vātabalāsaka (not vātam alāsaka-), rightly translated as persistent low fever; the Sanskrit Index, however, gives glossitis, an inflammation of the tongue, for alāsaka (alāsa is a disease of the tongue in the Susrutasaṃhitā: Ni.16.38).
- 124 The meaning of the term is not clear; Hoernle translated it as lesion (of the eye); his Sanskrit Index gives: incised, operated on (for cataract).
- 125 Hoernle regards it as an apoplectic convulsion; apatantraka cannot be translated adequately in western medical terminology; it is a convulsive disorder that has some traits in common with epilepsy (see Ca.Si.).
- 126 Grah at II.1037; a female graha, Pūtanā, is relerred to as attacking children (II.1036). A long series of grahas is enumerated in the Mahāmā yūrī (part VI of the Bower MS).

- 127 Hoernle translated the term by: a man suffering from sterility caused by jealousy. Probably the term means the same as Suśruta's īrṣyaka (Su.Śā.2.40-41), designating a man who is only potent after looking at the intercourse of another couple.
- 128 Hypertrophy of the tonsils according to Hoernle, a tumour on the palate according to MW; kacchapikā or kacchapī is a type of boil occurring in patients with prameha (Ca.Sū.17. 85; Su.Ni.6.16); it is also a kṣudraroga (Su.Ni.13.8). Kacchaparoga may, moreover, be a synonym of kūrmaroga.
- 129 A woman bearing only one child.
- 131 Reading uncertain or unknown disease.
- Hoernle says in his note that khaḍa is not mentioned in any dictionary; he takes it to be synonyrnous with khallī and to be acute gout or some other kind of rheumatic complaint; in his Sanskrit index he adds that it is possibly the same as khaṭaka (= kubjiṭapāṇi), a crooked hand. Khaḍa may be the vāta disease located in the ankles (khaḍuka), which is called vātakaṇṭaka (see, for example, Su.Ni.1.79 and the comments by Gayadāsa and Dalhaṇa; see also Ca.Ci.28.73 and Cakrapāṇidatta's comment on the term khuḍavātaṭā, Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 22.61cd-62ab), or it may be vātarakta, which is also called khuḍa because it affects the ankles (Cakrapāṇidatta ad Ca.Ci.29.11; A.h.Ni.16.4; A.s.Ni.16.5; Kaiyadevanighaṇṭu, miśraka 285). Khallī is yet another vāta disease, different from khuḍa (see Ca.Sū.14.23 and 28.21, Ci.28.57; Su.Ni.1.75; Śrīkaṇṭhadatta ad Siddhayoga6.61), and regarded as identical with viśvācī (Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 22.57cd-58ab).
- 133 See the note on khada.
- 134 Hoernle interprets it as an exanthematic skin disease. The famous definition of kotha by Bhāluki (see, for example, Cakrapāṇidatta ad Ca.C. 3.108) points to urticaria.
- 135 The Bower MS mentions seven sthānas (translated by Hoernle as grounds) of mahākṣaya; Hoernle interprets them as the seven elements of the body (dhātu) and supposes mahākṣaya to be the same as rājayakṣman. Mahākṣaya, however, more probably designates decrease of the elements of the body, a group of disorders that differs from rājayakṣman (see, e.g., Ca.Sū.17.64-69).
- 136 The puzzling number of thirty-six (reading practically certain according to Hoernle) kuşthas is mentioned, although their number is always eighteen in āyurvedic literature. Hoernle tended to identify them with the kṣudrarogas, which are thirty-six in number in Vāgbhaṭa's works (A.h.U.31.33; A.s.U.36.34); this rather improbable solution (the number of the kṣudrarogas varies considerably in āyurvedic treatises) was rejected by J. Jolly (1899: 380; 1913: 367), who proposed to solve the puzzle by assuming that the eighteen kuṣṭhas and eighteen śūkadoṣas were meant; Hoernle was not averse to Jolly's solution in his revised translation. The Bower MS appears to refer to eighteen kuṣṭhas in some mutilated verses of part III (12–13), as rightly pointed out by Jolly (1913: 367).
- 137 Interpreted as acute diarrhoea. More probably, nirvāhikā is a synonym of pravāhikā (see Paryāyaṣaṇaṇājā 1400. nirvāhī = suvāhikā), which is a chronic type of diarrhoea. Compare pravāhikā.
- 138 Rendered as blear-eye; see pilla.

- 139 A woman suffering from parisrava, probably menormagia. Parisrava or parisrava is also a complication (vyāpad), due to improper application of emetics and purgatives (Ca.Si.6; Su.Ci.34; A.h.Ka.3).
- 140 Rendered by lippitudo, i.e., blearedness. Pilla is a synonym of the disease of the eyelids called aklinnavartman; according to some it is the same as klinnavartman (Dalhana ad Su.U.3.21-22; Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 59.88-89). G.D. Singhal and K.R. Sharma (1976: 35) regard (a)klinnavartman as conjunctivitis (i.e., blear-eye). Pilla also designates a rather large group of eye diseases (see A.h.U.16).
- 141 Probably the same as pilpu or piplu (see abhīlu).
- 142 Interpreted as (hysteric) convulsions by Hoernle. A disease of this name, related to apatantraka and apatānaka, is mentioned in the Hārītasamhitā (III.20.21-22ab).
- 143 Interpreted by Hoernle as dysenteria. Compare nirvāhikā. See on pravāhikā: G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 618–619.
- 144 A small type of gulma (abdominal tumour) according to Hoernle.
- 145 Spasms in the chest according to Hoernle. Urodghāta is a children's disease in the Bower MS. It is probably related to the children's disease called uroghāta in the Kāśyapasaṃhitā (uroghātacikitsitādhyāya), thought to be similar to the uraḥkṣata of the Carakasaṃhitā (see Satyapāla's commentary on the Kāśyapasaṃhitā). The term uroghāta occurs in the Suśrutasaṃhitā (U.24.12) as a symptom of raktaja pratiśyāya; it is characterized as a specific disorder in Dalhaṇa's commentary and in the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 58. 23cd-24.
- 146 Obstruction or spasm in the chest according to Hoernle.
- 147 Hoernle translates this term as the pressure of air upwards. Ūrdhvavāta is either regarded as a symptom or as a distinct disorder. See on ūrdhvavāta, for example: Cakrapāņidatta ad CaSū.23.29; Dalhaņa ad Su.Ci.1.13; Kusumāvalī ad Siddhayoga 1 cikisā 34.90
- 148 Interpreted by Hoernle as paraplegia, or paralysis spinalis of the lower part. More probably, it is the same as the well-known disease called ūrustambha (see, for example, Su.Ci. 5.31-33ab). Ūruskambha is a term already found in the Maitrāyaṇīsaṃhitā (1.10.14) (see K. Hoffmann, 1986).
- 149 Interpreted by Hoernle as scrotal enlargement or hernia (i.e., the same as vrddhi); it may indeed be identical with vrddhi, but may also designate bradhna of the Carakasanhitā (Ci. 12.94–95) or vardhma of the Siddhayoga (40.20–23).
- 150 See P. Ray (1956: 68-69) on chemistry in the Bower Manuscript. M. Eliade (1960: 278) remarks that the use of mercury is attested in the Bower MS according to Hoernle; he refers to the refutation of this interpretation of the term rasa by R.F.G. Müller and E.O. von Lipmann (1931: 179; compare von Lipmann, 1919: 434); Eliade probably refers to an early version of Hoernle's translation, corrected by him later (see Bower MS II.297 and its translation in vol. I, 107).
- 151 Regarded as the same as abhītaparnī by Hoernle and identified as Asparagus racemosus Willd. (= śatāvarī); one of the names of this plant is abhīru(pattrī) in the Carakasamhitā and other treatises (compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 185).
- 152 Compare abhīruparnī.
- 153 An unidentified type of alcoholic drink, mentioned in a series of these fluids, or a false reading according to Hoernle.
- 154 An inferior type of Acacia catechu Willd. according to Hoernle.

- 155 Probably a variant of amlātaka, but the same as amlavetasa according to Hoernle, who identifies the latter as Rumex vesicarius Linn. (compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1413). Various identifications of amlavetasa, met with in the Carakasaṃhitā, etc., have been proposed in the secondary literature.
- 156 Identified as Ichnocarpus frutescens R.Br. (= sārivā) by Hoernle. See Dhanvantarinighaṇṭu 1.162: a sārivā with black roots (krsnamūlī).
- 157 Identified as Pinus roxburghii Sarg. = P. longifolia Roxb. (= sarala) by Hoernle. The Dhanvantarinighantu (3.78) records cidā as a synonym of sarala. Cīdā is also regarded as the name of P. gerardiana Wall. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1286).
- 158 Hoernle identifies this tree as Oroxylum indicum Vent. (= śyonāka).
- 159 Tentatively identified as Eleusine coracana Gaertn. by Hoernle. Compare Caraka's garmūtī, which is, however, a grain.
- 160 Hoernle identifies grāha as Marsilea quadrifolia Linn. (absent from Hooker and WIRM), one of the plants regarded as sunişannaka (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1076).
- 161 Identified as Abrus precatorius Linn. (= guñjā) by Hoernle.
- 162 A fragrant plant of unknown identity according to Hoernle, who refers to another fragrant plant, called sthauneyaka. Clerodendrum infortunatum Linn. is called both harita and sthauneyaka (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 442), but the leaves of this shrub have a disagreeable odour (see WIRM II, 232).
- 163 Hoernle identifies this grass as Cymbopogon jwarancusa (Jones) Schult. = Andropogon jwarancusa Jones = Andropogon laniger Duthie, non Desf. (= lāmajjaka; see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 548). The Dhanvantarinighantu (3.86) mentions iṣṭakāpathaka as a synonym of lāmajjaka.
- 164 Generally identified as Hibiscus rosa-sinensis Linn.
- 165 The same as dhyāmaka, a fragrant grass, according to Hoernle. Dhyāmaka is found in the Carakasanihitā, etc., and identified as either a species of Cymbopogon or Valeriana (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 552 and 1675).
- 166 Identified as Lannea coromandelica (Houtt.) Merr. = Odina wodier Roxb. (= jinginī) by Hoernle (compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 994).
- 167 Kāla is one of the names of a variety of citraka in the Rā janighantu (6.127). Hoernle identifies it as Cassia sophera Linn. (= kāsamarda).
- 168 Mentioned in the Madanapālanighanţu. Hoernle identifies keyūra as Pavonia odorata Willd.
- 169 Hoernle regards this plant as an inferior type of śālaparnī.
- 170 Identified as Nardostachys grandiflora DC. = N. jatamansi DC. (see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) (= māṛṇṣī) by Hoernle.
- 171 Identified as Moringa oleifera Lam. = M. pterygosperma Gaertn. (= śigru) by Hoernle.
- 172 Identified as Phragmites karka (Retz.) Trin. ex Steud. (= nala) by Hoernle.
- 173 The same as nada according to Hoernle.
- 174 Hoernle regards this plant as identical with pāṭhā. Prācīnā is a synonym of pāṭhā in the Dhanvantarinighanṭu (1.70).
- 175 Identified as Terminalia alata Heyne ex Roth = T. tomentosa Wight et Arn. by Hoernle.
- 176 Identified as Rosa alba Linn. by Hoernle (compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997: Nr. 1401).
- 177 Alum slate from Surat according to Hoernle.
- 178 An example is the māyūraghṛta (II.177-181), which contains veśavāra of peacock's flesh as an ingredient. See also, for example, I.32; II.814, 828, 837, 844.

- 179 I.23-26.
- 180 The Kumbhāndas are a class of demons. Compare the related Kūṣmānda, one of the grahas mentioned in Vāgbhata's works (A.h.U.4; A.s.U.7) and the Śārngadharasamhitā. See on the Kumbhāndas, called grul-bum in Tibetan: R. De Nebesky-Wojkowitz (1993): 309.
- 181 Unmāda, chāyāgraha, apasmāra, and ostāraka are classified as grahas, which makes a total of twenty-one. Hoernle remarks (in Appendix I to part VI) that a similar list is given in the Mahāvyutpatti; the list found there (see Csoma de Körös, 1982: 174) differs, however, considerably.
- 182 A chāyāgraha is unknown in āyurvedic literature, but a change in one's natural chāyā is an ariṣṭa, i.e., a sign foreboding death (see, e.g., Ca.I.7).
- 183 Hoernle considered this word to be a misspelling for dustāraka, which might mean 'the evil eye'; this emendation is, however, unnecessary. See on Ostārakī: M.-Th. de Mallmann, 1975: 282.
- 184 Hoernle was of the opinion that this term is the same as khārkhoda, mentioned in the Rā jataranginī as a magical performance for the purpose of procuring the death of an enemy. This rare word occurs in the Weber MSS (kakkhorda) (see Hoernle's note; see also G. Bühler, 1893: 271), and, according to Hoernle, in Ca.Ci.23 (see Ca.Ci.23.250, where Cakrapāṇidatta gives the synonym khurkhuraka for jharjharaka, a rattle). Compare the graha called Kākhorda (A.s.U.7).
- 185 Compare the graha called Aukirana (A.h.U.4) or Maukirana (A.s.U.7).
- 186 The fevers rnentioned are called ekāhika, dvetīyaka, traitīyaka, cāturthaka, saptāhika, ard-hamāsika, māsika, sakmmauhūrtika, nitya, viṣama, bhūta, mānuṣa, amānuṣaja, and doṣaja.
- 187 Vrddhatrayī 172.
- 188 Vrddhatrayī 165-171.
- 189 See chapter five of his Introduction to the edition. Earlier, he assigned the MS to the middle of the fifth century (Hoernle, 1891b). G. Bühler (1891b: 309) reached the conclusion that the Bower MS must be placed in the period A.D. 400-500.
- 190 J. Filliozat in L. Renou and J. Filliozat (1953): 157 and 675-676.
- 191 The scribes used dots to indicate lacunas in the original (see Hoernle's Intr., 43; Hoernle, 1909: 858-859); part IV has an interlinear remark, adding a phrase which had inadvertently been omitted.
- 192 Glosses are found after II.879 and 929; 1109 appears to be a gloss too (see Hoernle's Intr., 40)
- 193 V.N. Pandey (1992: 235) is of the opinion that the author of the Nāvanītaka utilized Suśruta's work before it was redacted by Nāgārjuna; his only argument, the absence of any mention of Nāgārjuna, is very weak, because the association of Nāgārjuna with the Uttaratantra is a late tradition.
- 194 Hoernle (1909). Later authors often agree with Hoernle in accepting the samhitās of Bhela, Caraka and Suśruta as sources for parts I–III of the Bower MS (see, e.g., ABI 106; A.B. Keith, 1973: 509; P. Kutumbiah, 1969; V.N. 1954).

- 196 Intr., 59-61; Hoernle (1909): 884-885.
- 197 See also R.F.G. Müller (1932): 797-798.
- 198 R.F.G. Müller (1932: 809-810) also collected arguments against borrowing from the Carakasamhitā. A.B. Keith (1973: 509) asserted that the absence of Caraka's name is no evidence against use of the Carakasamhitā, which is certain, for Ātreya ranked as the teacher of Caraka (sic!), and the pupil, therefore, was covered by the teacher's name. V.N. Pandey (1992: 235–238) claims that the absence of Caraka's name leads to the conclusion that he was not yet popular; in his view, it follows from this that the author of the Nāvanītaka utilized the Agnivešatantra not long after the period in which Caraka revised it; this makes V.N. Pandey conclude that the texts of the Bower MS were written for the use of hospitals during or after the reign of Aśoka, in the second century B.C.

Chapter 2 Bhelasamhitā

- 1 CC I, 416; III, 90. Check-list Nr. 143.
- 2 This MS was described first by A.C. Burnell (1880): 63–65 (Nr. 10,773). Its number was changed into 11085 in P.P.S. Sastri's Catalogue (1933: 7410–7411). The MS is written in Telugu script, dates from about A.D. 1650 according to Burnell, and is still in a fairly good condition according to P.P.S. Sastri (this is confirmed by a recent microfilm of the MS). Th. Aufrecht (CC I, 416) recorded a second MS that belonged to Paṇḍit Rādhākṛṣṇa of Lahore, but it is no longer traceable and has apparently disappeared (G. Śukla's upodghāta to edition b, Sūramcandra I, 211). The Check-list (Nr. 143) mentions a MS available at the Manuscripts Library, Trivandrum (T 1446); this MS is said to be a copy on paper of the Taniore MS (BDHM 1, 3, 1963, 132).
- 3 Two copies, made at the request of P. Cordier, form part of the Collection Cordier of the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris (J. Filliozat, Liste Nrs. 1182: in Nāgarī, and 1183: in Telugu script; Nr. 1184 is a transcription in Roman characters, made by Cordier). A.F.R. Hoernle obtained a copy in Telugu script in 1905 (see A.F.R. Hoernle, 1978: 38); copies are also available at the India Office in London (see A.B. Keith, 1935: 739–740: Nr. 6224; compare CC III, 90 and R.S. Singh's Intr. to ed. c, 3) and the Wellcome Institute for the History of Medicine in London (a copy in Nāgarī, made by M.R. Ācārya in 1920, according to a personal communication from Dr. D. Wujastyk). Jādavji Trikamjī had a copy at his disposal (see the upodghāta to his ed. of the Carakasarnhitā, 4); finally, two copies have been available in Calcutta (see next note). The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram records a MS of a Bhedatantra (Nr. 951).

4 Editions:

- a The Bhela Samhita; Sanskrit text; University of Calcutta, Journal of the Dept. of Letters, Calcutta University Press, 1921. The (Prefatory) Note by Asutosh Mooker jee implies that this edition was based on two copies of the Tanjore MS, made by two different scribes at different periods of time. Vedantabisharad Ananta Krishna Shastri is responsible for the emendations.
- b Bhelasamhitā; saṃskartā Śrīgirijādayāluśukla, Vidyābhavan Āyurveda Granthamālā 25, Vārāṇasī 1959. This edition has an upodghāta in Sanskrit by Girijādayālu Śukla, who remarks (9–10) that he corrected the errors in the printed text of edition a by help of the copies of the Tanjore MS that were used in producing a, which explains that the readings of a and b are sometimes slightly different. The emendations vary at many places and are usually better than those of edition a, because Vedantabisharad Ananta Krishna Shastri had no expert knowledge of āyurveda (see upodghāta, 9).
- c Bhelasamhitā (maharṣipunarvasorātreyasyāntevāsinā bhelācāryeṇa praṇītā), editors: V.S. Venkaṭasubrahmaṇyaśāstrī and C. Rājarājeśvaraśarmā, C.C.R.I.M.H/Pub. 31, New Delhi 1977; Introduction by R.S. Singh, piastāvanā (in Sanskrit) by V.S. Venkaṭasubrahmaṇyaśāstrī. This edition, based on the Tanjore MS, is more complete than the previous ones, in which some portions of the MS were omitted; these portions are listed in Appendix A. Appendix B compares the readings of the MS with their substitutions in edition b; Appendix C contains new emendations; Appendix D compares faulty readings in the earlier editions, previous emendations, and the fresh emendations suggested by the editors of edition c. Numerous, sometimes extensive, footnotes, presenting passages from other samhitās which are related to those of Bhela, quotations from Bhela found in various medical texts, and an elaborate vocabulary enhance the value of this edition.

References are to edition c.

See on the editions: C.R.R. Sarma and B. Rama Rao (1980). The unsatisfacory editorial policies of a, b and c make a new study a major desideratum (see on the preparation of a new critical edition: T. Yamashita, 1997). A few chapters of the Bhelasaṃhitā have been translated into European languages. Sūtrasthāna 16 has been edited and translated into French by J. Filliozat (1975: 170–173; English version, 1964: 205–207); it was translated into German by R.F.G. Müller (1962). An English translation (probably by D.V. Subba Reddy), based on ed. b, of Sū.8–9 and 12–13, Ni.5–6, Śā.4 and Ci.1 has been published in BDHM 1, 3, 1963, 138–155. M.G. Weiss (1977: 252–253 and 254–258) rendered Ni.7 and Ci.8 into English.

- 5 H. Lüders (1927).
- 6 The site was described by A. von Le Coq (1909): 1048–1049. See also H. Lüders (1926): 194.
- 7 The ardhaśloka with the number of chapters of the Śārīrasthāna is unintelligible and has been emended.
- 8 The order of the chapters has been rearranged in edition c.
- 9 One of the verses even occurs twice in ed. c: Ni.8.3 and 8 are identical.
- 10 B.M. Barua (1936/37) was convinced that the archaic style of the prose portions is of the same type as that met with in the older Dharmasūtras, the Arthaśāstra, etc. He also supposed that the whole of the Bhelasaṃhitā had originally been in prose and was versified partiallly later.
- 11 See on this subject Jyotir Mitra (1972); this study was obviously based on the text of ed. b.
- 12 Bhela and Bheda are closely related variants of the same name. R.S. Singh (Intr. to ed. c, 8) suggests that there may be a connection between Bhela/Bheda and the Bhedā Brahmins, who inhabit the Śekhāvadi area; this group of Brahmins counts many vaidyas with the surname Bhedā.
- 13 Bhela's name follows immediately after that of Agniveśa, the foremost among Ātreya's disciples, in the enumeration of the Carakasanhitā (Sū.1.31).
- 14 Ca.Sū.1.30-33.
- 15 The Carakasamhitā calls these works a tantra, not a samhitā. See also A.h.Sū.1.3-4ab.
- Atreya is also called Punarvasu in the Carakasamhitā.
- 17 The Carakasaṇihitā (Sū.13.100) refers to Ātreya as Cāndrabhāgin. Ātreya is supposed to have lived on the summit of the Candrabhāga mountain or on the banks of the Candrabhāgī river (Vṛddhatrayī 74), i.e., the Chenab in the Pañjāb (N.N. Bhattacharyya, 1991: 104; Nando Lal Dey, 1979: 47; MW). P.V. Sharma (AVI 79) claims that Candrabhāgā was the name of Ātreya's mother. See: Ātreya.
- 18 See: Kṛṣṇātreya.
- 19 See: Nagnajit.
- 20 Otherwise unknown in Sanskrit medical literature.

- 21 Suśrotar Medhāvin is not mentioned in other sources. He has, without any compelling reason, been identified with Suśruta by P. Cordier (1901a: 79-80), Hariprapanna (Intr. to his Rasayogasāgara, 70-71), and A.F.R. Hoernle (1909: 883). One of the authors not accepting this identity is Süramcandra (1978: 256). Suśruta is nowhere mentioned as being instructed by Ātreya in āyurvedic literature; both are members of a group of sages in the Bower MS (Part I).
- 22 Compare Ca.Sū.26, which mentions more names; Maitreya is absent on this occasion in the Carakasamhitā, while Khandakāpya is replaced by Bhadrakāpya.
- 23 The theory accepting two tastes distinguishes sātmya and asātmya in the Bhelasaṃhitā, chedanīya and upaśamanīya in the Carakasaṃhitā; the Bhelasaṃhitā mentions three tastes in relation with three sthānas, the Carakasaṃhitā refers to chedanīya, upaśamanīya and sādhāraṇa; the theory of the four tastes distinguishes svādu, asvādu, mrdu, and amrdu in the Bhelasaṃhitā, whereas the Carakasaṃhitā has svādu and hita, svādu and ahita, asvādu and hita, asvādu and ahita.
- 24 See Ca.Śā.6.21 and Su.Śā.3.32.
- 25 The Bhelasamhitā mentions, apart from Ātreya, the following authorities: Badiśa, Śaunaka, Khandakāpya, Parāśara, Bharadvāja, and Kāśyapa; the Carakasamhitā refers to the views of Badiśa, Bhadraśaunaka, Bhadrakāpya, Kānkāyana, and Kumāraśiras Bharadvāja.
- 26 The Carakasaṃhitā does not mention the view, represented by Kāśyapa in the Bhelasaṇhitā, that the eye is the first organ to develop in the embryo.
- 27 Ātreya rejects (Bhadra)śaunaka's view on the four pillars of treatment (catuṣpād). Bhadra-śaunaka's place is taken by Maitreya in the Carakasaṃhitā (Sū.10).
- 28 Bharadvāja disagrees with Ātreya on the aggregate of factors productive of an embryo; a similar account is found in the Carakasamhitā (Śā.3).
- 29 The Bhelasamhitā contains a short discussion on the position of the foetus in the womb (Śā.4.32); Śaunaka presents the view that the head is turned upwards, whereas Bharadvāja maintains that it is turned downwards; Ātreya rejects both opinions, declaring that the foetus lies transversely. Compare Ca.Śā.6.22, which, without presenting divergent views, contains Ātreya's statement that the foetus is turned, with its head upwards, towards the back of the mother.
- 30 Saunaka disagrees with Atreya on the dietary rules for a pregnant woman.
- 31 Bhela discusses in this chapter dantadhāvana, kavaladhārana, abhyanga, añjana, and dhūmapāna, subjects dealt with in the mātrāśitīya chapter (Sū.5) of the Carakasanhitā.
- 32 Chapter 28 (bhojanavidhīya) deals with the same matter as Ca.Sū.27.
- 33 The subjects of chapter ten of the Bhelasannhitā are discussed in chapters two of the Vimānasthāna and chapter fifteen of the Cikitsāsthāna of the Carakasannhitā; the subjects of chapter eighteen are dealt with in chapter twenty-three of Caraka's Cikitsāsthāna.
- 34 H. Lüders (1927).
- 35 Cf. Bhela Sū.25.
- 36 Chapter seven of Bhela's Indriyasthāna is very close to chapter four of Caraka's Indriyasthāna.
- 37 The preserved parts of the Bhelasannhitā contain a chapter on udara (Ci.13), but no chapter on pāruļuroga. Plīhan and halīmaka are also dealt with in one chapter of the Kāśyapasannhitā
- 38 The treatment of ardita, a vata disease, is described in the same chapter.
- 39 This disease is repeatedly mentioned and said to be of four types (Sū.26.4-5).

- 40 Hikkā and śvāsa are said to be of five types (Sū.26.2-3).
- 41 Five varieties of chardi are distinguished (Sū.26.2-3 and 15-16).
- 42 Merbid thirst (tṛṣṇā) is called pipāsā in the Bhelasaṃhitā, four varieties are described (Sū. 26.5 and 23).
- 43 The annaraksīya chapter of the Bhelasamhitā (Sū.18) is concerned with poisoning (viṣa).
- 44 Twenty yonidosas are referred to (Sü.26.7).
- 45 The lists of Bhela and Caraka agree only partially as to the diseases mentioned and the number of their varieties.
- 46 Bhela is sometimes confused with Bhāluki (see Gaṇanātha Sena, 1924: 18-19; HIM III, 529-533).

- 95 Absent from Ca.Sū.7.
- 96 Mentioned at Ca.Sū.7.20-21 and 24.
- 97 Bhela prescribes one āmalaka preceding the meal, one harītakī after the meal, one vibhītakī during the digestion. Compare Ca.Ci.1³.41: two vibhītakas preceding a meal, four āmalakas after the meal, one harītakī during the digestion. The difference between Bhela and Caraka may be based on their disagreeing views on the properties of vibhītaka, described as increasing pitta and kapha by Bhela (Sū.8.22), but pacifying them by Caraka (Sū.27.148). See AVI 125–126 on this subject.

- 98 Cf. Ca.Śā.1.29.
- 99 Compare Bhela Sū.11.6-8ab and Ca.Sū.28.9-11a.
- 100 Compare Bhela Sū.11.8cd-14ab and Ca.Sū.28.116-19.

- 102 Ca.Sti.28.20-22.
- 103 Cf. Ca.Sū.26.80-83.
- 104 The same subject is dealt with at the end of the Cikitsāsthāna of the Carakasamhitā, in the Suśrutasamhitā (Sü.45.21) and Kāśyapasamhitā (Khila 25).
- 105 This disease has been interpreted as plague (P.S. Aṃśumān, 1994; AVI 126; Girijādayāluśukla's upodghāta to ed. b). The editors of ed. c regard both batālikā and agnirohiṇī as bubonic plague (granthikajvara). P.S. Aṃśumān shares their conviction that batālikā and agnirohiṇī are one and the same disease. A disease with a related name, biḍālikā, is also mentioned in the Bhelasaṃhitā (Ci.4.86; Si.2.2), but it is not clear whether it is the same as batālikā or a different disorder. The biḍālikā of the Carakasaṃhitā (Ci.12.76) and the kaṇṭhaviḍālikā of the Bower MS (II.42) are not identical with Bhela's batālikā. The Bhelasaṃhitā does not describe agnirohiṇī orreferto it; it is acquainted with rohiṇikā (Sū.
 26.24), which differs from biḍālikā (see Si.2.2). Compare the interpretation of agnirohiṇī as plague (see Su.Ni.13.19-20).
- 106 Compare Śā.7.3, which presents a second list of the ten prāṇāyatanas, also disagreeing with Caraka.
- 107 The types described are samkarasveda, prastaraveda, seka, nādīsveda, dronisveda, jalasveda, udakoṣṭhasveda, and kuṭisveda.
- 108 Prstharoga is a disorder caused by vāta in the Carakasamhitā (Ci.28.27).
- 109 Prstharoga is also referred to at Sū.21.4.
- 110 These diseases of the lens of the eye are not described in the Carakasamhitā. Suśruta distinguishes six colours in linganāśa (U.7.26cd-27).
- 111 Caraka (Ci.26.132-133) and Suśruta (Ni. 13.33-34 and 37) regard these disorders as of one type and caused by samnipāta.
- 112 Caraka does not describe arbuda; Suśruta recognizes six varieties (Ni.11.14cd-15ab).
- 113 Caraka distinguishes four types of mukharoga (Sū.19.3; Ci.26.119-123).
- 114 Bhagandara isnot described in the Carakasamhitā; Suśruta (Ni.4.3) distinguishes the same types as Bhela.
- 115 Cf. Ca.Ci.12.81; Su.Ni.11.3.
- Caraka does not describe these diseases, affecting all parts of the eyes (sarvākṣiroga); Suśruta distinguishes five varieties; Bhela's sāmnipātika types are replaced by raktaja varieties in the Suśrutasamhitā.
- 117 Caraka's types (Sū.19.4) are very close to those of Bhela.
- 118 Caraka (Sū.19.4) also has four types.
- 119 The Carakasamhitā does not describe upadamisa. Suśruta (Ni.12.9) distinguishes five varieties, brought about by vāta, pitta, kapha, samnipāta, and rakta. Bhela's four varieties arise from pūya, mūtra, śukla, and samdhāna.
- 120 Caraka does not describe the eye disease called āsrāva; Suśruta (U.2.6-7) distinguishes five varieties by adding a pitta type to those mentioned by Bhela.

- 121 Bhela distinguishes four doșic types, caused by văta, pitta, kapha, and saṃnipăta. The Carakasaṇnitā has five varieties, arising from vāta, pitta, āma, kṣaya, and upasarga (Sti. 19.4 and Ci.22.12–17).
- 122 The nature of Bhela's rohiṇikā, also called raktarohiṇikā (Sū.26.5), is not clear. The Carakasaṇṇhitā (Sū.18.34–36) describes rohiṇī as a swelling of the throat, without distinguishing the doṣic varieties of Bhela. Suśruta regards the kṣudraroga called agnirohiṇī as caused by saṇṇṇipāta (Ni.13.19–20). Dalhaṇa (ad Su.Ni.13.19–20) and Śrīkaṇṭhadatta (ad Mādhavanidāna 55.16–17) allude to doṣic varieties.
- 123 Bhela describes arman twice (Sū.26.25 and 29cd-30ab); the first description makes mention of four varieties: māṃsārman, medo'rman, prastāryarman and snāyvarman, the second distinguishes seven types: vātaja, pittaja, kaphaja, māṃsaja, medoja, snāyuja, and sirāja. The list at the beginning of the chapter refers to seven varieties (Sū.26.7). The Carakasarphitā does not describe arman. The Suśrutasaṃhitā (U.4.4-6ab) has five types: prastāryarman, śuklārman, lohitārman, adhimāṃsaja, and snāyvarman.
- 124 The three types arising from medas, snāyu and māṇisa are unknown from other sources. Three disorders called alajī are mentioned in the Suśrutasaṇhitā: a pramehapiḍakā (Ni.6.18), a type of śūkadoṣa (Ni.14.7), and an eye disease (U.2.8). A kṣudraroga, called andhālajī in the Suśrutasaṇhitā (Ni.13.6), may be the same as the kṣudraroga alajī of the Carakasaṇhitā (Ci.12.88). The pramehapiḍakā called alajī is also described in the Carakasamhitā (Sū.17.88).
- 125 Caraka regards vidradhi as one of the pramehapidakās and distinguishes two varieties (Sū. 17.90). The Suśrutasanhitā (Ni.9) describes nine types. Bhela mentions three doşic varieties.
- 126 These seven types of sātmya are also mentioned in the Carakasaṇhitā (Vi.1.20). Bhela gives a definition of sātmya at Vi.3.19.
- 127 The seven types are not specified. Caraka mentions ślīpada as arising from corruption of māṃsa, kapha and asra (= rakta) (Ci.12.98); Suśruta distinguishes three doṣic varieties (Ni.12.10-11).
- 128 The larger part of the names of these parasites differ from those found in the Carakasaṃhitā and other sources (see G.J. Meulenbeld, 1974: 291–292).
- 129 The first category is referred to in the Carakasamhitā as bījadoṣaja (Ci.6.57) and in the Suśrutasamhitā as sahaja or mātṛpitṛbījadoṣakṛta (Ci.11.3). The Suśrutasamhitā recognizes a second category, called apathyanimitta. Karman is not mentioned as a cause of prameha in the Caraka- and Suśrutasamhitā.
- 130 The Suśrutasamhitā describes unmāda caused by poisoning (U.62.12-13).
- 31 See Ci 8 13-16
- 132 The chapter on the treatment of epilepsy gives an entirely different description (Ci.9.2-4).
- 133 Cf. Bhela Sā.4.29.
- 134 The Carakasamhitā connects it with pitta (Vi.6.12).
- 135 This type of pāka is usually called avasthāvipāka of prapāka (compare Ca.Ci.15.9-11). See G.J. Meulenbeld (1987): 9-11.

- 139 This subject is not discussed in the Carakasamhitā.
- 140 These descriptions are absent from the Carakasamhitā.

- 141 This distinction is otherwise unknown.
- 142 These verses are quoted in the Bhāvaprakāśa (gloss ad I.3.123, said to be quoted from the Rasapradīpa) and in Todara's Āyurvedasaukhya (II: 4.11-14, said to derive from Bhāluki). They also form, adapted to the context, part of Pālakāpya's Hastyāyurveda (II.65, p.315). Compare the somamandala of the Kubjikāmatatantra, where it is located within the sūryamandala (see D. Heilijgers-Seelen, 1994; see index).
- 143 Quoted in the Bhāvaprakāśa (gloss ad I.3.123, said to be quoted from the Rasapradīpa), Śivatattvaratnākara (VI.21.40-41), Todara's Āyurvedasaukhya (II: 4.15-16ab: said to be from the Yogapradīpa), and Pālakāpya's Hastyāyurveda (II.65; p.315). The size of the fire is said to be that of a yava in sturdily built, that of a truţi in slightly built persons. See on truti as a unit of time: S. Srinivasan (1979): 122, 160-161.

- 146 Cf. Bhela Ni.8.13.
- 147 The same classification, also found at Sã. 4.4, is known from the Carakasamhitā (Sã. 3.16), Suśrutasamhitā (Sū.1.30), and non-medical works.
- 148 B.M. Barua (1936/37) suggested that the term kāya is used here in the same sense as nikāya (aggregate) in Buddhist literature. Terms corresponding to those of the Bhelasaṃhitā (pṛthivīkāya, etc.) are found in the Dīghanikāya (Sāmañña-phala-sutta 23, where Ajito Kesa-kambalī exposes his views; see T.W. Rhys Davids and J.E. Carpenter, 1949: 55) according to B.M. Barua (1936/37: 193).

- 178 The Carakasaṃhitā (Ci.3.311cd-312cd) prescribes the recitation of the Viṣṇusahasranāmastotra
- 179 These exorcists are mentioned as a separate class, for example, in the Jātakas and other Pali texts, where they appear as bhūtavejjas (see: R. Fick, 1974: 153; T.W. Rhys Davids and W. Stede, 1972).
- 180 I.e., fierce rituals
- 181 The symptoms are called rūpa (Ci.4.7ab) and upadrava (Ci.7.94ab). Caraka mentions eleven symptoms (Ci.8.14-19); the Suśrutasanhitā agrees with the Bhelasanhitā in distinguishing forms with six and eleven symptoms (U.41.11-15).
- 182 The Kāśyapasaṇhitā (kuṣṭhacikitsita, p.116) distinguishes the same groups, composed of the same members (carınadala replaces carmakuṣṭha). Three varieties of kuṣṭha, mentioned by Caraka, are absent from Bhela's two series, namely alasaka, carmadala and visphoṭaka; they are replaced by sthūlāru, śvitra and viṣaja. Śvitra holds an ambiguous position in the Carakasaṇhitā (see Ci.7.173-176). The Nidāna chapter on kuṣṭha of the Bhelasaṃhitā makes mention of three doṣic groups of kuṣṭha; sidhma, dadru and maṇ�ala arise from kapha, puṇḍañka, ṛṣyajihva, kākaṇa and audumbara arise from pitta, kapāla kuṣṭha arises from vāṭa.
- 183 Ikşumeha is said to arise from kapha and pitta (Ci.7.9) or kapha (Ni.6.10-11). The corresponding ikşuvālikārasameha of the Carakasaṃhitā (Ni.4.10) is caused by kapha.
- 184 Udakameha is one of the varieties caused by kapha (Ni.6.7-8), as in the Carakasamhitā (Ni.4.10).
- 185 Sāndrameha is caused by a combination of kapha and pitta (Ni.6.11cd-13); the Carakasamhitā (Ni.4.10) regards it as arising from kapha.
- Bhasmameha is not described in the Carakasaṃhitā, nor in the Suśrutasaṃhitā. Bhela refers to bhasmavarnamehana at Sū.11.14, where it is said to be caused by a disorder of the semen. Bhela's bhasmameha may be identical with Caraka's kṣārameha according to P.V. Sharma (AVI 127). An objection to this view is the presence of kṣārameha in Bhela's list.
- 187 Lavanameha is said to arise from kapha and pitta (Ni.6.11cd-12). It is absent from the Carakasamhitā, but is described in the Suśrutasamhitā (Ni.6.10) as caused by kapha.
- 188 Nīlameha arises from pitta (Ci.7.25), as in the Carakasamhitā (Ni.4.25).
- 189 The chapter on prameha of the Nidānasthāna (Ni.6) adds piṣṭameha and surāmeha. Madhumeha, sarpirmeha and vasāmeha are elsewhere referred to (madhumeha: Sū.8.17, I.5.8 and 9.12; sarpirmeha: I.3.6; vasāmeha: I.3.6).
- 190 The manas is located between palate and skull, the citta in the heart (Bhela Ci.8.2cd-4).
- 191 See, for example, Ci.2.37 (bhūtagrahas are referred to).
- 192 Exorcists (bhūtavaidya) are described in a Telugutext, Ayyalarāju Nārāyanāmātya's Hamsavimsati (see P. Hymavathi, 1993: 168, 275).
- 193 This use of the term mada is also found in the Suśrutasamhitā (U.62.5). The Carakasamhitā regards mada as a separate disease, distinct from unmāda (Sū.24).

- 194 Cf. Ni.8.13; Śā.4.29.
- 195 The Carakasamhitā (Ci.19.5) describes it as belonging to the vāta type.

- 197 Vilambikā is not described in the Carakasaɪnhitā; the Suśrutasaṃhitā is acquainted with this disorder (U.56.9).
- 198 Not mentioned in the Carakasamhitā.
- 199 This variety is not known from other sources.
- 200 See on the types of udara: G.J. Meulenbeld (1991): 94-95.
- 201 This term is not employed in the Carakasamhitā. Bhela's dūsyodara is closely related to Suśruta's dūsyudara, caused by the combined action of all three dosas (Ni.7.11cd-14a).
- 202 Cempare the udakodara of Caraka (Ci.13.45–49 and 175cd) and dakodara of Susruta (Ni. 7.21b–23).
- 203 Kṣatodara, also called chidrodara, is described in the Carakasannhitā (Ci.13.42-44); the Suśrutasannhitā calls it āgantuka, kṣatodara and parisrāvyudara (Ni.7.17-19a).
- 204 This type is called baddhaguda in the Caraka- (Ci. 13.39-41) and Suśrutasamhitā (Ni.7. 14b-16ab).
- 205 Described in the Caraka- (Ci.13.35-38) and Suśrutasamhitā (Ni.7.14b-16ab).
- 206 Cf. Ca.Ci.21.35-39.
- 207 Caraka's chapter on the treatment of śvayathu (= śotha or śopha; Ci.12) describes three dosic varieties only.
- 208 Kāmalā is not separately described in the Bhelasamhitā; it is repeatedly referred to as kāmalā or kāmilā (Ci.2.15; 4.84; 13.33: halīma, kāmilā and pāndu; 16.60; 17.43; Ka.6.10).
- 209 Cf. Ca.Si.9.70cd-87.
- 210 Cf. Ca.Ci.26.124-128.
- 211 Described as a local swelling in the Carakasamhitā (Sū.18.20). The treatment of the other diseases of the throat, those of the eyes, nose and oral cavity are not dealt with in the preserved parts of the Bhelasamhitā. Incidentally mentioned are, for example, dantacāla (Si.2.14), dantapuppuṭaka (Si.2.3), mukhacāla (Si.2.16), mukhapāka (Sū.25.24; Ci.4.85), naktāndhya (Ci.4.85), netraniṣyanda (I.4.2), pratiśyāya (Sū.6.36 and 50; 13.15; 21.2; 23.3; I.6.4; Ci.4 4; Si.2.2), pūtinasya (Ci.4.86), and tālukavidradhi (Si.2.3).
- 212 Cf. Ca,Sū.21.55-59.
- 213 Cf. Ca.Sū.24.35-41. Bhela calls mūrchā once mūrchāya (Sū.11.13), as Caraka does.
- 214 One of the disorders mentioned is vardhma (Ci.24.1); see also Ci.5.36 and 45.

- 219 Surgeons (salyakartar) are also mentioned at Ci.12.3; 13.36 and 38; 16.64.
- 220 Cf. Ca.Ci.24.89-97.
- Pănājīrria, described in the Suśrutasamhitā (U.47.20cd-21ab), is absent from the Caraka-samhitā. Another specific disorder, called pānavibhrama, also described in the Suśruta-samhitā (U.47.21cd-22ab), is referred to in the Bhelasamhitā (Ci.28.34). The disorders caused by alcoholism, called dhvamsaka and vikṣaya, described in the Carakasamhitā (Ci. 24.199-205), are not mentioned in the Bhelasamhitā.

- 286 Bower MS II.8 2: bhelī yavāgū. These gruels do not occur in the *Bhelasarnhit*ā, but it may be of some relevance that it mentions eight types of gruels (Sū.17.6). The mantra of the Bower MS (II.803–804), to be recited after taking a bhelī yavāgū, forms part of the *Bhelasarnhiti*i (Sū.7.16–17); see on this mantra the Bower MS.

Physicians who are devoted to Rudra are referred to (Ci.1.51). P. Cordier (1903b: 325–236) already noticed the Śaiva tendencies of the Blelasamhitā.
- 302 P.V. Sharma places the Bhelasanhitā in the seventh century. A.F.R. Hoernle (1909) supposed it to be older than the Nāvanītaka of the Bower MS. J. Filliozat (L. Renou and J. Filliozat, 1953: 151) expressed as his opinion that the Bhelasanhitā might be older than the Carakasamhitā. Other views regarding its chronological position are: synchronous with the period of early Buddhism (B.M. Barua, 1936/37); sixth century B.C. (ABI 179); earlier than the period of the Buddha (Jyotir Mitra, 1974: XIX); several centuries before the birth of Christ (V. Śukla I, 59); belonging to the period of the Brāhmaṇas (R.C. Majumdar, 1971: 222); earlier than the period of the Āraṇyakas and Brāhmaṇas (S.V. Sharma, 1963); belonging to the same period as Ātreya (R. Śarmā, 1959; Süramcandra I, 209).

Chapter 3 Kāśyapasaṃhitā

- 1 NCC IV, 148.
- 2 Haraprasād Śāstrī (1901): *9 and *(1905): Preface. P. Cordier (1903b: 322-323 and 343-344) examined this MS, reproduced it photographically, and corrected some of H. Śāstrī's remarks about it. The MS could not be retrieved in Nepal by Pandit Hemrāj Śarmā (see Hemarājaśarman 14), but a hand-written copy, a photocopy, and a transcription with notes by P. Cordier are available at the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris (J. Filliozat, Liste Nrs. 22-24). P. Cordier (1903b: 323) discovered that five verses of the text in this MS are very close to or even identical with verses found in Ca.Sū. 1.
- 3 P. Cordier (1903b: 322-323) recorded that it contains only the bhaişajyopakramaņīya chapter, i.e., Khilasthāna 3.
- 4 Hemrāj Śarmā acquired it in 1938 (see R. Śāstrī, 1977: 430); he did not indicate where and when he discovered the MS, which he described in the upodghāta (14) to his edition; he mentions that the MS, about 700-800 years old in his estimate, was written by two different scribes.

- 7 Rcīka is known from the Mahābhārata (Vanaparvan 115; Śāntiparvan 49; Anuśāsanaparvan 4 and 56; ed. Poona), Rāmāyaṇa, Bhāgavatapurāṇa (9.15), Garuḍapurāṇa (139.6), Kālikāpurāṇa (see A.M. Shastri, 1965), and the Viṣṇupurāṇa (4.7). He appears as the interlocutor in the Niḥśvāsatattvasaṇḥitā (T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta, 1981: 34). Rcīka was a descendant of Bhṛgu, which explains that his son Jīvaka is called Bhārgava and that the Kāśyapasaṇḥitā is also known as the Bhārgavīya Saṇḥitā. Rcīka and his wife Satyavatī had two sons, Jamadagni and Jīvaka. Rcīka is referred to as Rcaka by G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 171). See on Rcīka: Dowson; R.P. Goldman (1977); Hemarājaśarman 20; Hopkins; J. Mitchiner (1982): 90–91; J. Panda (1984): 96–101; R. Śarmā (1959: 73); R. Śāstrī (1977): 446–447; A.M. Shastri (1965); V.S. Sukthankar (1936): 22–25; Vettam Mani.
- 8 Kanakhala is the name of a tīrtha in the neighbourhood of Hardvār (or Haridvāra); it is mentioned in the Mahābhārata, many Purāṇas, and Kālidāsa's Meghadūta (52). See on Kanakhala and Hardvār: S.C. Banerji (1991): 261–262; N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 169; E. Brucker (1980): 94, 128–129, 135; W. Crooke (1913a); N. Gangādvāra, i.e., Hardvār, is referred to in the Kāśyapasarphitā (174) as a place where Kaśyapa instructed Vṛddhajīvaka. Other tīrthas, also called Kanakhala, are mentioned by S.C. Banerji (1991: 261–262), S. Saxena (1995: 619–620), and U. Thakur (1978: 110).
- 9 The beneficent character of the yakṣa Anāyāsa maybe seen as reminiscent of Buddhism or Jainism, though malicious yakṣas are not unknown in the Kāṣyapasaṃhitā. The Mahāmāyūrī, a Buddhist text that forms part of the Paūcarakṣā, makes mention of Anāyāsa as one of the two protectors of the city of Kauṣāmbī (see S. Lévi, 1915, and the English translations of his article by *V.S. Agrawala, 1942, and *P.C. Bagchi, 1947; compare Hemarājaśarman 23, R.N. Misra, 1981: 167–171, A. Roṣu, 1986: 224–225, R. Śāstrī, 1977: 448–452. The Mahāmāyūrī was edited and translated by D.C. Sircar, 1971/72. See also Parts VI and VII of the Bower MS.

- 11 Mārīca, Marīci and Mārīci Kāśyapa figure in the Carakasamhitā. Mārīci Kāśyapa is associated with Vāryovida in the Carakasamhitā, as Kaśyapa is in the Kāśyapasamhitā.
- 12 Many laudatory epithets are given to Kaśyapa: mahābhāga (33; Sū.25.5), lokavṛddhapa (33; Sū.25.5), mahātapas (142), sūryavaiśvānaradyuti (183), lokapūjita (194), purāṇarṣi, jvalanārkatulya, tapoda, ācāranidhi (202), sarvaśāstrajña, sarvalokaguru (227; Si.9.3), vedavedāṅgapāraga (234; Khila 2.3), brahmarṣi and lokakartar (240; Khila 3.3); he is more than once described as hutāgnihotra (174; 202; 213; 324), a term applied to Ātreya in the Carakasamhitā.
- 13 Bhārgava Pramati is not known from other sources.
- 14 Vāryovida, called a king in the Kāśyapasaṃhitā, has no title on this occasion. See: Vāryovida.

- 21 Vṛddhajīvaka is not represented here as the pupil of Kaśyapa, but as a medical authority with his own opinions. The Carakasamhitā never credits Agniveśa with views that disagree with those of his teacher, Ātreya.

- 23 Not otherwise known from āyurvedic literature. Several Māţharas are known in Sanskrit literature (see Hopkins and Vettam Mani).

- 25 Not otherwise known from āyurvedic literature, apart from the mention of a Kautsī digest of an extensive medical work, originally revealed by Brahmā to Atri (see Hārītasaṃhitā). Several persons bearing the name Kutsa or Kautsa appear in Sanskrit literature (J. Gonda, 1977; A.A. Macdonell and A.B. Keith, 1967; Vettam Mani).
- 26 See: Kāśyapa.
- 27 See: Janaka.
- 28 It is remarkable that Vātsya himself, who revised the original Vṛddhajīvakatantra, takes part in this discussion and is contradicted by Kaśyapa.

- 48 The title of the chapter (karṇāyajayāvaṣṭhīvana) is not clear; Satyapāla supposed it to deal with the evil eye (dṛṣṭidoṣa), because the last verse, the single one extant, refers to avekṣitajagada (i.e., a disease caused by glancing at) and to its treatment by means of worshipping the tithis (a tithi is a lunar day), nakṣatras and the deities (see Satyapāla's Hindī commentary).

- 70 See on this chapter: P. Tivārī (1989): 698-708. Four types of wet-nurse are mentioned in Buddhist literature (Avadānaśataka, Divyāvadāna, Lalitavistara, Mahāvyutpatti): ankadhātrī (who takes the child in her lap and takes care of its body by massage, etc.), maladhātrī (who cleans the child after the passing of urine and faeces and washes the dirty linen), kṣīra- or stanadhātrī (who breastfeeds the child), and krīḍanikā(dhātrī) (who makes the child play with toys). See C. Chaturvedi (1992): 350; F. Edgerton (1977). Five types of dhāī (= dhātrī) are described in Jain literature (see K.R. The visesakalpa chapter (225) refers to the sūtikopakrama chapter of the Khilasthāna; one of the Khilasthāna chapters (5.3) mentions the rasavimāna chapter.

- 100 Rituals mentioned are mārutī iṣṭi, sthālīpāka, and prājāpatya iṣṭi.
- 101 These types are called sāmudga, samvrta, vivrta, and sampad.
- 102 This subject, not dealt with in the Carakasamhitā, is discussed in the Suśrutasamhitā (Sū. 16).
- 103 See the Hindī commentary. Cf. Ca.Sū.13.14-17.
- 104 Cf. Ca.Sū.13.22.
- 105 See on Kāśyapa's types of sveda: A. Kumar (1994): 148–150. A type called paṭasveda is mentioned in Siddhisthāna 3 (156). The Carakasaṃhitā describes thirteen types of agnisveda and ten types of anagnisveda (Sū.14.39–40 and 64–65ab).
- 106 The term kathora refers to hard objects.
- 107 The Carakasamhitā appears to distinguish four varieties, associated with vāta, pitta, kapha, and with rasa and other constituents of the body (Ci.15.42-49), but it may also be that it considers ajīrņa to be essentially of one type. The Suśrutasamhitā describes four types, called āma, vidagdha, viṣṭabdha and rasaśeṣa (Sū.46.502-503), but differs from the Kā-

- śyapasamhitā in regarding the first three types as caused by vāta, pitta and kapha respectively.
- 108 Not mentioned elsewhere as a distinct disease.
- 109 The Carakasamhitā regards visūcikā and alasaka as the two varieties of āmapradoṣa (Vi. 2.20).
- 110 Absentfromthelist in the Kāśyapasamhitā are: akṣibheda, dantabheda, lalāṭabheda, kha-ñjatva, manyāstambha, pāruṣya, sarvāngaroga, and tamas; added are: anilagraha, glāni, pratiśyāya, sāndhya, śrama, śvāsa, vandhyātva, and vātakanṭaka.

- 115 See on this passage: S.K. Mishra (1992): 311.
- 116 The Kāśyapasamhitā mentions that a pupil should present his guru with havişyaudana as a dakṣiṇā and should touch his guru's arms (57), details not found in the corresponding chapter of the Carakasamhitā (Vi.8).
- 117 Compare the version of the Carakasamhitā, which intercalates Prajāpati between Brahmā and the Aśvins; Kaśyapa, Vasiṣtha and Bhṛgu are mentioned in the Carakasamhitā, but Atri is absent there and replaced by Ātreya.
- 118 Another reference to Jainism is probably found in the Kalpasthāna (185), where a particular compound medicine, the pāñcabhautikataila, is said to be recommended by all the Tīrthakaras. See on Jain terms in the Revatīkalpa: V.N. Pandey (1992): 234.
- 119 See about the types of samhanana in Jain literature: H. von Glasenapp (1964): 170-171; W. Schubring (1962): 142-143. The term samhanana occurs in the Carakasamhitā (Vi. 8.16; Śā. 8.32).
- 120 Nārāya and addhanārāya are the names of two types of samghayana (= samghaṭana) in Jain canonical texts; their Sanskrit equivalents are nārāca and ardhanārāca according to H. von Glasenapp.
- 121 The term palyopama indicates a very high number in Jain texts (see K.R. Chandra, 1970: 316).
- 122 Cf. Ca.Śā. l; Su.Śā. l.
- 123 The number of kandarās is fourteen in the Kāśyapasamhitā, sixteen in the Suśrutasamhitā (Śā.5.11); the number of kūrcas is forty-two in the Kāśyapasamhitā, six in the Suśrutasamhitā (Śā.5.13).

The Bengali kāvya called Şaşthī mangal is devoted to the goddess (see P.K. Maity, 1988: 311). A şaşthīkalpa, a ritual to be performed on the sixth day of a lunar fortnight (compare Pakṣaṣaṣthī), is described in the Mānavagṛhyasūtra (2.13; see M.J. Dresden, 1941: 154–157). Cf. A.h.U. 121
- 148. Pūtanā is more than once referred to in the Kāśyapasaṃhitā (see, for example, 166 and 170).
- 149 Kaţapūtanā is mentioned in Gunacandrasūri's Mahāvīracariya as Kaḍapūyanā; she obstructed Mahāvīra's austerities (see U.P. Shah, 1952/53: 36).
- 150 The same six types are listed in the Carakasarnhitā (Sū.19.4); Suśruta distinguishes thirteen varieties (U.55).
- 151 This disorder is referred to in the Carakasaṃhitā (Ci.28.29), but not described separately. See on ānāha: Su.Sū.26.10; Sū.45.178ab; 46.220; Ni. 1.24; U.56.20cd–21ab.
- 152 The same numbers are found in the Carakasaṃhitā (Ci.8.38cd-47) and Suśrutasaṃhitā (U. 41.11-15).
- 153 These two dosas are pitta and kapha in the Kāśyapasamhitā, vāta and kapha in the Carakasamhitā.
- 154 See A. Kumar (1994): 272-273.
- 155 The Kāśyapasaṃhitā distinguishes doṣic varieties, supplemented by a type arising from blood; the eight types of the Carakasaṃhitā (Ci.26.32-44) are said to arise from vāta, pitta, kapha, saṃnipāta, rakta, aśmarī, śarkarā, and śukra; the Suśrutasaṃhitā (U.59) recognizes

- the following eight types: due to vāta, pitta, kapha, saṃnipāta, abhighāta, purīṣa, aśmatī, and śarkarā.
- 156 See on this chapter: A. Kumar (1994): 265-268.
- 157 Caraka's list (Ci.25.39cd-43) has thirty-six items; the one found in the Suśrutasamhitā (Ci. 1.8) consists of sixty items.
- 158 These pidakās are described as complications of prameha in the Caraka- and Suśrutasam-hitā. Caraka (Sū.17.78–89) describes seven types, the same as those of the Kāśyapasam-hitā, with the exception of arumsikā; Caraka does not distinguish doṣic groups. The Su-śrutasamhitā (Ni.6.14–19) also omits arumsikā, but adds three new types: putrinī, masūrikā, and vidānkā. Arumsikā is one of the kṣudrarogas in the Suśrutasamhitā (Ni.13.36).
- 159 The author of the Hindī commentary on the Kāśyapasamhitā regards arakīlikā as identical with carmakīla, a wart (see oncarmakīla: Su.Ni.2.18–20 and 13.45ab). Compare A. Kumar (1994): 262.
- 160 See A. Kumar (1994): 263.
- 161 See on Mahäsena and Višākha: J.N. Banerjea (1956): 144–146; A.K. Chatterjee (1970); S. Chattopadhyaya (1955): 94–95; J.F. Fleet (1877): 27, (1878): 162, (1884): 137; Hopkins; N.P. Joshi (1986): 24; S.S. Rana (1995); A.M. Shastri (1996): I, 150–152; Vettam Mani. Skanda was, under the name Mahäsena, the tutelary deity of the early Kadambas and the early Cālukyas (A.M. Shastri, 1996: I, 151); Skanda, Mahāsena and Višākha are three different deities on coins issued by Huvişka (S. Sharma, 1990: 161; A.M. Shastri, 1996: I, 151). Višākha is mentioned in the Sušrutasanihitā and by Vāgbhaṭa. He is associated with Skanda and sometimes regarded as one of his aspects. His worship is already referred to in the Mahābhāṣya ad Pāṇini 5.3.99 (H. Bakker, 1986: 42; A.M. Shastri, 1996: I, 151; S.S. Rana, 1995: 20–21, 51–52), where he is different from Skanda (S. Sen, 1968: 679); Skanda and Višākha are also separately mentioned in the Bṛhatsanhitā (45.11; 47. 26). He is Skanda's brother in the dhūrtakalpa of the Atharvavedapariśiṣta(see on the ritual, called dhūrtakalpa, S.S. Rana, 1995: 14–16); the Mahābhārata (Vanaparvan 227.17; ed. Poona) describes him as a son of Skanda. Later, Skanda and Višākha are usually regarded as identical (see, for instance, Amarakoṣa 1.1.39–40).
- 162 Uroghāta is also mentioned as a disorder related to pratisyāya or pīnasa in the vedanādhyāya (36; Sū.25.38). The term is absent from the Carakasanhitā. The Suśrutasanhitā (U.24.12) is acquainted with uroghāta as a symptom of rakta ja pratisyāya. A definition of uroghāta is found in Dalhana's commentary (ad Su.U.24.12) and the Madhukośa (ad Mādhavanidāna 58.23cd-24). The author of the Hindī commentary on the Kāśyapasanhitā equates uroghāta with uraḥkṣata, which appears to be unjustified. Urodghāta is a term occurring in the Bower MS (II.1099).
- 163 The Carakasannhitā (Ci.12.11-14) describes three dosic types, the Suśrutasannhitā (Ci.22. 3) four dosic types and a type brought about by poison.
- 164 The formula of vidangaghṛta is found in Vṛnda's Siddhayoga (7.10−12) and many later works.
- 165 Pānavibhrama, absent from the Carakasamhitā, is described in the Suśrutasamhitā (U.47. 21-22). Pānāpakrama, unknown from other treatises, comprises psychotic states caused by sudden abstinence.
- 166 The same four dosic types are described in the Caraka- (Ci.24.88-100) and Suśrutasamhitā (U.47.18-19ab).
- 167 Atrideva (ABI 209) equated phakka with rickets, which is a hazardous interpretation. See on rickets in India: N. Chevers (1886): 381–383. See on the history of rickets: E.H. Ack-

A Jātahārī is one of the thirty-two female deities of the somamandala in the Kub jikāmatatantra (see D.Heilijgers-Seelen, 1994: 155 and 257).
- 190 The scum of boiled rice or any other kind of grain.
- 191 The names of the samnipāta fevers described are vidhu, phalgu (215), yāmya, krakaca, pākala (216), and kūṭapākala (217). The descriptions of the samnipāta fevers, as found in the Kāśyapasamhitā, are partly quoted in the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 2.18-23, where they are said to derive from the Bhālukitantra. See G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 104-105 and 165-167. One or more series of thirteen samnipāta fevers are described in many treatises, for example, the Bhāvaprakāśa, Jvaranirnaya, Jvaratimirabhāskara, Jvaratriśatī, Parahitasamhitā, and Yogaratnākara.

- 195 The Carakasamhitā (Sū.4.7) distinguishes five types: svarasa, kalka, śrta, śīta, phāṇṭa; the Kāśyapasamhitā adds cūrņa and abhiṣava; Cakrapāṇidatta (ad Ca.Sū.4.7) subsumes cūrņa under kalka.
- 196 These periods of time are similar to those mentioned in the Suśrutasamhitā (U.64.65-83); the subject is not dealt with in the Carakasamhitā.
- 197 See A. Kumar (1994): 138-143.
- 198 The two groups are those with an astringent and sweet or an astringent and sour taste.
- 199 The three groups are kṛta (with salt and condiments added), akṛta (without salt and condiments), and akṛtakṛta. These three subdue pitta, kapha and vāta respectively. The Carakasaṃhitā (see Si.1.11cd-12ab and Cakṛtapāṇi's commentary) distinguishes kṛta-and akṛtayūṣas. The Suśrutasaṃhitā (Sū.46.366cd-381ab) describes a series of soups which are partly similar to those of the Kāśyapasaṃhitā.

- 225 Other medical treatises do not distinguish dosic varieties of carmadala.
- 226 See on the use of the term amlapitta Mādhava's Rogaviniścaya.
- 227 The Mādhavanidāna describes an upwards and a downwards moving type; the Hārītasanihitā regards amlapitta as a disease without subdivisions.
- 228 The Carakasaṃhitā describes three types of śvayathu (= śotha), caused by one of the three doṣas (Ci.12.12-14), and a large number of local varieties (Sū.18 and Ci.12). The Su-śrutasaṃhitā (Ci.23.3) distinguishes five types: by vāta, pitta, kapha, saṇnipāta, and poison (viṣa); elsewhere (Su.Sū.17.4) it mentions a type caused by blood and one of traumatic origin.
- 229 The Suśrutasaṃhitā deals with śūla in its chapter on the treatment of gulma (U.42), where it is in the first place regarded as a complication of gulma, and secondly as an autonomous disease. The Mādhavanidāna has a separate chapter (26) on śūla.
- 230 The Suśrutasamhită (U.42.82-87) describes varieties caused by văta, pitta, kapha, and samnipăta; it adds a variety by āmavāta (U.42.123cd-125). The Kāśyapasamhitā does not mention treatments for specific types of śūla, as the Suśrutasamhitā does.

- 234 The geographical names mentioned in these two chapters have elaborately been discussed by U.P. Shah (1958). See also ABI 266; Hemarājaśarman 68-70; Yogeścandra Miśra (1980). Compare Ca.Ci.30.315-319, Su.Sū.45.21, and the janapadavibhaktīya chapter of the Bhelasamhitā (Sū.13).
- 235 The author of the Hindī commentary regards this disease as identical with dhanuḥstambha (tetanus).
- Probably the same as hanugraha (see Ca.Ci.28.49–50ab; Su.Ni.I.53cd; Mādhavanidāna 22.49–50).
- 237 Compare Caraka's kakṣā (Ci. 12.91ab).
- 238 The author of the Hindī commentary regards it as a possession syndrome (graharoga).
- 239 An eye disease according to the Hindī commentary.

- 240 The same as anclavridhi; the term is also found in the Carakasamhitā (Sū.14.22) and Su-śrutasamhitā (Sū.23.16 and 33.4-5ab).

- 298 Possibly pasted sandal (P.V. Tewari).
- 299 Absent from P.V. Tewari's list.
- 300 Unidentified.
- 301 Tentatively identified as Ipomoea maxima (Linn.f.) G. Don (P.V. Tewari). Vṛṣaparṛī is identified as Merremia gangetica (Linn.) Cufo. = M. emarginata (Burm.f.) Hallier f. = Ipomoea reniformis (Roxb.) Choisy (see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1096).
- 302 The same as āragvadha (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 303 Unidentified.
- 304 A synonym of sarjarasa (P.V. Sharma, 1997) or vata (P.V. Tewari).
- 305 Possibly a leafy vegetable (P.V. Tewari).
- 306 The opening verses of some chapters indicate that Kaśyapa did not always instruct Vr-ddhajīvaka individually; Vrddhajīvaka is the one who puts questions and to whom the answers are directed, but he is on some occasions surrounded by fellow pupils (see, for example, the beginning of Sū.25), while, on the other hand, Kaśyapa delivers his speeches in the company of other sages (see the beginning of the jvaracikitsita chapter and Khila 15).
- 307 See Kasyapa and Kāsyapa.
- 308 The Carakasamhitā mentions a Mārīci Kaśyapa.
- 309 Prajāpati Kaśyapa is well known in Vedic and later Indian literature (see, for example: Dowson, Hopkins).

- 312 See B. Nanjio (1980): Appendix II, 450-452, Nr. 159. Nanjio mentions that Dharmadeva, who changed his name into Fâ-hhien in A.D. 982, was originally a śramana of the Nālanda monastery in Magadha; he translated forty-six works into Chinese in the period A.D. 973-981, and seventy-two more between A.D. 982 and 1001.

- 315 See the parisista of Hemarājasarman's upodghāta to ed. b, 118-120. The relevant verses do not only occur in those parts of the Kāṣyapasaṃhitā which are old or at least based on an earlier version, but in the Khilasthāna as well.
- 316 Hemarājaśarman 14–20. R. Śarmā (1959): 67. R. Śāstrī (1977): 468. Jyotir Mitra (1974: XIX) claims that the Kāśyapasamhitā was present in its original shape before the birth of Buddha. R.C. Majumdar (1971: 227) regards the Kāśyapasamhitā as not much later than the Bhelasamhitā. P.V. Tewari (Intr., XIII, to ed. d; 1997: 41) suggests, tentatively, that Mārīci Kaśyapa of the Carakasamhitā may be the Kaśyapa of the Kaśyapasamhitā.
- 317 P.V. Tewari (Intr. to ed. d, XXXIII; 1997: 157) expressed a similar view.

- 320 Surgery is referred to as belonging to another school (paratantra) in the Kāśyapasaṃhitā (dvivraṇīya 5).
- See: Jīvaka. An interesting tale, that may throw some light on the confusion of Jīvaka and Vṛddhajīvaka, is found in the Avadānaśataka (see L. Feer, 1979: 374–383). Avadāna Nr. 92 (X.2) relates that Jīvaka performed an operation on the deceased wife of a wealthy śreṣṭhin in Rājagṛha; he opened her right side with a sharp instrument and extracted a child, which, although being the first one conceived, remained in the womb for many years, even after the births of several other children, a condition that had led to the death of the mother, the child that saw the light proved to look like an old man, full of wrinkles and gray-haired; this newborn one addressed all those present with a speech exhorting them to revere their parents, teachers and gurus, in order to avoid a similar fate, namely a sojourn of sixty years between small and large intestines; the being was called Sthavira, became a Buddhist monk, and reached the state of an Arhat later in life. A parallel of this story is found in the Kalpa www adānamālā (NCC III, 234).
- 322 AVI 139.
- 323 P. Cordier (190 la: $2) regarded the Kāśyapa of the Kāśyapasaṃhitā as identical with the authority of this name found in the Bhela- and Carakasaṃhitā, the suggested that the Kāśyapasaṃhitā might date from a period not far removed in time from the middle of the sixth century B.C. P.V. Sharma (AVI 151) expressed as his opinion that the original version of the work may date from the period of the Buddha; the references to both Kāśyapa and Jīvaka in the Bower MS indicate in his view that the Kāśyapasaṃhitā was well known at the time of composition of the Nāvanītaka. P.V. Sharma mentioned the fifth or sixth century B.C. as the period of composition of the original Kāśyapasaṃhitā in a later article (1992h: 226). P.V. Tewari (Intr. to ed d, XXXIII; 1997: 157) expressed as her opinion that a (Vṛddha)kaśyapa or (Vṛddha)kāśyapa, a contemporary of Agniveśa or even Punarvasu, wrote some treatise that did not become popular; this text was rewritten by Vṛddhajīvaka in the Gupta period, almost in the same time that saw the compilation of the Aṣṭāṅgasaṃgraha; Vṛddhajīvaka deified Kaśyapa to give authenticity to his composition.

- 335 P.V. Sharma (AVI 144) is of the opinion that the references to Vrddhajīvaka as sthavira (e.g., 142) point to Buddhist influence; it may, however, well be that sthavira is only a synonym of viddha, since Vrddhajīvaka is sometimes called Sthavirajīvaka (e.g., 183). P.V. Sharma (AVI 147) also points to the term ṣaṭkośa as being of Buddhist origin (74; garbhāvakrānti 10: some consider the body to be ṣaṭkośa); this term is, however, also current in, forexample, Sāṇkbya philosophical (see E. Frauwallner, 1953: 364) and Tantric works (see D. Heilijgers-Seelen, 1994: 66).

Pandey, 1988: Il and 14), first to fourth centuries A.D. (B.B. Mishra, 1969:97), third century (ABI 208), A.D. 300-400 (U.P. Shah, 1952/53: 34-35, and 1958: 276 and 299), the Gupta period (ABI 206-207 and 491; Jaggi IV, 20), and the later Gupta or post-Gupta period (AVI 149-150 and P.V. Sharma, 1992h: 227: sixth or seventh century; P.V. Tewari, Intr., XXXIII, to ed. d and 1997: 158: post-Gupta period, almost contemporary with the Mādhavanidāna).

Chapter 4 Hārītasaṃhitā

1 CC I, 765: a supplement to the Atreyasamhitā. Check-list Nrs. 324 (Hārītasamhitā) and 325 (Hārītottarasamhitā). J. Filliozat, Liste Nr. 9: Ātrevasamhitā (or Hārītasamhitā); A. Raison (1974: Intr. XI) mentions that the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris possesses copies of two Bikaner MSS, made at the request of P. Cordier, one incomplete, the other complete. Bodleian d.716(4); see D. Wujastyk (1990): 96. Cat. Bikaner Nr. 1398: catalogued as Hārītaśāstra, the colophon calls it Ātreyabhāsita Hārītottara; the MS, described as containing the Śārīrasthāna only, is complete, but has no parišistādhyāya (A. Raison, 1974: Intr. XIII). CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 83: catalogued as Cikitsāśāstrasamgraha by Hārīta (?); this MS contains the Hārītasamhitā, as attested by the introductory verses and by the colonbons. calling the work Ātreyabhāṣita Hārītottara; Th. Aufrecht (CC II, 9 and 38) recorded it as the Cikitsāśāstrasameraha by Ātreva. Cat. IO Nr. 2648: title Ātrevasamhitā; the last colophon (of III.56) calls the work Atrevabhāsita Hārītottara and Atrevasamhitā (compare on this MS: F.R. Dietz, 1833: 158-160). Cat. München Nrs, 374-376; Atrevasamhitā or Ātrevabhāsita Hārītottara, agreeing with ed. b of the Hārītasamhitā, Cat. Mysore XIII. Nr. 41339: Ātrevasamhitā (Hārītatantra); Nrs. 42968-69 (Hārītatantra; the colophon of Nr. 42968 calls it Ātreyabhāsita Hārītottara). See on some of the MSS: D. V. Subba Reddy and B. Rama Rao (1973: 60). The Kavindracārvasūcipatram records a Hārītatantra (Nr. 954). See also on MSS of a text called Atrevasamhita which contain a version of the Haritasamhitā: NCC II, 67-68; P. Cordier (1903b; 348-349); J. Filliozat (1934a; 127); J. Jolly (1906; 414-415); D.V. Subba Reddy and B. Rama Rao (1973: 60-61). P. Cordier (1903b: 349), J. Filliozat (1934a: 127) and J. Jolly (1906: 414) remark about an Atreyasamhitā of the Bikaner Library that it differs from the printed editions of the Hārītasamhitā in containing parts of other medical treatises: eleven chapters are taken from the Susrutasamhitā and two from the Astārigahrdaya; one chapter contains borrowings from Bheda, Cakrapānidatta, Caraka, Ravigupta's Siddhasāra, Suśruta and Vāgbhaṭa; chapter five of the Cikitsāsthāna reproduces the Sanıni pātārnava, usually thought to form part of the Aśvinī kumārasamhitā; rasavogas and verses on nādīparīksā are also present.

Some quotations from Ātreya and Atri are traceable in the Hārītasannhitā (see: quotations); versions of the Ātreyasannhitā that differ from the Hārītasannhitā are also known (see the quotations in the Śāligrāmanighantu; compare J. Jolly, 1901: 9, C.G. Kashikar 11). The Check-list (Nr. 20) records an Atrisannhitāthat should more properly be called Ātreyasannhitā and (Nr. 936) even mentions a MS of Vidyāpati's Vaidyarahasya that is called Hārītasannhitā.

References are to ed. f.

Compare on the editions A. Raison (1974): Intr. XI–XII: a, d, and e are closely related, whereas b has numerous divergent readings; f agrees largely with e. The editions are characterized by an abundance of grammatical and metrical errors (see AVI 135–136) and, when compared with each other, contradictory readings (see A. Raison, 1974: Intr. XII). The MSS are full of variants which disagree with the texts of the editions (J. Filliozat, 1934a: 136–139; A. Raison, 1974: Intr. XI). A critical text of the first section (sthāna) of the Hārītasaṃhitā, based on editions a, b, d and e, has been edited, accompanied by a French translation, by Alix Raison: La Hārīta Saṃhitā, texte médical sanskrit, avec un index de nomenclature āyurvédique, Publications de l'Institut Français d'Indologie No. 52, Pondichéry 1974; this edition is provided with a long introduction (46 pages), a list of variants, a glossary, and an index giving the botanical equivalents of plant names; it has been reviewed by R.E. Emmerick (BSOAS 38, 1975, 651–652), G.J. Meulenbeld (Erasmus 28, 1976, 152–155), A. Roşu (JRAS 1977, 217–219), and L. Sternbach (JAOS 99, 1979, 161–167).

Some odd chapters of the Hārītasaṃhitā have been translated: I.1 and 3 and II.3 were translated into English by B. Rama Rao (1973b); II.1 was translated into French by J. Filliozat (1934a); the pariśiṣṭādhyāya was translated into French by A. Raison (1974: Intr. VIII-IX).

- 3 Ātreya is not called Punarvasu in the Hārītasamhitā. Many laudatory epithets are given to him and he is extolled in the parisistā dhyāya. Compare the quotations from Ātreya. See on Ātreya: authors associated with the Carakasamhitā.
- 4 See: Hārīta.
- 5 Hārīta is on several occasions addressed with laudatory epithets, such as cikitsāgamapāraga (III.10.6) and mahāmati (III.34.6). One verse (III.3.27) refers to Hārīta and Ātreya as being almost on an equal footing. A verse (III.6.26) that may be a borrowing from an earlier source mentions, instead of Hārīta, a Kurunrpa as Ātreya's interlocutor.
- 6 See, for example, the homavidhi of II.7.
- 7 An analysis of the contents of the Hārītasaṃhitā is provided by F.R. Dietz (1833: 158–160), Mrs. Manning (1869: I,339–342: called Ātreyasaṃhitā; reproduced in HIM II, 430–433 and III, 817–820), S.K. Ramachandra Rao, 1985: 30–31), G. Mukhopadhyaya (HIM III, 811–816), and A. Raison (1974: Intr. XII–XLIV).
- 8 Twelve chapters in ed. a (A. Raison, 1974: Intr. XIII).
- 9 The arrangement of ed. b is identical.
- 10 The complete āyurveda has been laid down in 100,000 verses; five shortened versions are enumerated, covering 24,000, 12,000, 6,000, 3,000 and 1,500 ślokas respectively (I. 1.10–16); see on these versions and some parallels: Sūramcandra (1978): I, 196; compare the versions quoted as Bṛhadātreya, Madhyamātreya, etc. An Ātreyasaṃhitā (probably some version of the Hārītasaṃhitā), described by R. Mitra (Notices VIII, Nr. 2633) has a different version of the same story: Atri obtained from Brahmā a voluminous treatise in 400,000 verses; Ātreya made an abridgment in 200,000 verses; subsequently, other sages compiled shorter digests; these digests are called: Agnivaiśyī, Āṅgirā, Āśvinī, Ātreyī, Bhāradvājī, Bhārgavī, Gārgī, Gautamī, Jābālī, Kāśyapī, Kautsī, Khāranādī, Khārapādī, Mārkaṇēī, Mātaṅgī, Parāśarī, Pauṣkalī, Sauryā, Tvāṅgī, Vaiṣṇavī, Vaiśvāmitrī, and Vāsakī. These stories are examples of the Indian idea that the texts now available are abridgments of more extensive works once revealed by the gods.

- 11 The prohibiting circumstances are twelve in number (I.1,30-33).
- 12 This section is remarkably elaborate and resembles the monographs on dravyaguna.
- 13 The Aristasthāna corresponds to the Indriyasthāna of the Carakasarnhitā. See on arista: Ca.I.1 and the notes to that chapter. See also: Lallanji Gopal (1988a).
- 14 This chapter was edited and translated into French by J. Filliozat (1934a), who also provided some references to related dharmaśāstra texts. It contains an exposition on karmavipāka in forty-six verses; the diseases resulting from particular bad acts (thirteen types are enumerated; II.1.8) in former existences are mentioned, together with the gifts suitable to expiate them.
- 15 Compare, for example, Ca.I.5.27-40, which lists inauspicious dreams; the Hārītasaṃhitā differs from the Carakasaṃhitā in providing details on auspicious dreams. Compare also Su.Sū.29.54cd-74 (inauspicious dreams) and 75-81 (auspicious dreams).
- 16 Cf. Ca.I.1-2.
- 17 Cf. Ca.I.6. The chapter of the Hārītasamhitā on this subject is longer (forty-seven verses) and more systematic than the corresponding chapter of the Carakasamhitā.
- 18 Cf. Ca.l.4; Su.Sii.30.
- 19 Cf. Ca.I.12.9-24; Su.Sü.29.5-31.
- 20 Cf. Su.Sū.29.32-40.
- 21 Cf. Ca.I.12.25-39; Su.Sū.29.45-53ab.
- 22 This section accommodates both the nidana and the cikitsita of the diseases.
- 23 The same opinion was expressed by J. Filliozat (L. Renou and J. Filliozat, 1953: 151-152).
- 24 The Sūtrasthāna is referred to as Uttarīya Sūtrasthāna (III.31.14), which implies that Pūrvīya Sūtrasthāna may have been an alternative title of the Annapānasthāna.
- 25 The nidāna is on rare occasions absent, for example in the chapter on mūtrakrcchra (29).
- 26 Chapters 18–19, on apasmāra and unmāda, belong traditionally to bhūtavidyā, but the term bhūtavidyā is restricted to chapter 55 in the Hārītasarnhitā.
- 27 See on the meaning of upanga: special features.
- 28 See: special features.
- 29 Some of these diseases are incidentally referred to: hikkā (III.12.30 and 40), śvāsa (III.12.40 and 39.25).
- 30 The formula called agastiharītakīpāka (III.9.63-66) is attributed to Agasti.
- 31 Agastya should be honoured when taking the preparation called bhīmavaṭaka (III.2.61–64).
- 32 Two formulae are said to derive from Atri: cyavanaprāśana (III.9.47-61: attributed to Atri and Kṛṣṇātreya, who are identical in this case) and mṛdvīkādighṛta (III.10.52-54).
- 33 The kānkāvanagutikā (III. 11.50–52) is ascribed to Kānkāvana.
- 34 The cyavanaprāśana (III.9.47–61), tālakāmrātaka (III.9.124–129), candanādicūrņa (III. 1. 8.23–33) and nārāyanataila (III.20.108–118) owe their origin to Krsnātreya.

- 35 The pārāśaraghrta (III.9.88-92) is called after him.
- 36 G. Mukhopadhyaya (HIM III, 551–560) collected part of the quotations from Hārīta and prescriptions attributed to him.
- 37 Ad Śārngadharasamhitā III.13.125: the samhitās of Hārīta, Suśruta, Bhṛgu and Agniveśa are referred to.
- 38 Jñārasarāmaśarman's version of the Amrtasāgara quotes two verses describing a fever that is interpreted as manthara jvara (III.42; p.274); it mentions that the formula of mahātālīsādicūrņa is found in Hārīta's treatise (IV.II; p.337; the formula is untraceable in ed. f.; compare III.12.43-44; brhattālīsādya ausadha).
- 39 Mentioned as a source.
- 44 Quotations from Hārīta and the Hārītīya are found at Yogaratnasamuccaya 8.283cd—284ab, 285, 434, 472cd–473ab (a quotation common to Hārīta and the Śikhāyoga), 535cd–536ab, 570cd–571ab, 579ab, 672cd–673ab, 676cd, 680ab, 681, 726, 975cd–978, 1010cd–1011; 9.15cd–50 (this long quotation describes rituals to appease the deities associated with the nakṣatras and mentions the number of days a disease will last when arisen under a particular nakṣatra; the verses are absent from ed. f of the Hārītasamhitā, but are related to II.6, called nakṣatra;ñānavarṇana, a chapter that deals with the same subject), 239–240, 310cd–311, 315cd, 320, 406cd–410, 440–441, 451, 462cd–467ab, 471–474ab, 687–689ab, 733–734; 10.79 (a quotation common to Hārīta and two sources referred to as Vṛddha and Candra) and 115; 11.155 and 162; 13.71, 79, 82, 271; 14.27, 51, 241, 440; 15.322; 18.176–181 (verses based on Hārīta's prose) and 378–386; 19.210 (based on Hārīta's prose) and 308 (a quotation common to Hārīta and Vṛddhakāšyapa); 20.278–281 (a formula of balātaila, different from that in ed. f: III.20.77–91 and 92–96) and 448–450; 24.408–409 and 612cd–614; 28.54; 30.41–45 and 60–69.
- 41 Ad A.h.Sū.l.3—4ab (mentioned as one of the six pupils of Ātreya); 6.63cd-64ab; Ni.2.79 (referred to as Hārita in a quotation from A.s.Ni.1).
- 42 Āvurvedābdhisāra 2626–2627ab (on the mythical origin of śūla), 3648, 9368–9369.
- 43 Commentary ad Äyurvedābdhisāra 57-58, 102-105 (Äyurvedābdhisāra 106 = A.h.Ni.2. 44cd-45 is said to derive from Hārīta, a fact not mentioned by the commentators on the A.h.), 610, 1235.
- 44 Rasaratnadīpikā 266-267 (unmādabhañjinī vaṭī), 281-282 (chāgalādyataila), 421-422 (mahāmadanamodaka).
- 45 Bhāvaprakāśa I.1 mentions Hārīta as a member of the assembly of sages on the slopes of the Himālayas (1.37) and as one of the six pupils of Âtreya Punarvasu (1.31). Hārīta is also mentioned at Bhāvaprakāśanighantu, vārivarga 75–76 (= Hārītasaṃhitā I.7.107–108 in the edition of Alix Raison) and cikitsā 54.137–141 (the formula of kandūrākṣasataila is attributed to Hārīta).
 - Hārīta is referred to at Bhāvaprakāśa 1.73.139 and cikitsā 1.19–20, and in the glosses ad cikitsā 1.30 (1.7.107 in the edition of Alix Raison is cited), 99 (compare Cakra's quotation ad Ca.Ci.3.160cd–161ab), 401, 541 (this verse is attributed to Hārīta; compare Hānītasanı-hitā III.2.148–150), and 46.18.
- 46 Mentioned as a source.
- 47 Hārita (metri causa pro Hārīta) is mentioned as a member of an assembly of sages (I.8). P. Cordier (1903b: 341) was convinced that the second formula of balātaila (Nāvanītaka 277-279) goes back to Hārīta.
- 48 Mentioned as a member of the assembly of sages in the Himālayas (I, 22) and as one of the eighteen authors of a saṃhitā (I, 31).

- 49 See: commentaries on the Carakasamhitā. The quotation ad Ca.Sū.27.197 is identical with I.7.26cd-27ab in the edition of Alix Raison. See also: commentaries on the Suśrutasamhitā. Hārīta's treatise was one of the sources of Cakrapānidatta's Cikitsāsamgraha according to Niścalakara and Śivadāsasena.
- 50 Jvaratimirabhāskara 9,57cd-59.
- 51 Quoted in Candrața's Yogaratnasamuccaya and in his commentary on Tîsața's Cikitsā-kalikā 2, 82, 115, 116, 140–142, 173–174, 212–215 (the formula of mahānīlaghṛta, attributed to Hārīta).
- 52 Mentioned as one of the six pupils of Ātreya Punarvasu.
- 53 Ad Su.Ci.38.71-76; U.1.4cd-8ab and 39.5cd-7 (mentioned as a specialist in kāyacikitsā), 40.7-8ab.
- 54 Dhanvantari, vātavyādhi 74 (the formula of nakulataila) and 88 (the formula of bṛhacchā-galādyaghṛta).
- 55 Mentioned as one of the sources.
- 56 Ad Ca.Ci.13.36-40; 3.72 and 87.
- 57 Garuḍapurāṇa 147.48 (compare Hārītasaṃhitā III.2.148–150 and A.h.Ni.2.62 = A.s.Ni.2. 64).
- 58 Bhaişajyaratnāvalī, vātavyādhi 232–256 and vājīkaraņa 312–336 (the formula of brhacchāgalādyaghṛta); vātavyādhi 536–544 (the formula of nakulataila); kuṣṭha 267–271 (the formula of kacchūrāksasataila).
- 59 Ad Ayurvedaprakāśa 1.538 (from the Hārītasamhitā) and 4.107.
- 60 Hārīta(ka) is referred to in the introductory verses of the Hamsarājanidāna.
- 61 Mentioned as one of the authorities consulted by the author in one of the concluding verses of the Yogacintāmani.
- 62 Mentioned as an authority of the same weight as Caraka and Suśruta (ad A.h.Sū.1.1); quoted ad A.h.Sū.6.63cd-64ab and 75cd-78.
- 63 See Hemarā jašarman 12 and Vrddhatrayī 8-9: mentioned as an originator of āyurveda.
- 64 Mentioned as a source in the Jvaraparā jaya.
- 65 Quoted ad Ca.Ci.3.71-72, 75-83, 138cd-139ab, 146cd-147ab, 149cd-155ab, 160cd-161ab, 161cd-163ab.
- 66 Ad Rasendrasārasamgraha 1.233.
- 67 See Hemarā jaśarman 13 and 118.
- 68 Quoted in the introduction to U.40.
- 69 Mentioned as a source in Kalyana's Balatantra (see JAI 155).
- 70 Quoted as Hārīta and Hārītātreya. See: Nidānadī pikā.
- 71 Ouoted in his commentary on Trimalla's Śataślokī.
- 72 Ksemakutūhala 3.17: mentioned as a medical authority, together with Caraka and Suśruta.
- 73 Mentioned as a source in one of the MSS.
- 74 The formula of agastivaţikā (see Rasayogasāgara, akārādi 85).
- 75 See JAI 157.
- 76 Vāgbhaṭamaṇḍana 70, 95, 96.
- 77 See Rasayogasāgara, akārādi 85 (the formula of agastivaţī, proclaimed by Agastya, Hārīta and Parāśara).
- 78 The Basavarājīya quotes a recipe against masūrikā from the Hārītātreyakasamhitā (11) and a statement on fevers derived from Agniveśa and Hārīta (27).
- 79 See: Niścala's Ratnaprabhā. Niścala records that the following verses of the Cakradatta derive from Hārīta: jvara 33, 71, 75, 80, 86, 210; jvarātīsāra 18-25; arśas 8-10; pānduroga

- 44–47; raktapitta 39–42 and 66–73; chardi 22; vātavyādhi 127–131; śūla 10, 12, 20, 33; udāvarta 28; udara 46; masūrikā 1, 4, 17, 23, 27, 35; nirūha 26–27. Jvarātīsāra 21 is very close to Hārītasamhitā III.3.20.
- 80 Two recipes are attributed to Hārītamuni: mahāchāgalādyaghrta (II, vātavyādhi 60-87) and mahāsaureśvaraghrta (II, ślīpada 33-41).
- 81 Mentioned in his commentary ad A.h.Sū.1.2.
- 82 The formula of agastivatikā (see Rasayogasāgara, akārādi 85).
- 83 Rasendrapurāņa 1.11.
- 84 The Hārītasamhitā is quoted at pages 816 (yava), 818 (godhūma), 823 (mudga), 833 (masūra), 835 (caṇaka), 840 (kalāyaka), 841 (tripuṭa), 843 (kulatthaka), 864 (vāstūka), 899 (cirbhaṭa), 918 (kāravella), 934 (palāṇḍu), 949 (vārāhakanda); 960–961, 965, 966, 968, 969, 971–972 (jala); 973 (bhūmi); 980–981, 984, 986 (jala); 994, 995, 996, 997 (dugdha); 1007, 1009, 1010, 1011 (dadhi); 1016, 1018–1019 (takra); 1021 (navanīta); 1028, 1030, 1032 (ghṛta); 1034, 1035 (mūtra); 1038, 1041, 1042 (taila); 1074 (madhu); 1079 (ikṣu); 1087 (guḍa); 1093 (kāñjika); 1094 (tuṣodaka); 1101, 1102, 1103, 1106 (madya).

Compare Hārīta I.15.19 (yava), 20 (godhūma), 25 (mudga), 31 (masūra), 23 (caṇaka), 30 (kalāyaka), 29 (tripuṭa), 28 (kulatthaka); 16.7ab (vāstūka), 22 (cirbhaṭa), 21 (kāravella), 34cd (vārāhakanda); 7.1-2, 27-30, 32, 34-35, 36-37, 45cd-66 (jala); 7.67-70 (bhūmi); 7.75-84, 92, 98-101 (jala); 8.21, 19, 22, 26-29 (dugdha); 8.34, 35, 36, 39-44 (dadhi); 8.50-52, 53-56 (takra); 8.65-67 (navanīta); 8.77, 83 (ghṛta); 9.4, 5-8 (mūtra); 14.2-6, 7-9, 10, 16 (taila); 18.2-4 (madhu); 10.4 (ikṣu); 10.16-17 (guḍa); 11.7-9 (kāūjika); 19.6, 10, 12, 13-15 (madya).

- 85 Mentioned as a source (1.8).
- 86 Ad Rasaratnasamuccaya 27.1.
- 87 Mentioned in the commentary ad Ca.Sū.1.30–31. Quoted ad A.h.U.39.130. Quoted ad Cakradatta, asrgdara 2 and 8–11; rasāyana 152, 160, 165–166, 196–201; vṛṣya 1; nirūha 27 (nirūha 27 derives from Hārīta according to Śivadāsasena; the verse is quoted by Cakrapāṇi ad Ca.Si.3.30cd–3 lab, Candraṭa ad Cikitsākalikā 82, and Dalhaṇa ad Su.Ci.38.71–76). Quoted ad Cakrapāṇi's Dravyaguṇa, māṇṣādi².34; pānīya 3; kṣīra 46; āhāra 21.
- 88 Gadanigraha, prayogakhanda, ghṛtādhikāra 13cd-21ab (kaṭukaghṛta), 43cd-47ab (mahāvāsādyaghṛta), 47cd-49 (daśāngaghṛta), 50-54ab (laśunaghṛta), 54cd-60ab (nārācakaghṛta), 68cd-71 (mahāṣaṭpalaghṛta), 89-91 (āvartakīghṛta), 154 (drākṣādyaghṛta), 185-187ab (dvipañcamūlyādyaghṛta), 208-211 (drākṣādyaghṛta).
- 89 Ad Mādhavanidāna 40.17ab and 61.6-7. Ad Vrnda's Siddhayoga 1.53ab (identical with Hārītasannhitā 1.7.107 in the edition of Alix Raison, supplemented by an ardhaśloka of unknown origin) and 62; 6.20; 8.1; 11.14-17.
- 90 Mentioned in his commentary on Lolimbarāja's Vaidyajīvana.
- 9 Mentioned as a medical authority in the second introductory verse; the formula of mahānīlagh

 nīlagh

 ta (212-215) derives from Hār

 ta commentary.
- 92 Todara II: 6.101cd-108 (the methods of examination of tongue and teeth, originally devised by Brahmā, are described by Hārīta) and 7.185; III: 4.213, 219, 779-780 (compare the quotations in the commentaries of Gangādhara and Jejjaṭa ad Ca.Ci.3.72); IV: 4.203-205 (the formula of agastivaṭī; compare Nārāyaṇabhūpati's quotation); V: 11.458; VII: 17.

- 94–102 (the formula of mayūraghṛta); IX: 1.87 (eight pala of fresh drugs and liquids constitute one kudava, but four pala in the case of dried drugs), 190 (substances to be added to a nirūha, also when not specified in the recipe), and 250 (the proper doses of śilā iatu).
- 93 Yogataranginī 27.33-36 (the formula of chāgalādighṛta); Brhadyogataranginī 1.11 (on diseases caused by karman) and 13.36 (mentioned as a medical authority; the same verse is quoted by Ksemaśarman).
- 94 Ad Mādhavanidāna 2.15cd-16 and 37-38; 3.21; 16.5; 26.1; 40.17ab; 61.6cd-7 (these quotations also occur in the Madhukośa).
- 95 A.h.Ni.2.62-63ab and A.s.Ni.2.64cd-65 quote a verse of Hārīta (compare Hārītasaṃhitā III.2.148-150); A.s.Sü. 1.11-12: mentioned as a medical authority who wrote his own treatise. Hārīta is referred to in Vāgbhaṭa's Vaidūryakabhāṣya on the A.h. (P. Cordier, 1903a: 614).
- 96 Ad Triśatī 20.
- 97 Ad Mādhavanidāna 1.5d-6; 2.15cd-16, 37-38, 61cd-65, 66cd-74ab (a statement common to Hārīta and Vṛddhavāgbhaṭa: = A.s.Ni.1.19-20ab; compare Hārīta saṃhitā II.6; the second quotation, a verse borrowed from Hārīta by Vāgbhaṭa, and identical with A.h.Ni.2. 62cd-63ab = A.s.Ni.2.65, is found in a number of other works); 3.21; 8.2; 16.5; 22.57cd-58ab; 26.1; 29.6.
- 98 Mentioned as a source in the Ayurvedavijñāna.
- 99 Vīrasimhāvaleka 2 and 75 (the formula of mrdvīkāsava).
- 100 Mentioned as one of the sources.
- 101 Quoted in one MS (ad Siddhamantra 5; see P.V. Sharma's edition); the quotation, attributed to Hariscandra in the other MSS, is said to be from Hārīta in Hemādri's comments ad A.h. Sū.6.75cd-78.
- 102 Yogaratnākara 493 and 635.
- 103 Ad Cakradatta, jvara 18.
- 104 Another Vṛddhahārīta is a work on dharmaśāstra (see Kane I.1, 134-135).
- 105 Yogaratnasamuccaya 31.231-240 and 779.
- 106 Todara II: 6.13 (a verse on pulse examination); IX: 1.61 (a sukti is equivalent to halfa pala in particular types of recipes), 502-504 (doses of medicines for children and young people up to sixteen years, adults, and persons older than seventy).
- 107 See: Trimalla.
- 1●8 Yogaratnākara 6 (the same verse is found in Ţoțara's Āyurvedasaukhya; an ardhaśloka is added).
- 109 Yuktikalpataru, p. 169 (the quotation deals with the origin of metal ores).
- 110 The Ātreyasaṛnhitā described by R. Mitra (Notices VIII, Nr. 2633) is probably a version of the Hārītasaṃhitā.
- 111 Some formulae ascribed to Āu·eya were collected by G. Mukhopadhyāya (HIM II, 434–439). Compare Krsnātreya.
- 112 Auto-commentary ad Bhişaksarvasva 2.191–192: three verses on the anatomy of the bowels which show the influence of western medicine.
- 113 Amṛtasāgara III.26 (p.190): the characteristics of six types of prameha (pūya-, takra-, pi-dikā-, śarkarā-, ghṛta-, and atimūtraprameha) are described according to the Ātreyamata (compare Hārītasaṃhitā III.28.3-4, where pūya-, takra-, śarkarā-, and ghṛtaprameha are mentioned among a longer series of types of this disorder); IV.26 (p.426-427): seven prescriptions against pramehapidakā, borrowed from Ātreya.

- 114 Yogaratnasamuccaya 29.382-388 (the formula of nīlyādisvarasataila).
- 115 Mentioned as a medical authority (1.43).
- 116 Ātreya is mentioned as one of the earliest medical authorities.
- 117 Bhānuji Dīkṣita's commentary on the Amarakoṣa quotes the Ātreyasaṃhitā (see prastāvanā 10 of Haragovinda Śāstrī, 1970).

- 129 Pākapradīpa 232-239 (the formula of jātipattrīpāka).
- 130 Gopāladāsa's work is based on Caraka, Suśruta, Vrnda, Hārīta, and Ātreya (STMI 64-65).
- 131 Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī 8.572-582 (bilvataila); 27.140-147 (bṛhadgudūcītaila); 66.25-31 (pusyānugacūrna).
- 132 Ad Āyurvedaprakāśa 2.338-340 (a quotation from a rasaśāstra text).
- 133 Ātreya is, together with Atri(ka), Caraka and Hārīta(ka), referred to in the introductory verses of the Hamsarājanidāna.
- 134 The quotations from Ātreya are taken from the Carakasaṃhitā.
- 135 Ātreyaka is one of the authorities consulted by Harṣakīrti.
- 136 See Hemarājasarman, upodghāta 12; Vrddhatrayī 8-9: mentioned as an originator of ā-vurveda.
- 137 Ātreya, Caraka and Hārīta are referred to in the Jvaraparājaya.
- 138 Ad A.h.U.34.44cd-49ab (Vāgbhaṭa gives the formula ofpuṣyānugacūrṇa, associated with Ātreya's name); 40.59 (mentioned by Vāgbhaṭa), 60-62 (Vāgbhaṭa's Punarvasu is referred to), and 78-80 (the mahāmuni mentioned by Vāgbhaṭa is either Caraka or Ātreya).
- 139 Vācaka Dīpacandra mentions Ātreya as one of the sources of Kalyāṇa's Bālatantra (JAI 155).
- 140 Ad Śārnigadharasanhitā II.9.17-19ab (some verses on the preparation of a medicated oil).
- 141 Mādhava Upādhyāya's Pākāvalī attributes the formula of jātīpattrīpāka to Ātreya (see

- Rasayogasāgara, cakārādi 179); Āyurvedaprakāśa 1.538: Ātreyaḥ Hārītam prati, which means that the Hārītasamhitā is quoted.
- 142 Mentioned as one of the sources of his Kavipramoda (JAI 140).
- 143 The Meghavinoda mentions both the Ātreya- and the Hārīta samhitā as sources of the work.
- 144 Referred to as an authority in the Vaidvāmrta.
- 145 Vāgbhaṭaman ana 10 (a long quotation, resembling Ca.Sū.1.4-29), 40 (Ca.Sū.26.61cd-62ab is auotea), 64 (Ca.Sū.13.23-25 is quoted as deriving from Punarvasu Ātreya).
- 146 Ad Cakradatta, grahanī 16-19 (the definition of a sīta from Ca.Sū.4.7); vātavyādhi 180-184 (the formula of Ātreya's prasāranītaila, quoted from the Nāvanītaka); anuvāsana 33 (Ātreya's Uttarakārikā).
- 147 Mentioned as an authority in the Cikitsāmañjarī.
- 148 The Atreyasamhitā is quoted in his Svasthavrttasamuccaya.
- 149 The Atreyamata and Atreyasastra are quoted in his Rāmavinoda.
- 150 The Atreya- and Atrisamhitā are mentioned as sources of the Vicārasudhākara.
- 151 Ātreva is referred to.
- 152 Rasaratnasamuccaya 25.101-105: the formula of puşyānugacūrņa (= Ca.Ci.30.90-95).
- 153 The Ratnākarauşadhayoga attributes a mahāman, dūrayoga to Âtreya (see Rasayogasāgara, pakārādi 479).
- 154 Sahasrayoga 72 (the formula of sūlādighrta), 77 (the formula of prabhañ janavimardanataila), 88-89 (the formula of kuṣṭhāntakataila), 117-118 (the formula of puṣyānugacūrṇa), 125 (the formula of amṛtāpippalyādicūrṇa).
- 155 The Ātreyasaṃhitā is quoted at 35, 39,42, 45, 47, 128, 147, 207, 208, 224, 247, 282, 283, 338, 400, 403, 437, 492, 510, 538, 560, 565, 571, 573-574, 583, 613, 616, 537, 678, 688, 845, 870, 890, 1046, 1091, 1101, 1219. The Ātreyasaṃhitā quoted differs from the Hārītasaṃhitā, cited as well; the quotations from the Ātreyasaṃhitā are in some instances traceable in ed. f of the Hārītasaṃhitā: the quotation at p.207 = HārītasaṃhitāI.14.16; 510 = I.16.8ab; 560 = I.17.23; 565 = I.17.21; 571 = I.17.27; 583 = I.17.16; 616 = I.17.25; 845 = I.15.2.1-22 (variants).
- 156 Ad Ca.Sū.1.2 (Ātreya Punarvasu is referred to) and 30–31 (Ātreya is distinguished from Bharadvāja).
- 157 Ad Śivakosa 163 and 470.
- 158 Gadanigraha, prayogakhanda, ghrtādhikāra 343-354 (the formula of dādhikaghrta) and 439-446 (the formula of mahāmāyūraghrta, esteemed by Ātreya); cūrnādhikāra 193-198 (the formula of puṣyānugacūrina, esteemed by Ātreya); āsavādhikāra 27-28 (the twenty sārāsavas).
- 159 Ad A.h.Sū.l.3—4ab and 14cd—15ab, Śā.5.127 (Ātreya Punarvasu is referred to).
- 160 Ad Siddhayoga 80.1 and 3: Ātreya Punarvasu is referred to.
- 161 Svāmikumāra pays homage to Ātreya in the introductory verses of his commentary on the Carakasamhitā.
- 162 Todara II: 1.73 (= Hārītasaṃhitā 1.1.22-23); 2.127-128 and 205 (= Su.Śā.4.79); 3.79-80, 116 (= Hārītasaṃhitā 1.4.9), 122-123, 152-153 (= Hārītasaṃhitā 1.4.56-57), 374ab; 4.177, 184, 186-187ab, 201; 5.7 and 131-132; 6.25 (the characteristics of the pulse are referred to); III: 2.21-22 and 36; 3.7 (compare Hūrītasaṃhitā III.2.35), 9-10 (= Hārītasaṃhitā III.2.29-30); compare Su.U.39.11cd-13ab), 14-16, 29-30, 41, 74-75, 88-81, 114 (it is remarkable that Vāgbhaṭa is mentioned in the last line), 118, 147, 156, 178-179, 262; 4.18-19, 373, 377-378, 383-384 = 393-394, 398, 468-469, 694, 1063, 1076, 1212, 1321,

- 1349, 1367–68, 1382–83 (= Hārītasamhitā III.2.240cd–242), 1386–87; IV: 1.132; V: 11. 141–142. 461–463, 556, 766–775 (the formula of prasāranītaila, taken from Bhela); VI: 8.26–27 and 92; VII: 16.317–322 (the formula of nrpavallabhataila, ascribed to Ātreya); IX: 1.57 (mentioned in a quotation from Kṛṣṇātreya as holding a divergent opinion: three māṣa constitute one ṣāṇa, instead of four māṣa, as asserted by Kṛṣṇātreya), 134–136 (the differences between a ṣīta and a phāṇta), 153 (the seven types of decoctions: pācana, dīpana, śodhana, ṣamana, tarpaṇa, kledana, śoṣaṇa), 168 (the treatment of complaints occurring after taking a decoction), 258 (the preparation of a varti), 394 (the period of time during which a medicated oil or ghee, or a decoction, should be boiled), 397–398 (from Vrddhasusruta and Ātreya: comments on the preparation of prasārinyāditaila as described by Ṣaunaka).
- 163 Yogataranginī 8.31-40 (from Ātreya according to the Hindī comm. of ed. a); Bṛ-hadyogataranginī 78.84-88ab (the formula of kāsakandano'valeha).
- 164 A.h.Sū.1.1; Śā.3.49 and 5.128 (Ātreya is mentioned); U.34.45cd-50ab (the formula of puşyānugacūrņa, esteemed by Ātreya), 40.59 (Ātreya is mentioned). A.s.Sū.1.2; Śā.3.5 (on diet in the eighth month of pregnancy); U.39.75-78 (the formula of puṣyānugacūrṇa, esteemed by Ātreya), 49.262 (a mantra of Ātreya, to be employed when using guggulu); Ātreya is often mentioned in the introduction to chapters of the A.s.
- 165 Vaidyacintāmaņi 115 (mahāman dūraka; compare Rasayogasāgara, pakārādi 479); 197 (vātasan mohanarasa; ascribed to Atrisuta); 210–211 (candanāditaila); 211–212 (rāsnāpūtikātaila); 236 (paittyaga jānkuśarasa); 261 (kāsakhan danāvalehya).
- 166 Mentioned as a medical authority.
- 167 Vangasena, netraroga 435–440 (the formula of nrpavallabhataila); strīroga 51–56 (the formula of puşyānugacūrņa).
- 168 Mentioned as a source in the Vāsudevānubliava.
- 169 Āyurvedavijñāna II, p.376-377: Ātreya describes, on Urabhra's request, the causes, symptoms and treatment of tāndavaroga.
- 170 See AVI 295; Cat. IO Nr. 2684.
- 171 Mentioned as one of the sources, together with Hārīta.
- 172 Siddhayoga 61.213–218 (nṛpavallabhataila); 63.14–19 (puṣyānugacūrṇa); 76 (ardhamātrikabasti).
- 173 Yogaratnākara 354-355 (the formula of kāsakan, danāvaleha) and 464-465 (the formula of rāsnāpūtikataila).
- 174 Compare the versions mentioned at Hārīta I.1.10–16.
- 175 Todara III: 3.112–113 (diseases in which boiled water is wholesome); IX: 1.366 (the four types of application of oil on the head: abhyanga, pariseka, picu, and basti).
- 176 Yogataranginī, Hindī commentary to 8.31–40 (ed. a) and 8.28–37 (ed. b).
- 177 Todara III: 4.249–255 (the formula of rasacūdāmani from Kaniṣṭhātreya and Sūtamahodadhi; the formula itself was propounded by Bhairava), 419–421 (the swelling at the root of the ear, occurring in fevers, and its treatment; = Hārītasaṃhitā III.2.153–156), 1373–1381 (the symptoms and treatment of raudrajvara, māhendrajvara, jvarešvara, kālajvara, and gambhīrajvara; compare Hārītasaṃhitā III.2.221 and 225–226: brāhmaṇa- or raudrajvara; 222 and 227–229: kṣatriya- or māhendrajvara; 223 and 230–232: vaisyajvara or jvarešvara; 224 and 233–234: śūdra- or kālajvara; see on gambhīrajvara: Basavarājīya 25 and Cakrapāni ad Ca.Ci.3.52cd–53ab).
- 178 Todara III: 4.427-431 (the swelling at the root of the ear and its treatment; compare III.4. 419-421 and Hārītasaṃhitā III.2.153-156) and 1241 (on the treatment of chronic fever).

- 179 Todara II: 4.68-72 (on the menstrual discharge) and 167-168 (on the umbilical cord and the nourishment of the foetus); III: 4.238 (on lājaman, da, a thin gruel prepared with roasted rice flour).

- 185 Hārītasamhitā I.8.17 = Bhāvaprakāśanighantu, dugdhavarga 25.
- 186 Hārītasaṃhitā III.2.207 is very close to Cakradatta, jvara 216. The other examples mentioned by P.V. Sharma (Hārītasaṃhitā III.2.74 = Cakradatta, jvara 96; 2.206 = jvara 214; 11.35 = arśas 17) are not convincing.
- 187 Hārītasamhitā I.7.80ab = Ca.Sū.6.46ab; III.2.192 = Ca.Ci.3.71; III.3.3 = Ca.Sū.11.54; III.10.13 = Ca.Ci.4.22; III.10.14ab = Ca.Ci.4.13cd. The second example mentioned by P.V. Sharma (Hārītasamhitā I.7.45 = Ca.Sū.7.61) does not tally.
- 188 Hārītasamhitā I.3.3 = Siddhasāra 1.33 (see R.E. Emmerick, 1977a: 213).
- 189 Hārītasaṃhitā I.3.5 = Siddhayoga 1.17; 3.38-41 = Siddhayoga 3.55-58. The other example recorded by P.V. Sharma (Hārītasaṃhitā III.3.57 = Siddhayoga 3.40) does not agree.
- 190 Hārītasamhitā I.14.13 = Su.Sū.45.129; 15.21ab = Su.Sū.46.39cd; III.4.3 = Su.Sū.33.4-5ab.
- 191 Two more examples mentioned by P.V. Sharma (Hārītasaṃhitā I.5.58 = Cikitsākalikā 30; 1.4.46 = Mādhavanidāna 49.32) do not tally.

- 227 Cf. Su.Sū.28.6; A.s.Ni.1.19-31; Vīrasimhāvaloka; Yogaratnasamuccaya 9.15cd-50.
- 228 The initial fever is called manda jvara, i.e., a slow fever.
- 229 The concept of a disease that acts as the cause of a subsequent disease, thus resulting in a chain with death as the ultimate link (nidānārthakara roga), belongs to the common heritage of āyurveda; compare Ca.Ni.8.16cd-19, A.s.Sū.22.10, Mādhavanidāna 1.15cd-18, and the commentaries on these works.
- 230 The concept of a series of diseases called mahāroga or mahāvyādhi is common to āyurvedic literature. The members and their total number differ (compare Ţoḍara IV: 3.47; Rasaratnasamuccaya 21.1; Kalyānakāraka 11.4).
- 231 Compare on langhana: Ca.Sū.22, A.h.Sū.14, A.s.Sū.24.
- 232 This statement is remarkable in showing that the Hārītasaṃhitā considers saṃnipāta to be an involvement of four agents (the three doṣas and blood). More examples of this view are found at III.1.16cd-17ab, 106-112, 154, 173.
- 233 The category called sahaja in the Hārītasaṃhitā is called svabhāvabalapravṛtta in the Su-śrutasamhitā (Sū.24.7) and svabhāvaja in the Astāṇgasamgraha (Sū.22.1).

- 234 These names or related ones are also found in the Basavarājīya, Garudapurāṇa, Hastyā-yurveda, Jīvānanda, and in commentaries; see G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 85 and 154-155, (1990): 1.
- 235 Compare the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 2.1, quoting the description of the appearance of fever from the Harivamśa (2.122.71cd-72ab; ed. Poona); see also H.R. Zimmer (1948: LXVI), who quotes the Brahmavaivartapurāna. See Brahmavaivartapurāna, Brahmakhanda 16.27-28.
- 236 The series enumerated appears to consist of the types called samkara, prastuta, nādī, parişeka, avagāhana, ātanka, asmayana, karṣa, kutī, bhū, kumbhī, kūpa, and holāka, to which three more are added: kālasveda, ghatīsveda, and vālukāsveda. The list is related to that found in the Carakasaṃhitā (Sū.14); compare Su.Ci.32, A.h.Sū.17, A.s.Sū.26. Asmayana, not knownfrom other sources, may be an error for aśmaghanasveda (see Ca.Sū.14.47–49), karṣa anerror for karṣūsveda (see Ca.Sū.14.50–51). Puzzling remain the types called prastuta, ātanka, and kālasveda; the difference between kumbhī- and ghaṭīsveda is not clear at all. Another list of seven types of svedana is found in chapter four of the Sūtrasthāna of the Hārītasamhitā.
- 237 This variety is not identical with the fever called satataka in other treatises.
- 238 Dvyāhika, the same as anyedyuska, is not characterized.
- 239 The meaning of this term is not clear.
- 240 Cf. Ca.Ci.3.61cd-67; Su.U.39.67-68ab.
- 241 The adviser of Sugrīva.
- 242 A king of the monkeys in the Rāmāyana.
- 243 Compare the quotations from Kaniṣṭhātreya in Ṭoḍara's Āyurvedasaukhya (III: 4.1373–1381); Hārītasaṃhitā III.2.225–226 is very close to 4.1373–1374 (the symptoms and treatment of raudrajvara), 227–229 to 4.1375–1377 (māhendrajvara), 230–232 to 4.1378–1379 (jvareśvara), 233–234 to 4.1380–1381 (kālajvara is also called gambhīraka; the Hārītasaṃhitā reads bhṛṅgāraka). The Haṃsarājanidāna (16) mentions a mahendrajvara; a kālajvara is described in the Basavarājīya (22) and Siddhāntanidāna (4.190–194).
- 244 The group called dhātudūṣaṇa impresses as out of place.
- 245 Compare Ca.Sū.11.54; the definitions of the Carakasamhitā are identical.
- 246 See G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 196–199 and 212 on the varieties distinguished in other treatises; diarrhoea caused by blood is not recognized as an independent variety by Caraka, Suśruta and Vāgbhaṭa. Āmātisāra, a distinct variety in the Suśrutasanhitā (U.40.7ab), is incidentally referred to in the Hārītasamhitā (III.3.10). The type of diarrhoea called pravāhikā is not described in the Hārītasamhitā, although a quotation from Hārīta in the Madhukośa (ad Mādhavanidāna 3.21) refers to this disorder.
- 247 Jvarātisāra is recognized as a distinct disorder in the Mādhavacikitsā, Siddhayoga, and later works.
- 248 The four types of grahani agree with those acknowledged by Caraka, Suśruta and Vägbhata.
- 249 Probably called thus because it is different from gulma and raktagulma.
- 250 Malabandha and aṣṭḥīlā are either synonymous or designate two disorders; the latter option would imply that the series consists of seven items. Gulma as a complication of grahanī is unknown from other medical works.
- 251 The Cikitsitasthāna has a second chapter on gulma (26).
- 252 The Carakasamhitā (Ci.5.8ab) and Suśrutasamhitā (U.42.5ab) mention the following five

- seats of gulma: the two lateral parts of the abdomen, the cardiac region, umbilical region, and bladder.
- 253 The Carakasamhitā (Ni.3 and Ci.5) and the Suśrutasamhitä (U.42) acknowledge five types of gulma, caused by vāta, pitta, kapha, samnipāta, and blood. The Hārītasamhitā fails to describe raktagulma as a disease only occurring in women.
- 254 Cf. Ca.Vi.7. See G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 622-625.
- 255 The head louse, Pediculus humanus capitis.
- 256 The body louse, Pediculus humanus corporis.
- 257 The name means droplet and may point to a tick.
- 258 This may be the bedbug, Cimex hemipterus, although that animal may also be listed as yaṣṭikā, on account of its elongated and narrow abdomen. See on matkuna: B. Liebich (1927).
- 259 Not mentioned elsewhere. This may be the crab-louse, Phthirus pubis, although this animal has a broad and flat body, which makes it probable that it is called cipita in the Suśrutasaṃ-hitā. Yastikā may also be the tropical bedbug.
- 260 Not mentioned elsewhere. Probably a tapeworm (Taenia).
- 261 Probably Ascaris lumbricoides (Linnaeus, 1758), because its name shows that it resembles an earthworm (kiñcuka). Compare Suśruta's gaṇḍūpada.
- 262 Probably Enterobius vermicularis (Linnaeus, 1758) = Oxyuris vermicularis. Its name indicates that it resembles sprouts (ańkura) of grain (dhānya).
- 263 Sūcīmukha may designate Trichuris trichiura (Linnaeus, 1771), the whipworm. See G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 624.
- 264 The three disorders of the digestive fire (viṣama, tīkṣṇa, manda) are usually attributed to an excess of vāta, pitta and kapha respectively. See Ca.Vi.6. 12; Su.Sū.35.24-25; A.h.Śā. 3.73-74ab.
- 265 The disorder called bhasmaka in later āyurvedic literature is referred to as atyagni in the Suśrutasamhitā (Sū.35.24).
- 266 One of these diseases is pittāmla, identical with amlapitta.
- 267 The works of Caraka, Suśruta and Vāgbhaṭa do not yet regard śūla as a distinct disease, but the Mādhavanidāna and later works devote a separate chapter to it. Compare on śūla: Su.U.42.66cd-145; Mādhavanidāna 26. The varieties of śūla appearing in a particular part of the body, described in the Suśrutasamhitā, are absent from the Hārītasamhitā, nor are they mentioned in the Mādhavanidāna.
- 268 This type is described in the Mādhavanidāna (26.15cd-2lab) as pariņāmašūla.
- 269 Compare the annadosasamudbhavasūla of the Suśrutasamhitā (U.42.142-144).
- 270 Compare Mādhavanidāna 26.5ab and the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 26.3-4ab.
- 271 Caraka and Vāgbhaṭa describe three types caused by one doṣa, one sāṇṇipātika type, and one caused by the eating of earth; the last type is not mentioned in the Suśrutasanihitā. The varieties of pāṇḍuroga known as kāmalā, kumbhakāmalā and halīmaka are not discussed in the Hārītasanihitā; kāmalā and halīmaka are incidentally referred to in the verses on treatment. See on pāṇḍuroga and its varieties: G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 296–313 and 626–627.
- 272 The Carakasanhitā (Sū.17.63-75) describes eighteen types of kṣaya, namely the ten types which are also found in the Hārītasanhitā, and eight additional ones: kṣaya of śakat (faeces), mūtra (urine), the five malas (excretory products), and ojas. The Suśrutasanhitā (Sū. 15.7-12) distinguishes kṣaya of the three doṣas, the seven bodily elements, the three malas (faeces, urine, sweat), ārtava, stanya, and garbha. Compare Toḍara II: 2.130-162.

- 273 These formulae are of a rasāyana type; the cyavanaprāśa is attributed to Kṛṣṇātreya, the agastiharītakīpāka to Agasti.
- 274 Compare Mādhavanidāna 10.5-7 and the corresponding passages from the Caraka- and Suśrutasamhitā.
- 275 Su.U.41.16-27; compare Mādhavanidāna 10.14-31.
- 276 Cf. Ca.Ni.2.7; Su.U.45.9.
- 277 The Suśrutasamhitā (Ni.2.10-15) distinguishes the same types.
- 278 Compare Su.Ni.2.17 and A.h.Ni.7.56 on polyps and warts. Warts in the anal region (carmakīla; Su.Ni.2.18-20 and A.h. Ni.7.57-58) are not mentioned in the Hārītasaṃhitā.
- 279 The works of Caraka (Ci.18), Suśruta (U.52) and Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.Ni.3) distinguish five types, caused by vāta, pitta, kapha, ksata, and ksaya.
- 280 This distinction is not known from other treatises.
- 281 The types mentioned in other treatises vary; compare Ca.Ci.20, Su.U.49, A.h.Ni.5.
- 282 The types vary in other treatises; compare Ca.Ci.22, Su.U.48, A.h.Ni.5.
- 283 Tāluśoṣa is one of the diseases of the oral cavity (mukharoga) in the Suśrutasaṃhitā (Ni. 16.45) and Vāgbhata's works (A.h.U.21.41ab; A.s.U.25.47).
- 284 The Carakasaṃhitā (Sū.24.35-41) describes four types, arising from vāta, pitta, kapha, and saṃnipāta; the Suśrutasaṃhitā (U.46.7-8) has six types, caused by vāta, pitta, kapha, blood, alcohol, and poison; Vāgbhata (A.h.Ni.6.30cd-35) distinguishes the same varieties as the Carakasaṃhitā.
- 285 The same disorders, with saminyāsa added, are also described in one chapter of the Mā-dhavanidāna (17). Compare Su.Śā.4.56 (bhrama is caused by pitta, vāta and rajas, tandrā by vāta. kapha and tamas, nidrā by kapha and tamas.
- 286 Cf. Ca.Sū.21.55-57; Su.Śā.4.42.
- 287 The same varieties are found in the samhitās of Caraka and Suśruta; the other disorders and complications of abuse of alcohol, described in the Caraka- (Ci.24) and Suśrutasamhitā (U.47) are not mentioned in the Hārītasamhitā.
- 288 Mada belongs to a cluster of disorders, together with murcha and samnyāsa, in the Carakasanhitā (Sū.24). Vāgbhaṭa follows Caraka in describing the same cluster (A.h.Ni. 6.24cd-25 = A.s.Ni.6.24), but he joins them, in the same way as the Hārītasanhitā, to the illnesses resulting from alcoholism. The Suśrutasanhitā does not describe mada as a separate nosological entity. The term mada is often applied to alcoholic intoxication. Compare also Bhela Ci.8.12cd-16 and Su.U.62.5, where the term has a different meaning.
- 289 Gloriosa superba Linn.; the tubers contain toxic alkaloids, chiefly colchicine (see WIRM IV, 140).
- 290 Identified as Cascabela thevetia (Linn.) Lippold = Thevetia neriif olia Juss. ex Steud. and Nerium indicum Mill. = N. odorum Soland. The first of these two plants abounds in all its parts in a milky juice which is highly poisonous (see R.N. Chopra, R.L. Badhwar and S. Ghosh, 1984: 665–668; A.K. Nadkarni (1954): I, 1218–1219; WIRM X, 225–230). All parts of the second one contain cardiac poisons, which also cause a depression of the nervous sytem (see R.N. Chopra, R.L. Badhwar and S. Ghosh, 1984: 655–658; A.K. Nadkarni (1954): I, 847–849; WIRM VII, 15–17).
- 291 Usually identified as Lawsonia inermis Linn., but this plant does not contain toxic principles.
- 292 Probably Cannabis sativa Linn.
- 293 Areca catechu Linn. See on the chemical composition of arecanuts: WIRM I, rev. ed., 405–406. See on the toxicity of the seeds: A.K. Nadkarni (1954): I, 130–133; S.L. Nayar (1954):

- 294 Dāha is a complication of madātyaya in the Suśrutasamhitā (U.47.50 and 54).
- 295 See Su.U.47.53 and 67-68ab.
- 296 Most treatises describe four types, caused by vāta, pitta, kapha and samnipāta (Ca.Sū.19.4 and Ni.8.3; Su.U.61.10cd-11ab; A.h.U.7.5cd; A.s.U.10.6cd; Bhela Ni.8.1; Kāśyapa Sū. 27.52).
- 297 Types of unmāda brought about by a combination of two doṣas are not mentioned in other medical works. Insanity caused by poisonous substances is not described in the Carakasamhitā; the Suśrutasamhitā (U.62.13cd) and the works ascribed to Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.U.6.17 = A.s.U.9.14) acknowledge it as a separate type.
- 298 A type of unmāda caused by emotions is described in the Suśrutasaṃhitā (U.62.12–13ab) and Vāgbhaṭa's works (A.h.U.6.15–16 = A.s.U.9.12–14).
- 299 Possession is dealt with in a separate chapter (III.55).
- 300 The traditional number of eighty is found at 20.15.
- 301 This list is peculiar to the Hārītasamhitā. The diseases mentioned form part of diverse groups in the other medical treatises; some belong to the usual groups of vātavyādhi (manyāstambha, hanugraha, jihvāstambha), others to the groups of karnaroga (karnasūla), śiroroga (śańkhaśūla = śańkhaka, ardhaśīrṣa = ardhāvabhedaka, dinavrddhisamudbhavaroga = sūryāvarta), nāsāroga (nāsikopadrava), and mukharoga (tāluśūla, galaroga); tamaka is a variety of śvāsa; bhrama and tandrā are described in the chapter on mūrchā (III.14); the presence of asṛggada (literally: blood-disease) in the list is difficult to explain.
- 302 Pariśvāsa, as distinct from śvāsa, is not known from other treatises.
- 303 This disease is described in the chapter on mukharoga (III.46.26-28ab).
- 304 Vomiting caused by vāta.
- 305 An affection of the voice.
- 306 This list is, as the preceding one, composite.
- 307 Cf. Ca.Ci.28.50cd-51ab; Su.Ni.1.50cd-58.
- 308 Cf. Ca.Si.9.12-20; A.h.Ni.15.17cd-20; A.s.Ni.15.18-22; Mādhavanidāna 22.28cd-30; Bhela Ci.26.
- 309 Apratānaka seizes one half of the body, ākṣepaka the whole body. The Carakasaṃhitā (Si. 9.12-20) mentions that some authorities distinguish apatānaka from apatantraka on other grounds. Vāgbhaṭa separates the two disorders in the way referred to in the Carakasaṃhitā. Ugrāditya's Kalyāṇakāraka characterizes apatānaka differently (8.15).
- 310 Dandāpatānaka is described in the Suśrutasamhitā as one of the three varieties of apatānaka, which is a form of āksepaka (see Su.Ni. 1.52-53ab and the commentaries).
- 311 The description tallies with ābhyantarāyāma of the Suśrutasaṃhitā (Ni.l.54cd-56).
- 312 The description tallies with bāhyāyāma of the Suśrutasamhitā (Ni. 1.57).
- 313 This variety is also described in the Suśrutasamhitā (Ni.1.58).
- 314 This variety is not known from other treatises.
- 315 Compare ekāngaroga of the Carakasanıhitā (Ci.28.53cd-55) and Vāgbhaṭa's works (A.h. Ni.15.38cd-40ab = A.s.Ni.15.40cd-42ab).
- 316 Compare pakṣāghāta of the Suśrutasaṃhitā (Ni.1.60-61). Pakṣavadha is a synonym of ekāngaroga in Vāgbhaṭa's works.
- 317 Cf. Su.Ni.1.86-87.
- 318 This list is peculiar to the Hārītasamhitā.

- 319 Evidently, the list, peculiar to the Hārītasaṃhitā again, is incomplete.
- 320 These types are absent from the Carakasaṃhitā (Ci.28.41-42) and Suśrutasaṃhitā (Ni.1. 68-72).
- 321 The vāta disease called grdhrasī is dealt with in a separate chapter (III.22).
- 322 The descriptions of āmavāta in the Hārītasarnhitā and the Mādhavanidāna (25) are independent of each other.
- 323 The verses on treatment of the Mādhavacikitsā differ considerably from those of the Hā-rītasaṇṇhitā; the latter's prescriptions are chiefly of a pācana type.
- 324 The Mādhavanidāna describes four types, associated respectively with vāta, pitta, kapha, and sannipāta.
- 325 See Ca.Ci.28.56; Su.Ni.1.74; A.h.Ni.15.54.
- 326 This disease is the same as the vāta disease usually called kroṣṭukaśīrṣa (the reading of the Hārītasaṃhitā is probably corrupt); compare Su.Ni.1.76 and A.h.Ni.15.52.
- 327 Pādaharṣa is usually a member of the group of vāta diseases (see Su.Ni.1.81 and A.h.Ni. 15.55cd-56ab).
- 328 Compare Ca.Ci.29 and A.h.Ni.16, devoted to vātarakta. The Suśrutasamhitā (Ni.1.42-44) describes it among the vāta diseases. Caraka, Suśruta and Vāgbhaṭa distinguish doṣic varieties; the Carakasamhitā has, moreover, two special types, called uttāna and gambhīra.
- 329 See Kāśvapasamhitā, Khila 16; Mādhavanidāna 51.
- 330 Compare Ca.Sū.18 and Ci.12 (śvayathu = śopha); Su.Ci.23; A.h.Ni.13.21-42.
- 331 Caraka (Ni.3 and Ci.5) and Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.Ni.5.32) distinguish types caused by one doṣa, two doṣas, and all three doṣas. Types caused by two doṣas are not referred to in the Su-śrutasanhitā (U.42). Vāgbhaṭa mentions explicitly three types arising from two doṣas. The description of only one dvandvaja type (by pitta and kapha in this case) is very unusual, but probably three dvandvaja types are acknowledged in the Hārītasanhitā, since a second one (by vāta and kapha) is mentioned in the verses on treatment (26.53-55).
- 332 See Ca.Ci.13; Su.Ni.7 and Ci.14; A.h.Ni.12 and Ci.15.
- 333 Cf. Ca.Ci.13.189-90; Su.Ci.14.18; A.h.Ci.15.113-117.
- 334 Cf. Ca.Ni.4; Su.Ni.6; A.h.Ni.10.
- 335 Khatikāmeha is described in Todara's Āyurvedasaukhya (VI: 9.22).
- 336 Pūyameha is described in Todara's Ayurvedasaukhya (VI: 9.23). The Amṛtasāgara mentions it as one of the six types of prameha distinguished by Atreya (III.26). The Bhaisajyaratnāvalī (89) regards pūyameha as a synonym of aupasargikameha (gonorrhoea).
- 337 The Amṛtasāgara (III.26) mentions takrameha as one of the six types of prameha distinguished by Ātreya.
- 338 The Amṛtasāgara (III.26) mentions atimūtraprameha as one of the six types of prameha distinguished by Ātreya.
- 339 Compare on the pramehapidakās: Ca.Sū.17.83-89; Su.Ni.6.14-19; A.h.Ni.10.25-36.
- 340 Unknown from other treatises.
- 341 The Hārītasaṇhitā does not distinguish between mūtrāghāta and mūtrakrcchra (see on the difference between these two disorders: Cakrapāṇidatta ad Ca.Ci.26.43cd-44; Śrīkaṇṭhadatta ad Mādhavanidāna 31.1; Āḍhamalla ad Śārṅgadharasaṇhitā I.7.57cd-59a; Palhaṇa, ad Su.U.59.3, regards them as identical) and does not describe the varieties. See on mūtrāghāta: Ca.Si.9.25-49ab; Su.U.58; A.h.Ni.9. See on mūtrakrcchra: Ca.Ci.26.32-44; Su.U.59; A.h.Ni.9.
- 342 See on aśmarī: Ca.Ci.26.36; Su.Ni.3; A.h.Ni.9.9-18c.

- 343 See on śarkarā: Ca.Ci.26.39-41; Su.Ni.3; A.h.Ni.9.18d-19.
- 344 A ghrtādhyāya is absent from the Sūtrasthāna.
- 345 More types are described in other treatises; see Ca.Ci.12.94-95 (bradhna, identical with vrddhi according to Cakrapānidatta); Su.Ni.12.1-6; A.h.Ni.11.21cd-31.
- 346 This series of eight types is said to consist of seven members (33.2). Caraka, Suśruta and Vägbhaṭa do not recognize a type due to blood; instead, Suśruta (Ni.10.7) and Vägbhaṭa (A.h.Ni.13.65cd-66) describe a traumatic (ksataja) type, connected with pitta and blood.
- 347 Caraka (Ci.21.35-39) and Vāgbhaţa (Ni.13.50-64) describe types called agnivisarpa (by vāta and pitta), granthivisarpa (by vāta and kapha) and kardamavisarpa (by pitta and kapha). Hārīta's āiñeya may be a wrong reading for āgneya.
- 348 The Hārītasaṃhitā is unique in devoting a separate chapter to infectious diseases. The term upasarga and related terms (upasarjanatva, upasṛṣṭa) are employed with regard to infectious diseases in the Suśrutasaṃhitā (Sū.24.7; see the commentaries of Cakrapāṇidatta and Dalhaṇa) and Aṣṭāṇgasaṇgraha (Sū.3.112; see Indu's commentary); equivalent terms are māraka (Indu ad A.s.Sū.3.112), mārī (Dalhaṇa ad Su.Ci.24.91), mahāmārī (J. Filliozat, 1937: 109-110), and janamāra (Bhela Sū.13.8 and 9). Aupasargika (infectious) diseases are mentioned in the Suśrutasaṃhitā (Ni.5.34); an infectious form of prameha, aupasargikameha (gonorrhoea) is described in āyurvedic treatises of a late date (Āyurvedavijñāna, Āyurvijñānaratnākara, Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī, Siddhabheṣa jamanimālā, etc.)
- 349 Compare on vrana: Ca.Ci.25; Su.Sū.21; A.h.U.25. The classifications of the Suśrutasamhitā and Astāngahrdayasamhitā are much more elaborate.
- 350 See on nādīvraņa: Ca.Ci.25.56; Su.Ni.10.9-14.
- 351 Compare on ślīpada: Ca.Ci.12.98; Su.Ni.10.9-14.
- 352 A similar type is mentioned in the Suśrutasamhitā (Ni. 12.12).
- 353 Arbuda is larger than the similar swelling called granthi (A.h.U.29.14d).
- 354 Suśruta (Ni.11.13-21) and Vāgbhaţa (U.29.14d-18ab) describe more varieties. See P. Tivārī (1990): 406, 407, 416.
- 355 This is the only example in ayurvedic literature of a chapter dealing with this combination of diseases
- 356 See on gandamālā: Ca.Ci.12.79; Su.Ni.11.12; A.h.U.29.23-25; A.s.U.34.24-26. Bhoja distinguished four doșic varieties of apaci, a disease he regarded as closely related to gandamālā (see the commentaries of Gayadāsa and Dalhana ad Su.Ni.11.10-12). Gandamālā is related to galaganda in the Carakasamhitā (Ci.12.79). Neither apaci nor galaganda are mentioned in the Hāritasanhitā.
- 357 The usual meaning of lūtā is spider. Eight kinds of poisonous spiders are mentioned in the Suśrutasaṃhitā (Ka.8.94–95); the disorders caused by their bites disagree with the lūtā-vraṇas of the Hārītasaṃhitā. Compare Dalhaṇa ad Ka.8.90–93. Ulcers or sores called lutā(vraṇa), related to those of the Hārītasaṃhitā, are mentioned in a number of texts, such as, for example, the Basa varājīya, Dāmodara's Ārogyacintāmaṇi, Harṣakīrti's Yogacintāmaṇi, Kālidāsa's Vaidyamanoramā, Māhuka's Haramekhalā, the Rājanighaṇṭu, and Śrīkaṇṭhapaṇḍita's Hitopadeśa. A plague caused by the lūtā disease, described as contagious and fatal, and distressing those living in the country of king Bhīmasena, is mentioned in Kalhaṇa's Rājataraṇgiṇī(4.524–528), a work referring to this disease at other places too (6. 185–187; 7.178; 8.1604–1605). Lūtā is referred to in the description of Citragupta's palace in the Pretakalpa of the Garudapurāṇa (14.13) (see E. Abegg, 1956: 189). It is also known as a disorder inthe Vārasaptadoṣa, a textforming part of the Dākinīkalpa (see A. Hermann-Pfandt, 1997: 68–69).

- 358 The types of kuṣṭha are usually divided into a mahā- and kṣudrakuṣṭha group, or a curable and an incurable group. See, for example, Ca.Ci.7.13-26; Su.Ni.5.5; Bhela Ci.6; Kāśyapa, kusthacikitsita.
- 359 Also called kapālyaka (39.7).
- 360 Also called gajacarman (39.8).
- 361 Also called vipādikā (39.10).
- 362 Also called vicarcikā (39.30).

- 368 The pāṇḍuracchavi form of kuṣṭha, mentioned in the verses on treatment (39.50), may be an equivalent of śvitra (compare Ca.Ci.7.173–176).
- 369 The same types, the vātarakta type excepted, are described by Caraka (Sū.17.15-29), Suśruta (U.25.5-11ab; a kṣayaja type is added), and Vāgbhaṭa (U.23).
- 370 Identical with ardhāvabhedaka (Ca.Si.9.74-78; Su.U.25.15-16; A.h.U.23.7cd-8).
- 371 Identical with sūryāvarta (Ca.Si.9.79-83; Su.U.25.11cd-13ab; A.h.U.23.18-20a).

- 376 The synonym khallāṭaka is found at III.43.13; other synonyms are khālitya (Su.Ni.13.33–34) and khalati (Ca.Ci.26.132–133). Āḍhamalla (ad Śārṅgadharasaṃhitā I.7.142) quotes Kārttika as an authority who distinguishes between khālitya and indralupta.
- 377 These varieties are not described by Caraka and Suśruta.
- 378 Cf. Ca.Ci.26.127-128; Su.U.20; A.h.U.17. Specific forms of karnaroga are not described in the Hārītasamhitā. A particular number of ear diseases is not referred to.
- 379 Compare Ca.Ci.26.129-130: caused by vāta, pitta, kapha, and saṃnipāta; Su.U.1.28: caused by vāta, pitta, kapha, blood, and saṃnipāta.
- 380 Timira, paṭala, kāca and nīlikā are varieties of cataract and related disorders (see Su.U.7. 11-18ab).
- 381 The Suśrutasainhitā (U.7.18cd-24) distinguishes the same varieties of cataract (linganāśa).
- 382 More varieties are described by Suśruta (Ni.16.4-12) and Vāgbhata (U.21.3cd-9).
- 383 Compare the more numerous diseases of the teeth described by Suśruta (Ni.16.13-35) and Vägbhata (A.h.U.21.11cd-31ab).

- 447 Compare Su.Sū.13 and Hastyāyurveda IV.34. The Suśrutasaṃhitā and Hastyāyurveda describe six poisonous and six non-poisonous leeches. The indrāyudhā and kṛṣṇā (probably corresponding to Hārīta's kālikā type) form part of Suśruta's poisonous group.
- 448 The same seven varieties are described in the Bhāvaprakāśanighantu (harītakyādi 8-18), Bower MS (II.923-925: trivṛtā takes the place of cetakī), Madanapālanighantu (1.9-15), and Rājanighaṇṭu (11.311-317). The details mentioned do not completely agree and often differ from text to text. The description of the varieties of harītakī in the Hārītasaṃhitā, much longer than the one found in the Bower MS, is the earliest detailed exposition on this subject in āyurvedic literature.

A harītakīkalpa forms also part of the Aśvinīsaṇhitā and the Nāvanītaka of the Bower MS, but is absent from the Bhelasaṇhitā, Carakasaṇhitā and Kāśyapasaṇhitā. Vāgbhaṭa's works contain a short harītakīkalpa (A.h.Ka.2.58-6lab; A.s.Ka.2.75-79).

- 449 A separate chapter on the uses of triphalā does not form part of the other saṃhitās.
- 450 The same varieties are mentioned in the Bhāvaprakāśanighantu (harītakyādi 13), but their characteristics are reversed there.
- 451 Compare the lasunakalpas of the Bower MS, the Kāsyapasaṃhitā (Ka.5) and Vāgbhaṭa's works (A.h.U.39.111-129; A.s.U.49.161-213).
- 452 A guggulukalpa forms part of the Astāngasamgraha (U.49.257-280).
- 453 This is the only passage of the Hārītasarnhitā where the later, especially in Tantric texts prevalent, series of ten kinds of vāta in the human body is referred to.

- 485 P.V. Sharma (1997) identifies katāha as Sterculia villosa Roxb.
- 486 Regarded as tālmakhānā (= Sanskrit kokilāksa = kantaka) in the Hindī translation.
- 487 Regarded as karikola (Piper cubeba Linn.f.) in the Hindī translation.
- 488 Pistā, i.e., the nut of Pistacia vera Linn, according to the Hindī translation.
- 489 Identified as Caesalpinia bonduc (Linn.) Roxb. and Thespesia populnea Soland. ex Correa (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 281 and 1615).
- 490 Rendered as kohalā in the Hindī translation.
- 491 Rendered as rānīmethī in the Hindī translation, which probably means that it is a kind of methikā.
- 492 The same as gudūcī (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 493 The same as mācīka (P.V. Sharma (1997). Makoh, i.e., Solanum nigrum Linn., according to the Hindī translation.
- 494 A type of tāla (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 495 A large kind of Dolichos according to A. Raison (1974: 329).
- 496 Rendered as bakāyan (P.V. Sharma, 1997: a kind of nimba) in the Hindī translation.
- 497 Rendered as mogrī (i.e., a species of Jasminum) in the Hindī translation.
- 498 Trigonella foenum-graecum Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1651).
- 499 Cannabis sativa Linn. according to the Hindī translation.
- 500 Identified as Casearia zeylanica (Gaertn.) Thw. = C. esculenta Roxb. (see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) and Murrayapaniculata (Linn.) Jack = M. exotica Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 342 and 1141).
- 501 The same as tāmbūla (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 502 This may be the same as nartaka, identified as Eleusine coracana Gaertn. and Lobelia nicotianaef olia Roth ex R. et S. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 667 and 1033).
- 503 Interpreted as teśū in the Hindī translation.
- 504 Interpreted as jamālgoṭā (Croton tiglium Linn.) in the Hindī translation.

- 505 Identified as Aristolochia indica Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 161) and Celosia argentea Linn. forma cristata (Linn.) Schinz = C. cristata Linn. (see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 506 The same as indrayava (III.2.66) or devadāru (III.28.20) according to the Hindī translation.
- 507 The same as śanapuspī, i.e., Crotalaria retusa Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 511; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 508 A vegetable poison, having the same colour as ginger.
- 509 The same as śārngavairika.
- 510 A vegetable poison of a yellow colour.
- 511 The same as vāsā (P.V. Sharina, 1997).
- 512 Identified as Anethum graveolens Linn. = A. sowa Kurz, Cinnamomum camphora (Linn.) Presl, Foeniculum vulgare Mill. = F. capillaceum Gilib., and some species of Parmelia (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 133, 403, 771, 1235, 1236).
- 513 Rendered as saphed sāmthī in the Hindī translation, which means that it is regarded as sitāvarsābhū = śvetapunarnavā, identified as Trianthema portulacastrum Linn, = T. monogyna Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1635; WIRM X, 281).
- 514 Rendered as dālcīnī in the Hindī translation, i.e., the same as Sanskrit tvac, identified as Cinnamomum verum Presl (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 409; WIRM III, rev. ed.,
- 515 Rendered as salvan in the Hindi translation, i.e., Desmodium gangeticum (Linn.) DC. (see WIRM III, 41; see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 595). Suparnikā is also identified as Wattakaka volubilis (Linn.f.) Stapf and Psoralea corylifolia Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 641 and 1360).
- 516 Regarded as sūryamukhī, i.e., Helianthus annuus Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 854), in the Hindītranslation.
- 517 A tuberous plant, regarded as ratālū (= Sanskritraktālu) in the Hindī translation. Raktālu is identified as Dioscorea alata Linn., D. bulbifera Linn., and Ipomoea batatas (Linn.) Lam. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 611, 613, 916).
- 518 Regarded as the grass called rohisa in the Hindī translation. Rohisa is usually identified as one or more species of Cymbopogon (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 547, 550, 551).
- 519 The same as bimbī, Coccinia grandis (Linn.) Voigt = C. indica Wight et Arn. = Cephalandra indica (Wight et Arn.) Naud. (see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 450; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 521 Rendered as amlī, i.e., Tamarindus indica Linn., in the Hindī translation.
- 520 The fruit of bimbī (P.V. Sharma, 1997). 522 Not identified in the Hindī translation.
- 523 Unidentified.
- 524 Phoenix sylvestris Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1267).
- 525 Rendered as śālvan in the Hindī translation. See suparnikā.
- 526 Identified as Moringa oleifera Lam. = M. pterygosperma Gaertn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1134).
- 527 Rendered as gorakhmundī, Sphaeranthus indicus Linn., in the Hindī translation.
- 528 Rendered as vidhāyarā in the Hindī translation. Identified as Baliospermum montanum (Willd.) Muell.- Arg. (= dantī) = B. axillare Blume = Croton polyandrus Roxb. (absent from WIRM; see Hooker V, 461-462) by A. Raison (1974: 383).
- 529 Identified as Zea mays Linn. by A. Raison (1974: 386).

- 530 HIM III, 551 and 810. P.V. Sharma (1975a).
- 531 Hārītasamhitā I.3.3 = Siddhasāra 1,33 (see R.E. Emmerick, 1977a: 213).
- 532 Hārīta's chapter on amlapitta is related to that of the Mādhavanidāna on the same subject.
- 533 See on the earliest occurrences of Cannabis: G.J. Meulenbeld (1989).
- 534 The Hārītasamhitā and Vrnda's Siddbayoga are the earliest works prescribing kañcaţa (compare G.J. Meulenbeld, 1985a).
- 535 Māda is described in the Dhanvantarīyanighantu (5.70-71).
- 536 Murāmāmsī is mentioned in Ţoḍara's Āyurvedasaukhya (IV.8.137). It may be the same as the ākāśamāmsī of the Dhanvantarīyanighantu (3.95-96) and the murāhvaya of Tīsata's Cikitsākalikā (see the commentary ad 375). Compare on these names K.V. Billore and M.R. Uniyal (1974).
- 537 Rudra jatā is prescribed in the Cakradatta (mūtrāghāta 12; vrddhi 20).
- 538 The earliest occurrences of tulas ī are found in the Aṣṭāngasaṇŋgraha (U.6.51) and Siddhasā-ranighanu (105)
- 539 Yugandhara is rarely mentioned in āyurvedic literature; see, e.g., Yogaratnākara 21.
- 540 See AVI 136-137 and P.V. Sharma (1975a): 6.
- 541 The author of the printed Hārītasaṃhitā is often regarded as posterior to Vāgbhaṭa (HIM III, 551 and 810; Sūramcandra I, 226–227; Vṛḍdhatrayī 148–149) or at least later than Caraka (V. ŚuklaI, 69–70); P. Cordier (1901a: 83; 1901c: 180) placed him between Caraka and the author of the Mādhavanidāna; P.V. Sharma (AVI 135–137; 1975: 6–7) assigns his treatise to about the twelfth century; some scholars restrict themselves to the remark that the work is rather late (J. Filliozat in L. Renou and J. Filliozat, 1953: 151; A. Raison, 1974: Intr. VIII); J. Jolly (1901: 9; C.G. Kashikar 11) was non-committal. The only one convinced of the antiquity of the Hārītasaṃhitā was Goldstücker (see J. Jolly, 1901: 9; C.G. Kashikar 11).

- 4 Synonymous titles are Rugviniścaya (Hemādri ad A.h.Ni.1.3d-4ab, 2.53ab, etc) and Gadaviniścaya (Siddhayoga 1.2).
- 5 This rogasamgraha is accepted as belonging to Mādhava's text by the author of the Ātankadarpana. The Madhukośa ignores it.
- 6 Mādhava gives no information on his sources, mentioning only that he based his works on the words of various sages (1.2); the compilatory character is also indicated in the first of the concluding verses. The sources are indicated in editions ii, tt, vv, and the translations d and e, but, unfortunately, these indications are incomplete and not always reliable. A detailed concordance of the sources of chapters 1-10, the Siddhasāra excepted, can be found in Appendix one of translation c.
- 7 In many cases it cannot be decided whether the Aṣṭāṅgaḥṛdayasaṇḥitā or the Aṣṭāṅgasaṇ-graha was Mādhava's source, because the contents of the Nidānasthāna of both works are for a large part identical. Some verses, however, are definitely from the Aṣṭāṅgasaṇgraha, e.g., 2.40 = A.s.Ni.2.96cd–97ab; 2.41 = Ni.2.95cd–96ab; 2.42 = Ni.2.100cd–101ab; 2.43 = Ni.2.101cd–102; 6.10 = Sū.11.31; 6.12 = Sū.11.32; 68.10–11 = U.2.97–98; 68.14–15ab = U.2.92–93ab.
- 8 The discovery that Ravigupta's Siddhasāra was one of Mādhava's sources we owe to R.E. Emmerick (see his review of translation c of the Mādhavanidāna). The verses from the Siddhasāra which were incorporated in the Mādhavanidāna (their number is twenty-eight) are indicated in R.E. Emmerick's critical edition of the Sanskrit text of the Siddhasāra. Verses taken from Ravigupta's work are: Mādhavanidāna 2.1-2 and 26; 3.6 and 8; 5.1 and 24ab; 6.1; 10.1; 15.1; 18.1; 21.1; 28.1 and 5; 42.1 and 5; 46.1; 49.23cd and 24; 52.1; 59.4; 64.1; 67.1-3ab and 4ab; 69.1 and 16-18.
- 9 Nidāna 2.39c d and 51.2 are from a tantrāntara (see Cakrapāṇidatta ad Ca.Ci.3.73 and 15. 47; 55.6-7 derive from 'elsewhere' (anyatra) (see Gayadāsa ad Su.Ni.13.9-10).
- 10 See: Agniveśa.
- 11 See, for example, the chapters on ūrustambha (24) and medoroga (34).
- 12 See, for example, the chapters on svarabheda (13; from Su.U.53), arocaka (14; from Ca.Ci. 26), vrdclhi (37; from A.h. or A.s.Ni.11), galaganda, etc. (38; from Su.Ni.11), kṣudraroga (55; from Su.Ni.13).
- 13 See Appendix one of G.J. Meulenbeld (1974). See also 59.16, 19, 65, 66, 68, 69, 96, 97–98.
- 14 See, for example, the chapters on vranasotha (4l; compare Su.Sū.17) and mūḍhagarbha (64; compare Su.Ni.8).
- 15 Examples are 39.1-4 on ślīpada (not based on the verses of A.h.U.29, but loosely related to prose from Su.Ni.12), chapter 44 on bhagna (based on the prose of Su.Ni.15, not on the verses of A.h.U.27), chapter 46 on bhagandara (based on the prose of Su.Ni.4, not on the - verses of A.h.U.28), chapter 47 on upadamáa (related to prose from Su.Ni.12, not based on verses from A.h.U.33).

- 16 Chapters 25 (āmavāta), 26 (śūla), 50 (śītapitta), 51 (amlapitta), 58 (visphoţa), 54 (masūrikā), 63 (yonikanda), 65 (sūtikāroga).
- 17 Examples are: 55.6–7, 9–11, 40cd, 55; 56.1, 20, 25–27; 57.2–4, 9–10, 12–13; 58.11–12, 28; 59.12–13, 19, 65–66, 68, 96–98; 60.11–15; 61.1, 3–5; 63.1, 3–5; 64.3–6, 10–11.
- 18 From Su.U.47, which deals with pānātyaya, etc., as well as with dāha.
- 19 From Su.Ni.10, which deals with visarpa, nādī, and stanaroga.
- 20 Related to Su.Ni.12, concerned with vrddhi, upadamáa, and álīpada; the A.h. describes it in U.33, the chapter on the much larger group of guhyarogas.
- 21 For the greater part from A.h.Ni.13, which describes pānduroga, śopha and visarpa; the Suśrutasamhitā deals with visarpa, nādī and stanaroga in one and the same chapter (Ni. 10). The Siddhasāra has already a separate chapter on visarpa.
- 22 Described in Ca.Ci.30 on yonivyāpad, etc., and in Su.Śā.2.
- 23 From Su.Ni.10, which is about visarpa, nādī and stanaroga.
- 24 The characterization of nidrā and tandrā is from Su.Śā.4; the verses on mūrchā and saṇṇnyāsa are from Ca.Ci.24, Su.U.47, and the Siddhasāra.
- 25 The verses on ānāha are from Su.U.56, those on udāvarta from Ca.Sū.7 and Su.U.55.
- 26 Mādhava's order is: galaganda, gandamālā, apacī, granthi, arbuda; his source, Su.Ni.11, has: granthi, apacī, arbuda, galaganda (garıdamālā is absent).
- 27 Warts on the penis are also referred to in the chapter on haemorrhoids (5.42).
- 28 Minor diseases (kşudrarogas) are not less severe diseases, but those without a number of dosic or other subtypes.
- 29 The list of Su.Ni.13.3 gives forty-four items (actually, forty-eight are described), in agreement with the number of kşudrarogas acknowledged by Brahmadeva (see Dalhana ad Su. Ni.13.3).
- 30 Mādhava regards visphoṭaka, pāmā and vicarcī as not belonging to the group of kṣudrarogas, as does Gayadāsa later (see Dalhana ad Su.Ni.13.3, and Gayadāsa ad Su.Ni.13.18). Mādhava describes visphoṭaka in a separate chapter (53), as well as in the chapter on kuṣṭha (49.21); pāmā and vicarcikā are dealt with in the chapter on kuṣṭha (49.21-23ab); rakasā is absent from the Mādhavanidāna.
- 31 Mādhava devotes a separate chapter to masūrikā (54).
- 32 Mādhava describes carmakīla in the chapter on haemorrhoids (5.43).
- 33 Identified as a mastoid cyst by K.R. Srikanta Murthy (transl. e).
- 34 Mādhava's description has not been borrowed from Vāgbhata.
- 35 A disease occurring in children drinking the breastmilk of a mother who has become pregnant again.
- 36 Eczema according to K.R. Srikanta Murthy (transl. e).
- 37 Compare AVI 241–242 on special features of the Mādhavanidāna. See also G.J. Meulenbeld (1981a).
- 38 See on śūla: A.K. Śarmā (1995).
- 39 The chapter on udāvarta and ānāha separates those on śūla and gulma.
- 40 Visphota is also one of the forms of kṣudrakuṣṭha in the Carakasaṃhitā (Ci.7.25), the works of Vāgbhata (A.h.Ni.14.27cd-28a; A.s.Ni.14.29), and the Mādhavanidāna (49.22).
- 41 The term āmavāta occurs in the Aṣṭāṅgasaṃgraha as designating a disorder (Ci.18.5); usually, it denotes vātaaccompanied by āma. See on āmavāta: F.Zimmermann (1995): 27–28.

- 42 Compare Ca.Ci.29 on vātašonita or vātarakta, a disease also often thought to comprise rheumatic conditions. See on the history of rheumatic disorders: T.G. Benedek and G.P. Rodnan (1982); R.S. Hormell (1940).
- 43 Parināmašūla may be related to annadoşasamudbhavašūla of the Suśrutasaṃhitā (U.42. 142–144). See on parināmašūla: P.V. Chandrasekaran et al. (1971).
- 44 See on medoroga: S.N. Tripathi et al. (1971-1975).
- 45 See on śītapitta: R.R. Desāī (1984); S. Mishra and D. Ojha (1991b).
- 46 The sixth verse is not on sītapitta, but on kotha and utkotha.
- 47 Udarda is one of the twenty kaphavikāras in the Carakasaṃhitā (Sū.20.17); the term is also found at Ca.Sū.4.8, Ni.7.6, I.5.19; koṭha and utkoṭha form part of the kṣudrarogas in the works ascribed to Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.U.31.32–33ab = A.s.U.36.30). See on these three disorders: R.R. Desāī (1984); S. Mishra and D. Oiha (1991b).
- 48 See Ca.Ci.15.47 (Cakrapāṇidatta's commentary appears to quote, without referring to it by name, Mādhavanidāna 50.2), A.h.Ni.5.42 = A.s.Ni.5.44, and Indu ad A.s.Sū.13.2. The Carakasaṃhitā (Sū.26.43) mentions amlapitta as a disorder (vikāra) caused by the use of substances with a salt taste; the same work refers to it as a disorder brought about by the ingestion of disagreeing foods (Sū.26.103). Dalhaṇa (ad Su.Sü.21.11) remarks that some regardamlapitta as a disease. The Bhelasaṃhitā (Kalpasthāna 6.11) mentions amlapitta once as a vikāra. Noteworthy is a remark by Indu (ad A.s.Sū.5.27–34ab), who says that pramīlaka is the same as amlapitta, also called pittaviṣūcikā. See on amlapitta in āyurvedic literature: S.N. Tripathi and R.N. Mishra (1962): 94–107; V.K. Tripathi and K. Kanta (1980). See on a contemporary āyurvedic interpretation of amlapitta: A. Bottéro (1991): 306–307.
- This verse is found in Vangasena (amlapitta 12).
 The term masūrikā is also applied to one of the types of pramehapiḍakā (boils arising in patients with prameha, especially madhumeha, i.e., diabetes mellitus and other forms of glycosuria); see Su.Ni.6.18ab = Mādhavanidāna 33.32cd, A.h.Ni.10.32ab = A.s.Ni.10.12.

- 151 Described in the chapter on atisāra of the Mādhavanidāna (3.22); neither Vṛnda's Sid-dhayoga nor the Cakradatta have a separate chapter on pravāhikā.
- 152 Described in the second part of the chapter on unmāda (20) of the Mādhavanidāna. The Siddhavoga and Cakradatta do not have a separate chapter on this subject.
- 153 Described in the chapter on vātavyādhi of the Mādhavanidāna (22.54-55ab). The Sid-dhayoga and Cakradatta do not contain a separate chapter on this disease.
- 154 Described in the chapter on udara of the Mādhavanidāna (35.15cd-17). The Cakradatta has a separate chapter on plīhavakrccikitsā.
- 155 Not described in the Mādhavanidāna. The Siddhayoga has a similar chapter on śothodara (the same as śophodara); śothodara is a complication of udara according to the commentary on the Siddhayoga.

- 156 Not described in the Mādhavanidāna.
- 157 Not described in the Mādhavanidāna.
- 158 The Cakradatta also deals with visarpa and visphota in one chapter.
- 159 The Mādhavanidāna has three chapters on the subject (vraņaśotha, śārīravraṇa, sadyovraṇa); the Siddhayoga deals with it in two chapters (vraṇaśotha and āgantuvraṇa), the Cakradatta in one chapter (vranaśotha).
- 160 The chapter on garbharakṣā deals with rules for the preservation of the health of a pregnant woman and her child; many bali offerings are mentioned, together with the accompanying mantras.
- 161 The Siddhayoga has chapters on pradara, yoniroga and strīroga, the Cakradatta on asr-gdara, yonivyāpad and strīroga.
- 162 See on these diseases in Sanskritmedical literature: G.J. Meulenbeld (1981b). See on dracontiasis (snāyuka) also C. Vogel (1961).
- 163 AVI 260. S. Dādhīca's Intr. to his edition of the Mādhavacikitsā.
- 164 The chapter on snāyuka differs in some respects from the group of verses on the same subject in the Siddhayoga. The chapter on somaroga contains a characterization of mūtrātisāra (identical with somaroga in this case), which constitutes the sole example of the description of a disease in the Mādhavacikitsā.
- 165 CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 143. See AVI 260 for the titles of the chapters in this manuscript, in which those on kaumārabhttya are unfortunately missing, which makes it impossible to verify whether or not somaroga was dealt with in this version of the Mādhavacikitsā. It remains unknown whether all or part of the three MSS used for the edition of the Mādhavacikitsā contain the verses on snāyuka and somaroga, since the edition has no critical apparatus.
- 166 Some examples are 7.2-4 and 6; 37.6-7; 39.6 and 12.
- 167 Hyoscyamus nigerLinn., prescribed for the first time in the Siddhayoga (7.1).
- 168 Some species of Datura, prescribed in the Siddhayoga (7.13).
- 169 See Siddhayoga 56.8 and 30; 68.6. In general, religious and magical elements are not absent from the Mādhavacikitsā; mantras (e.g., garbharakṣā 1-2, bālaroga 35, rasāyana 30) are repeatedly found and two yantras (the ubhayatriṃśaka- and ubhayapañcadaśakayantra) promoting an easy delivery are described (strīroga 28-29; compare Siddhayoga 65.19 and Cakradatta, strīroga 10).
- 170 Examples are bihadagnimukhacūrņa (Siddhayoga 6.33-42 = Cakradatta, agnimāndyādi 30-38), kbandakhādyaloha (Siddhayoga 9.65-79 = Cakradatta, raktapitta 82-96ab), kaišorakaguggulu (Siddhayoga 23.34-42), punamavāguggulu (Siddhayoga 23.50-55 = Cakradatta, vātarakta 61-66), yogasārāmita (Siddhayoga 23.56-61 = Cakradatta, vātarakta 67-71), and gudamandūra (Siddhayoga 27.31-36 = Cakradatta, parināmasūla 36-41: tārāmandūraguda).

- Examples are: māñjiṣṭhakaghṛta (jvara 117: said to derive from Bheḍa); kuṭajapuṭapāka (atisārapravāhikā 175: honoured by Kṛṣṇātriputra); nāgarādyacūrṇa (grahaṇī 5: honoured by Kṛṣṇātreya); kāṅkāyanaguṭikā (arśās 40: taught by Kāṅkāyana to his pupils); a bhallātakavidhi (arśas 44-45: expounded by Gorakṣita); kuṣmāṇḍakarasāyana (raktapitta 29 and 30: derivingfrom the Aśvins); agastyaharītakī (kāṣa 41: devised by Agasti); khaṇḍāmalakīrasāyana (śūla 36: honoured by Kṛṣṇātreya); mahāpadmakaghṛta (visarpaviṣphoṭa 21: devised by Āstīka; the same recipe, called padmakādighṛta, is found at Vaidyacintāmaṇi 480, and, called padmakaghṛta, at Yogaratnākara 715); puṣyānugacūrṇa (pradara 9: honoured by Ātreya). An agada, ascribed to Āstīka, is found in the Cikitsākalikā (387); Āstika is mentioned at A.s.U.42.102 and 48.52-54. See on Āstīka: Dowson; HIM III, 855-856; Hopkins; C. Minkowski (1991); S. - 180 The Mādhavacikitsā contains at least more than forty verses which are borrowed from the Siddhasāra. Caraka, Suśruta, Vāgbhaṭa, and Cakṣuṣyeṇa are quoted according to P.V. Sharma (AVI 261). These authorities are not quoted by name, but borrowings, at least from the first three, are frequent: for example, nāgarādyacūrṇa, agastyaharītakī, and puṣyānugacūrṇa derive from Caraka (Ci. 15.129-131, 18.57-62, 30.90cd-96ab).
- 181 The colophon of the Poona MS (CBORI XVI, I, Nr. 143) says that the Mādhavacikitsita is by Mādhava, son of Candrakara.
- 182 According to D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 146. Compare: Niścalakara.

- 183 The first stanza of the Mādhavacikitsā is quoted ad Siddhayoga 1.23, without indication of the source; a citation from a work by Mādhava ad 1.24 may be from his Cikitsā; some work of Mādhava, probably, though not definitely, the Cikitsā, is quoted ad 61.9.

- 185 Ad Mādhavanidāna 1.14cd-15ab. A variant reads Praśnasahasranidāna.
- 186 Hemacandra's Abhidhānacintāmaņi (ed. 1964; 2.170) and Rājašekhara's Kāvyamīmāṃ-sā (2.7) define a vārttika: uktānuktaduruktacintākāri vārttikam, i.e., a vārttika examines what has been expounded, what has not been expounded and what has been expounded imperfectly (see N.V.P. Unithiri, 1980–81: 576). See on vārttika also: M. Mishra (1996): 29–40. The most famous vārttikas are those of Kātyāyana (on Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī) and Kumārila (on the Śabarabhāsya).
- 187 Ad A.h.Sū.6.161cd-163ab.
- 188 Ad Cakradatta, jvara 41-42 (Mādhavakara) and vātavyādhi 1 (Mādhava).
- 189 Ad Cakradatta, jvara 42 (= Su.U.39.146cd-147ab). Niścala rejects Mādhava's view, as does Bhavyadatta in his Vaidyapradīpa; Dalhana refers to Mādhava's opinion on the subject without mentioning his name.
- 190 Niścala informs us that Mādhava agrees with Jejjata on this subject.
- 191 Ad Cakradatta, vātavyādhi 3-5.
- 192 Ad Mādhavanidāna 1.5d-6.
- 193 The series consists of Jejjata, Vāpyacandra, Mādhavakara, and Kārttikakunda.

- 203 Ad Cakradatta, raktapitta 14; udara 27-30.
- 204 Niścala's quotations and references occur in passages dealing with the elucidation of verses borrowed from Caraka.
- 205 Niścala ad Cakradatta, jvara 284; kāsa 59–64; unmāda 29–30; apasmāra 7–8; gulma 9–10 and 17; udara 27–30 and 57; śotha 15–16 and 48–51; kamaroga 23–24.
- 206 A puzzling statement regarding Mādhavakara is found in Niścala's comments ad rā-jayakṣman 40-46, where his Vaidyaprasāra is quoted; a variant mentions the Vaidyasāra of Govardhana, Mādhavakara and Gopati.
- 207 Mādhava sometimes disagrees with Jejjata; see Niścala ad apasmāra 7-8 and śotha 15-16.
- 208 Ad Cakradatta, hikkāśvāsa 30-33. The quotation is of the same type as those from the Yogavyākhyā.

Das Gupta (1936/37: 160), considering that the term arogyaśaliya might point to Vijayarakṣita's being a Buddhist, because arogyaśalin is an epithet of the Buddha and of Avalokiteśvara, observed that the term is not easy to explain; he expressed his doubts about Vijayarakṣita openly professing Buddhism in the age in which he lived (N.N. Das Gupta adhered to Hoernle's date of Vijayarakṣita, i.e., about 1240).

Sharma (1976: 73; 1993: Intr. 32) rejects this evidence, claiming that it was a tradition among authors to call their compilations Sāstra Madhukośa in view of their being collected from various sources, just as the honey in the combs of a bee-hive is collected from various flowers. In order to substantiate this claim, he refers to the concluding verses of Kāśīrāma's commentary on the Śārngadharasamhitā; Kāśīrāma, however, though comparing the author to a bee that collects honey, does not employ the term madhukośa.

- 273 Madhukośa ad Nidāna 59.29.
- 274 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya's date of Arunadatta is about 1150, after Śrikanthadatta (see: Arunadatta).
- 275 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 130-131) supposed that the doctrine on the structure of the eye, rejected by Śrīkanthadatta, almost certainly refers to an old interpretation, already controverted by Indu (ad A.s.U.15.2); P.V. Sharma (1976: 73; 1993: Intr. 32-33) thinks that Indu (placed by him in A.D. 1250) refers to Arunadatta (dated by him in 1225) and agrees with Śrīkanthadatta.
- 276 Madhukośa ad Nidāna 5.31-32.
- 277 P.V. Sharma assigns Śrīkanthadatta to the twelfth century (AVI 214) or A.D. 1200 (1976: 80; 1993: Intr. 38). D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 137) regards him as a fellow pupil of Niścalakara. Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982: 570) places Śrīkantha in the fourteenth century.
- 278 P.V. Sharma (1993); Intr. 38.

- 280 P.V. Sharma (1993): Intr. 5, 26, 39. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 466) ascribes the Amrtavallī and the Vaidyahitopadeśa to Śrīkanthadatta.
- 281 See Niścala ad Cakradatta, karnaroga 30 (= Siddhayoga 59.26); Niścala refers here to (Śrī)kanthacakra, which made P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 26) suggest that Śrīkantha(datta) may have written a commentary on the Cakradatta.
- 282 See: Niścala.
- 283 See editions cc, ii and oo of the Mādhavanidāna; ed. 1920 of ii has a complete text of Vā-caspati's commentary. Two MSS of the Ātankadarpaņa, not indicated as such, are recorded in the Cat. Mysore (XIII, Nrs. 42244 and 42245).
- 284 Dalhana's commentary on the Suśrutasannhitā was one of the sources frequently consulted by Vācaspati.
- 285 Vācaspati acknowledges that he consulted the Madhukośa.
- 286 The same quotation, without indication of its source, is found in the Madhukośa.
- 287 Paryäyaratnamālā 1506b is quoted.
- 288 This unidentified quotation is absent from the Madhukośa.
- 289 See also Hariścandra.
- 290 CC: not recorded.
- 291 Compare Gavadāsa.
- 292 The same quotation is said to be from Pālakāpya in the Madhukośa.
- 293 Two quotations from Gayadāsa in the Madhukośa (ad 2.18-25 and 28.2) are ascribed to Gadādhara by Vācaspati; the reverse situation is found in the comments ad Nidāna 2.40 and 16.1-2.
- 294 Compare Bhattārakahariścandra.
- 295 See NCC VII, 132.
- 296 Probably Kātyāyana's Vārttikas on Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī.
- 297 The Madhukośa attributes this quotation to Caksusya.
- 298 This list is probably incomplete.
- 299 See Todara II, Intr. 33.
- 300 This Vācaspati is sometimes regarded as the author of the Ātankadarpana (STMI 244).
- 301 Called Mahammada by Vācaspati.
- 302 A.F.R. Hoernle (1978): 17. Hoernle was inaccurate in claiming that Pramoda was chief physician to Mahamada Hammīra, which led him to a wrong identification of Pramoda's patron.

- 307 CC I, 276 and 754: Hammīracarita by Nayacandra. NCC IX, 346. M. Winternitz (III, 94) dated this poem to the fifteenth century, but it must be earlier since its author was a contemporary of Hammīra, the last of the Cāhamānas. S.N. Dasgupta and S.K. De (1947: 363), however, also assign the work to the fifteenth century. G.N. Sharma (1975: 244) places it in the fourteenth century; he adds that on some indications provided by the author the poem appears to have been completed in or about A.D. 1400. See on this Hammīra: D.C. Ganguly (1989a): 83–86; R.C. Majumdar (1948): 302. See on Nayacandra's poem: S.N. Dasgupta and S.K. De (1947): 363; D.C. Ganguly (1989a): 84–86; G.N. Sharma (1975): 244; Krishnamachariar (1989): 206–207.

- 308 See on him: R.C. Majumdar (1980).
- 309 V. Śukla (I, 133) agrees with P.V. Sharma in identifying Hammīra as the king of Ranthambhor; he assigns Vācaspati to the end of the thirteenth or the beginning of the fourteenth century. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 467) places Vācaspati in the thirteenth or fourteenth century.
- 310 See S. Dutta (1980): 326-329; R.C. Majumdar (1948): 303 and 386-387. According to S. Dutta (1980: 359-360) this Hammīra reigned from A.D. 1314 to 1378 (these dates were accepted by J. Filliozat, 1974), while others give the period of his rule as 1301-1365; he assumed the title of Mahārāṇā after seizing Chitor and establishing his authority over the whole of Mewār (R.C. Majumdar, 1980: 70). Besides the Hammīras referred to, there is at least one more king of this name, to whom a quasi-historical play, called Hammīramadamardana, by Jayasiṃha Sūri, is devoted (S.N. Dasgupta and S.K. De, 1947: 478; Krishnamachariar, 1989: 202-203; M.A. Mehendale and A.D. Pusalker, 1989: 311-312; M. Winternitz III, 251). This play, written in A.D. 1230, describes the defeat of Sultan Śams-ud-Dīn Dunyā, called Hammīra, by the Caulukya king Vīradhavala.

This edition, which has seventy-two chapters, arranged slightly differently from those in ed. a (four chapters on jvara, separate chapters on jvarātisāra and atisāra), omits those on sneha, etc.; moreover, some verses are missing here and there.
- c sārtha vṛndamādhava athavā siddhayoga, edited with Marāṭhī translation by Datto Ballāṭa Borkar, Yaśavant Press, Poona 1922 [BL.14043.ccc.7; IO.San.D.262(a, b)]. References are to ed. a. The name of the author (Vṛnda) and the title of his work (Siddhayoga) are mentioned in the second verse and the very last one. The chapter colophons mention Vṛndamādhava as an alternative title.
- 2 Prose is found at 1.227; between 30.25 and 26; between 34.1 and 2, 8 and 9, 20 and 21; at the end of 48; between 78.1 and 2.
- 3 It is remarkable that Vinda does not refer to the Mādhavacikitsā.
- 4 These remarks are called prastāvavākya.
- 5 These topics include the physician and his patient, weights and measures, etc.
- 6 E.g., 1.24-25ab (a characterization of fever); 3.14-15 (on āma- and nirāmātisāra) and 65 (on pravāhikā); 22.34 (a definition of kubja).
- 7 The Mādhavacikitsā also has a separate chapter on śophodara (= śothodara). Cakrapānidatta rejected this arrangement in his Cakradatta (see Niścala ad udara 55–56).
- 8 Āgantuvraņa corresponds to sadyovraņa of the $M\bar{a}dhavanid\bar{a}na$.
- 9 Yoniroga corresponds to yonivyāpad of the Mādhavanidāna.
- 10 Strīroga includes mūḍhagarbha, sūtikāroga, stanaroga and stanyaduṣṭi of the Mādhavanidāna.
- 11 Siddhayoga 64.37.
- 12 The differences in the arrangement of the chapters between the Mādhavanidāna and the Siddhayoga are not due to the editors, but reflect, at least partly, an old tradition, as appears from remarks in the commentary (see the introductory comments to chapters 2 and 27).

- 43 See the commentary ad Siddhayoga 1.49, a verse absent from the Cakradatta. Śivadāsasena quotes the verse and regards it as deriving from Jejjata.
- 44 In spite of the references to Mādhava's Rogaviniścaya in the Siddhayoga and its commentary, the Mādhavacikitsā is never mentioned. Verses common to Mādhavacikitsā and Siddhayoga may derive from common sources; examples are: Mādhavacikitsā, jvara 175 = Siddhayoga 3.46-48; Mādhavacikitstī, grahaņī 2 = Siddhayoga 4.6; grahaņī 3 = Siddhayoga 4.8-9.

- 94 Introductory remarks a d Siddhayoga 55.14. See about dracontiasis in Persia the account of the Dutch traveller Jan Huyghen van Linschoten (see the quotation in D.V.S. Reddy, 1971: 35); François Bernier, a famous French traveller of the seventeenth century, described the disease as occurring in Delhi (see: Anonymous, 1964c: 50–51).
- 95 See A.h.Ci.21.33; A.s.Ci.15.17 and 18.9, Ka.4.11 and 5.55. The Bhelasaṃhitā is also acquainted with a disorder called vardhma (Ci.5.36 and 45; 24.1). The disease called bradhna in the Carakasaṃhitā may be related to vardhma (see Ca.Ni.3.7; Ci.7.67; 9.56; 12.94; 28. 25). In addition, bradhna is an anatomical term in the Carakasaṃhitā, denoting the rectum (guda; see Cakrapāṇi ad Ca.Sū.14.17 and Vi.7.23); Vijayarakṣita, however, regards it as a term designating the groin (ad Mādhavanidāna 22.10). The Kāṣyapasaṃhitā (dhātrīcikitsā-dhyāya) refers to bradhna as a disorder caused by vāta. Later authorities employ either bradhna or vardhma for the same disease; P.V. Sharma (AVI 236–237) holds that, originally, bradhna and vardhma were two different disorders. Some sources consider bradhna to be a synonym of the disease usually called vṛddhi (see, e.g., Paryāyaratnamālā 1415).
- 96 Vṛnda borrowed his definition of vardhma (= bradhna) from Mahīdhara's Viśvavallabhā according to Niścalakara ad Cakradatta, vrddhi 22.
- 97 P.V. Sharma (AVI 236-237) supposes it to be lymphogranuloma venereum; this virus disease, however, is found especially in West Africa and in North and South America (see Ph.H. Manson-Bahr, 1966: 582). The Kusumāvalī mentions vāḍḍhosī as the vernacular word for vardhma (ad Siddhayoga 40.19-20).
- 98 Siddhayoga 3.69 (see the commentary). Vijayaraksita (ad Mādhavanidāna 3.21) remarks that Hārīta employs the term niścāraka for the disorder usually called pravāhikā. Compare Kaiyadeva 8.255; niścāraka = pravāhikā.
- 99 Ca.Sū.20.11.
- 100 A.h.Ni.15.14 = A.s.Ni.15.15.
- 101 Hyoscyamus niger Linn., the henbane. This plant is a very old drug, already used by the Assyrians; it is recommended against tooth-worms in the Compositiones of Scribonius Largus in the first half of the first century A.D. (see B.R. Townend, 1944: 46). Pārasī-kayavānī is also identified as Artemisia scoparia Waldst. et Kit. (G.V. Satyavati, M.K. Raina and M. Sharına, 1976: 94–96) and A. maritima Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 169).
- 102 Several species of Datura are called dhattūra.
- 103 This became a favourite indication in later treatises. See on aśoka: T.B. Middelkoop (1985); T.K. Biswas and P.K. Debnath (1972).
- 104 This recipe, which became famous in later times, is not yet found in the Mādhavacikitsā. See on the nāgārjunavarti: P.V. Sharma (1993c): 36-37.

- 105 See P.V. Sharma's long list (AVI 263-266). See also ABI 271-272; Satyaprakāś (1960): 229-231.
- Siddhayoga 22.67 and 46.12; ābhā is related to babbūla, a species of Acacia, but the author of the commentary appears to be unacquainted with the source of the drug (he calls it a commercially available substance and regards it as identical with guggulu). Ābhā is already prescribed in the Mādhavacikitsā (bhagnavrana 10).
- 107 Siddhayoga 55.17 (see the commentary).
- 108 Siddhayoga 70.20; Vṛnda adds that carmakārāluka may be used as a substitute. Śivadā-sasena (ad Cakradatta, vṛsya 15-24) criticizes Vṛnda's views on this subject.
- Mercury is applied externally only (7.13: rasendra; the term rasottama, used at 44.55, may designate mercury). P. Räy (1956: 109 and 309–310) claims that Vında mentions two preparations containing sulphides of mercury (parpaţītāmra and rasāmṭtacūrna); Räy's references could not be verified. The killing (mārana) of iron was known to Vinda (5.90–97). See on recipes containing inorganic substances: special features of Cakrapāni's Cikitsāsameraha.
- 110 See, for example: 1.268; 68.6ab; 69.27.
- 111 Siddhayoga 65.18-19. This yantra is already found in the Mādhavacikitsā.
- 112 Siddhayoga 26.58.
- 113 Siddhayoga 68.6d (śūnyatādhyāna is mentioned; the commentary is silent on the interpretation); this ardhaśloka is absent from the Mādhayacikitsā.
- 114 Siddhayoga 51.24-28 (see AVI 267-268).
- 115 The commentator observes on the word cūrnapradehāḥ (51.27cd) that Vṛnda explained it as cūrnāni pradehāś ca. P.V. Sharma (AVI 211) regards it as probable that an author called Vṛnda wrote a commentary on the Carakasamhitā; in P.V. Sharma's view this Vṛndadiffers from the author of the Siddhayoga and belongs to the eleventh century.
- Bharatamallika states in his Candraprabhā that Vṛnda, the author of a medical treatise, was a resident of Eastern Bengal (vangabhūmi); the relevant stanza is quoted by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 155. See on Vanga: N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 304; B.C. Law (1984): 267-269; S. Saxena (1995): 290-296. Atrideva (ABI 271) is convinced that Vṛnda belonged to the western part of India, since he refers to diseases prevalent there; this claim is inaccurate, because not Vṛnda himself, but the commentator, mentions these diseases (introductory remarks ad Siddhayoga 55.14).
- 117 See Niścala ad Cakradatta, kuṣṭha 24; compare Siddhayoga 51.16. See on Varendra: N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 306.
- 118 A.F.R. Hoernle (1906a): 288–290. S. Dasgupta (1975: II, 435) accepted Hoernle's view with some caution, but it was rejected by most of the authors writing on the subject, with the exception of P. Kutumbiah (1962).
- 119 AVI 211.
- 120 The Vṛndaṭippaṇakāra is quoted by Āḍhamalla ad Śārngadharasaṃhitā II.8.14. K.R. Srikanta Murthy (1992: 260) regards Vṛnda, the author of the Siddhayoga, as a commentator or writer of glosses on the Carakasaṃhitā; Srikanta Murthy refers to the Kusumāvalī ad Siddhayoga 51.27, which does not prove his point (see the references to Vṛnda in the Kusumāvalī).

- 125 The Kusumāvalī (ad Siddhayoga 57.84) claims that Cakrapānidatta's Cikitsāsamgraha contains a prescription that is very close to one found in the Haramekhalā. Compare the references to the Haramekhalā in Niścala's Ratnaprabhā.
- 126 AVI 262-263.
- 127 P.V. Sharma assigns Jejjata to the ninth century (AVI 207-208).
- 128 M.Z. Siddiqi (1957): 279; (1959): 34, 41, 43.
- 129 Al-Ya'qūbī mentions an Indian medical work, called sindhshār, which is rendered in Arabic as şafw al-nujh, i.e., quintessence of success. See on this work FR. Dietz (1833): 118; M. Steinschneider (1871): 489-490; A. Stenzler (1857): 327; M. Ullmann (1970): 105. A work called sindhstāq, also identified as the Siddhayoga by M.Z. Siddiqi, is quoted by al-Rāzī according to Ibn Abī Uṣaybi'a (M.Z. Siddiqi, 1959: 43). See on this subject R.E. Emmerick (1981).
- 130 See R.E. Emmerick (1981).
- 131 Atrideva (ABI270) places Vṛnda in the ninth or tenth century; other dates are: eighth or ninth century (S. Dasgupta, 1975: II, 427), ninth century (K.R. Srikanta Murthy, 1992: 261), middle of the tenth century (G.P. Srivastava, 1954: 100), and around A.D. 1000 (Jaggi IV, 34, 35). Compare on Vṛnda's chronological position: K.R. Srikanta Murthy (1992: 260-261).
- 132 The CC(II,83 and 143) and NCC (XIII, 237) call the author Balabhadra, but his name is Balibhadra in the introductory verses.
- 133 CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 240: quotes various works and authors; its name indicates that it is perhaps a supplement to the Vṛndasamgraha. P.V. Sharma (AVI 267) supposes it to be a commentary on the Siddhayoga.
- 134 See on editions those of the Siddhayoga.
- 135 Ad Siddhayoga 22.68ab (vṛndasya vyākhyā) and 154cd (vṛndasya vyākhyākārali). K.R. Srikanta Murthy (1992: 264) is in doubt whether the tippanīs of Lakṣmaṇa and Soma were glosses on the Siddhayoga or on the Suśrutasaṃhitā. See: commentaries on the Suśrutasaṃhitā.

- 143 Quoted in the Kusumāvalī ad Siddhayoga 57.71, which consists of a verse from an unidentified source.
- 144 He calls himself Śrīkantha in the introductory verses. Nārāyana refers to him as Śrīkanthapandita (ad Siddhayoga 73.15). See on Śrīkantha: commentaries on the Mādhavanidāna.
- 145 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 131. The very first author to throw light on Nārāyaņa's part in the revision of the Kusumāvalī was probably *D.K. Shastri (1942) (see P.K. Gode, 1950b: 177-178).
- 146 It is unknown whether MSS exist with Śrīkanthadatta's text, without Nārāyana's additions.

- 153 Identified by P.K. Gode (1940a) as either Ahmedabad or Himmatnagar in Gujarāt.
- 154 Ananta calls himself bhişagvidyāvid; he refers to his father as bhūpatīnām bhişagvaraḥ and gajāyurvedavettā vai dhanvantarir ivāparah.
- 155 G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 467) regards Nārāyanabhaṭṭa, whom he places in the thirteenth century, as the author of two more medical works: the Kanthaprakāśa and the Vaidyacintāmani; he also attributes to him a commentary, called Padyadyotinī, on the Gītagovinda.

- 169 Medhāvin agrees with Bhattāraka(hariścandra); Cakra disagrees with their interpretation. It may be that medhāvin is not a proper name; it is also possible to read medhāvinah.
- 170 Mentioned in the context of the nagarjunanjana or -varti.
- 171 I.e., the Mādhavanidāna.
- 172 Quoted on the subject of desa- and okasātmya.
- 173 The quotation may be from the treatise of (Vijaya)raksita known to Niścalakara.

Chapter 7 Cakrapānidatta

- 1 NCC VI, 284.
- 2 See: commentaries on the Carakasamhitā.
- 3 See: commentaries on the Suśrutasamhitā.
- 4 NCC: not recorded. P.V. Sharma (AVI 272 and 307) regards the term gūḍhavākyabodhakavākyavant in Cakrapāṇi's introduction to the Cikitsāsaṃgraha as pointing to an earlier treatise called Gūḍhavākyabodhaka, parts of which were incorporated by Cakrapāṇi in his new book; this Gūḍhavākyabodhaka is known in a single MS (Sarasvatībhavan Nr. 44763; see AVI 307). Herambasena, son of Śubhasena, was the author of a Gūḍhabodhakasaṃgraha, which work was based on Cakrapāṇi's Gūḍhavākyabodhaka according to P.V. Sharma, who adduces in support of his view that Herambasena salutes in the introductory verses Cakrapāṇi, Maheśvara and Nityanātha, and professes that his treatise is a summary compiled from Rasaratnākara, Cakra, Maheśvara and other works (see NCC VI, 95, STMI 82–83; Cat. IO Nr. 710). N.N. Das Gupta (1936/37: 157) regards the Gūḍhavākyabodhaka as identical with a Cikitsāsāra, a therapeutic treatise attributed to Cakrapāṇi; this Cikitsāsāra, however, is not referred to by any other author.
- 5 NCC VI, 284: a medical lexicon. ABI 177: describes the properties of drugs. Bhagvat Sinh Jee 210.
- 6 CC I, 175 and 702; III, 146. NCC: not recorded among the works of Cakrapāṇidatta. Atrideva (ABI 318) mentions a Sārasaṃgraha by Cakrapāṇi. Atrideva (ABI 319) and G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 470) claim that Viśvanāthasena, paṇḍit at the court of the Gajapati king Pratāparudra and author of the Pathyāpathyaviniścaya, wrote a commentary, called Sārasaṃgraha, on Cakrapāṇi's Sarvasārasaṃgraha. P.V. Sharma (AVI 210) also refers to this commentary. N.N. Das Gupta (1936/37: 157) was doubtful about the identity of the author of the Sarvasārasaṃgraha (see his references to some MSS of the work). G.N. Mukerjee (1927: 19) mentions the Sārasaṃgraha as a work on treatment, distinct from the Cikitsāsaṃgraha. A MS of the Sarvasārasaṃgraha (Cat. Skt. MSS. N.-W. P. I, 586, Medicine Nr. 21) probably contains the Cakradatta.
- 7 This work, apparently on grammar, is attributed to Cakrapāṇi by P.V. Sharma (AVI 210) and Haridattaśarman (upodghāta to ed. ee of the Carakasaṇihitā, page pha: title Wākaranacandrikā).
- 8 Cakrapāņi does not mention the title of his work; he refers to it as a (yoga)samgraha, i.e., a collection of prescriptions. It should be avoided to call Cakrapāņi's treatise Cikitsāsārasamgraha, which is the title of Vangasena's work.

- 10 Prose occurs in the chapter on balaroga.
- 11 An exception is formed by a verse (jvara 188) on the fevers called abhinyāsa and hataujas, not described in the Mādhavanidāna. See Niścala's comments on this verse.
- 12 See Niścala's comments ad plīhayakṛt 1.
- 13 Compare the arrangement of the chapters in Vinda's Siddhayoga.
- 14 Yonivyāpad 16 (identical with Siddhayoga 64.37): the commentary equates bhagaphala with kandaroga.
- 15 See Niścala ad madātyaya 21–22. The majority of the editions of the Cakradatta consulted have a separate chapter on dāha. See also Niścala's more general criticism of Vrnda (ad vranaśotha 48), his rejection (ad udara 55–56) of the separate chapter on śothodara in the Siddhayoga, and his remarks on dagdhavrana (ad vranaśotha 48).
- 16 Cakra's arrangement is justified by Niścala ad nādīvrana 1 and bhagna 1.
- 17 Jvara 65 (Caraka and Suśruta), 67-68 (Caraka); vātavyādhi 5 (Suśruta); ś•tha 50 (Caraka); nirūha 35 (Caraka); the Suśrutasamhitā is also referred to as Śālākya (netraroga 12).
- 18 Not incorporated in the Siddhayoga.
- 19 See rasāyana 34. Rasāyana 34-125 has been edited and translated by P.V. Sharma (1993c); the verses are in āryā metre (as indicated in the text: rasāyana 124), as are those of the Yogaratnamālā, attributed to Nāgārjuna. Nāgārjuna is also mentioned at rasāyana 76. Nāgārjuna's Lohaśāstra is absent from the much shorter chapter on rasāyana in Vṛnda's Siddhayoga.
- 20 Ca.Ci. 13.56-61.
- 21 See rasāyana 171; rasāyana 159–171, appended to the verses on śilājatu from Caraka, is called an upaskāra (addendum; see verse 171), partly from some other treatise (163–164); verse 169, however, is again from the Carakasamhitā (Ci.1³.62).
- 22 Not indicated in the text itself, but in a remark added to it.
- 23 Borrowed from the Carakasamhitā (Ci.18.57-62).
- 24 The formulae of khandakūṣmāndaka (raktapitta 66–73), borrowed from Hārīta according to Niścala (cf. Siddhayoga 9.49–56; Vangasena, raktapitta 156–160), amṛtādyaghṛta (vātarakta 28–34), and godhūmādyaghṛta (vrsya 26–36 = Siddhayoga 70.22–30).
- 25 This prescription is absent from the Siddhayoga. Śivadāsasena regards this Bodhisatva as a particular yogin, adding that some equate him with Lokanātha. Niścalakara (ad arśas 107-110) calls him Lokanātha.

- 26 The formula of saureśvaraghrta, also found in the Mādhavacikitsā (galagardādi 26), where the additional ardhaśloka, attributing the recipe to Jīvaka, is absent. The saureśvaraghrta of the Siddhayoga (ślīpada 25–28) is different.
- 27 This prescription is absent from the Siddhayoga. Śivadāsasena remarks that Kaca, the son of Bṛhaspati, is meant. This Kaca received the art of reviving the dead (mṛtasaṇujīvanī) from Śukrācārya; see Vettam Mani, who gives a summary of the story as told in the Ādiparvan (76-77; ed. Poona) of the Mahābhārata. See on Kaca also: S.A. Dange (1969): 155-237; S. Sörensen (1963).
- 28 This recipe was taken from the Carakasamhitā (Ci.26.226-230).
- 29 See: Niścalakara.
- 30 Cakra sometimes deviates from the text of the Suśrutasainhitā, an example is jvara 103 (compare Su.U.39.188cd-189; see Niścala's comments). See also Niścala adjvara 188.
- 31 See, for example, Niścala ad bhagna 11; kuṣṭḥa 24 and 150; mukharoga 52 and 53; anuvā-sana 24–25.
- 32 The expressions vrnde nāsti and vrndato'dhikam are often used by Niścala.
- 33 A few examples are: chardi 20 (= Siddhayoga 15.16), 24 (= 15.21), 28 (= 15.29); tṛṣṇā 4 (= 16.3), 9 (= 16.6), 11 (= 16.8), 14 (= 16.10), 18 (= 16.18ab), 19 (= 16.18c-f), 20 (= 16.19), 21 (= 16.13), 22 (= 16.20), 25 (= 16.22); mūrchā 3 (= 17.3ab), 4 (= 17.3cd-4), 5 (= 17.5), 6-8 (= 17.6-7).
- 34 See, for example, Śivadāsasena ad grahaņī 19, hikkāśvāsa 30-33, vātavyādhi 95-99.
- 35 Śivadāsasena says that the Bhattatraya consists of the Kārikā, Bṛhattīkā and Tantratīkā (ed. q has Candratīkā). The nature of these treatises is not clear, but it may well be that the three parts of Kumārila Bhatta's exposition of Śabara's bhāṣya on the Mīmāṃsāsūtra are meant (see S. Dasgupta, 1975: I, 370–371).
- 36 See grahanī 85-90 (the formula of rasaparpatikā).
- 37 See jvara 100–102 (pippalyādigaņa; see Su.Sū.38.22–23); aśmarī 2-4 (vīratarādigaņa; see Su.Sū.38.12–13); 11–12 (ūṣakādigaṇa; see Su.Sū.38.37–38); 20–22 (varuṇādigaṇa; see Su.Sū.38.10–11); see Niścala ad jvara 100–102 and aśmarī 2-4. These gaṇas, with the exception of the pippalyādigaṇa, are quoted from the Suśrutasaṇihitā in prose by Vṛnda (prose between 34.1 and 2, 8 and 9, 20 and 21.
- 38 Some verses deriving from Cakra himself are, according to Niścala: jvara 164, 188, 278; grahanī 19; apasmāra 28; vātavyādhi 5, 49, 170, 234ab; āmavāta 37cd; śūla 51 and 63; udāvarta 25b; gulma 10ef; aśmarī 11–12; prameha 37; sthaulya 1; śotha 28; vranaśotha 48; bhagna 1e; kṣudraroga 3, 22, 31ef, 82; mukharoga 33 and 82; karnaroga 62; rasāyana 195ef. See Sivadāsasena's commentary ad yonivyāpad 37–44. Some verses borrowed but changed by Cakra are, according to Niścala: unmāda 1; vātavyādhi 49; vātarakta 13; āmavāta 9.
- 39 Compare on special features of the Cakradatta, in particular on children's diseases and their treatment: A. Kumar (1994). See on gudūcyāditaila (vātarakta 21–22): R.B. Saxena, N.R. - 61 Kuṣṭha 153-156 = Siddhayoga 51.129-132 (bṛhatsindūrādyataila).
- 62 See on this famous recipe: P.V. Sharma (1993c): 36-37. Śivadāsasena calls it, on the basis of its fourteen ingredients, caturdaśāngī, and refers in this context to Vāgbhaṭa; a closely related formula, called kānḍacitrākhyā vartiḥ, not attributed to Nāgārjuna, is found at A.s. U.19.49.
- 63 Absent from the Sidehayoga. Compare Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 68.10–11: pārigarbhika is commonly known as ahiner. Ahindikā is mentioned in the Rasaratnākara (bālaroga 83).
- 64 Compare A. Kumar (1994: 187), who calls this disease ahitundikā and identifies it as an umbilical hernia.
- 65 See AVI 273-274; P.V. Sharma's list contains some items already occurring in the Carakasamhitā (e.g., yogarāja: Ca.Ci.16.80-86) and Siddhayoga (navāyasaloha: Siddhayoga 8.9).
- 66 See on Cakra's punarnavāstakakvātha (śotha 11): D. Joshi and V.K. Agrawal (1975).

- 69 See also P.V. Sharma (1985a).

68 See AVI 272-273.

- 70 P.V. Sharma's edition reads ābhā (vātavyādhi 65). Niścala and Śivadāsasena call it a commercially available drug, known as āhā.
- 71 See P.V. Sharma's edition (y); the verse is absent from ed. s. Niścala identifies it as anantamūla.
- 72 The same as gorakṣakarkaṭī according to Niścala (vātavyādhi 22) and Śivadāsasena. Interpreted as the root of indravāruṇī by P.V. Sharma (ed. z). Gorakṣakarkaṭī is probably to be identified as Melothria maderaspatana (Linn.) Cogn. according to P.V. Sharma (1985a); the same author (1997) regards it as identical with cirbhaṭa and aindrī. Aindrī is identified as Amomum subulatum Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 116), Bacopa monnieri (Linn.) Wettst. (P.V. Sharma. 1997; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 195), Centella asiatica (Linn.) Urban (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 371), Citrullus colocynthis (Linn.)

- Schrad. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 414), and Cucumis prophetarum Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 525).
- 73 Equated with cāngerī (Oxalis corniculata Linn.) by Śivadāsasena; P.V. Sharma (ed. z) agrees. Niścala refrains from giving synonyms. Compare Cakra ad Ca.Vi.8.140, who regards śītaka as another name for amlaloţa, and Dalhana ad Su.Śā.10.59, who says that aśmantaka is called amlaloṭaka in the vernacular. P.V. Sharma (1985a) identifies amlaloṭaka as Bauhinia malabarica Roxb.; amlaloṭa is also identified as Bauhinia racemosa Lam. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 224). Various species of Bauhinia are regarded as aśmantaka (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 222, 224–227).
- 74 Masūrikā 24 is given in a footnote of P.V. Sharma's edition (y). Identified by P.V. Sharma (1985a) as Amaranthus tricolor Linn. = A. tristis Linn.
- 75 Niścala (nāsāroga 26) remarks that asanamallī is a plant known under this name. Asanamallikā is identified as Aganosma dichotoma (Roth) K. Schum. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 53). Equated by Śivadāsasena with āpharamallikā. P.V. Sharma (1985a) identifies āpharamallikā as Vallaris solanacea Kuntze.
- 76 The same as kṛṣṇavetra.
- 77 Mentioned in the Carakasamhitā. Called hevakulī in the vernacular according to Niścala (ad arśas 133).
- 78 Unidentified by Niścala (amlapitta 29) and Śivadāsasena. P.V. Sharma supposes it to be the same as dīrghapattra (jvara 209). Bṛhatpattra (or-pattrā) is identified as Naregamia alata Wight et Arn. and Symplocos paniculata Miq. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1159, 1558).
- 79 The same as edagajabī ja according to Niścala and Śivadāsasena. P.V. Sharma (ed. z. seeds of cakramarda = edagaja) agrees. Edagaja is found in the Carakasamhitā.
- 80 Cakra mentions this name as a synonym of vārāhīkanda (found in the Suśrutasaṃhitā). See Niścala's comments. Dioscorea esculenta Burkill according to P.V. Sharma (1985a; 1997), D. bulbifera Linn. according to others (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 613).
- 81 Niścala (ad vātavyādhi 272) says that guvākacelaka is meant. Śivadāsasena regards celaka as a synonym of guvāka (Areca catechu Linn.); P.V. Sharma (ed. z: the bark of pūga) agrees.
- 82 The bud of a campaka flower or nāgakeśara according to Niścala (ad vātavyādhi 201) and Śivadāsasena. A campaka flower according to P.V. Sharma (ed. z). Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nrs. 1099 and 1102.
- 83 Avilonī according to Niścala, cukāï according to Śivadāsasena. The same as cāngerī (P.V. Sharma, 1997), which is doubtful in this case, because both cukrīkā and cukrikā are found in the prescription, which has been taken from the Carakasamhitā (Ci.24.151). Compare T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar (1972: s.v. cukrīkā).
- 84 Variously identified as Vernonia cinerea Less., Canscora decussata Schult., and Tridax procumbens Linn. (P.V. Sharma: 1985a). Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nrs. 313 (Canscora decussata) and 1682 (Vernonia cinerea).
- 85 Niścala (vātavyādhi 239) and Śivadāsasena give devahulī as its synonym. The same as lavanga according to P.V. Sharma (1997) and the Hindī comm. of ed. v.
- 86 Aguru according to Niścala (ad mukharoga 109) and Śivadāsasena; P.V. Sharma (ed. z) agrees.
- 87 Trivṛt or pāṭhā according to Śivadāsasena. Ekaiṣikā is found in Caraka- and Suśrutasaṃhitā.

- 88 Identified as hoggala or hogalā, elavāluka and peţikā according to different authorities (see Niścala and Śivadāsasena).
- 89 The same as gorakşakarkaţī according to Niścala and Śivadāsasena. A variety of viśālā (P.V. Sharma, 1997); the same as indravārunī (ed. z). Gajacirbhaṭa is mentioned in the Astāngahrdayasamhitā (Ci. 14.38).
- 90 The same as pattraka or rāḍnīyapattraka according to Niścala (vātavyādhi 272); the same as vāṭiyāpattra according to Śivadāsasena; different from tvakpattra, which occurs in the same recipe. Identified as the leaves of Cinnamomum zeylanicum Breyn. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a) and those of C. tamala (F. Hamilt.) Nees et Eberm. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 91 Identified as Sonchus arvensis Linn, by P.V. Sharma (1985a; 1997).
- 92 (Dāru)haridrā or priyangu according to Niścala (ad vranaśotha 76). Priyangu in ed. z (haridrā is the next item in the recipe).
- 93 P.V. Sharma's edition reads godhāpadī in ślīpada 15. Niścala: called gohāli or gohāliyā in the vernacular. The Soḍhalanighanṭu (II.559ab) mentions a godhāmatī. P.V. Sharma (1997) regards godhāvatī as identical with godhāpadī = haṃsapādī: Adiantum philippense Linn. = A. lunulatum Burm.
- 94 The same as madhūka according to Niścala (ad agnimāndya 88) and Śivadāsasena (in conformity with Dhanvantarinighantu 5.45); P.V. Sharma (ed. z) agrees. Madhūka is common in Caraka and Suśrutasaṃhitā.
- 95 Butea superba Roxb. or Leea macrophylla Roxb. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a); L. macrophylla Roxb. (P.V. Sharma, 1997; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 275: = palāśa, Nr. 1008: Leea macrophylla).
- 96 Not to be regarded as Cannabis sativa Linn. in this case, but as Citrullus colocynthis Schrad. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a); nevertheless identified as Cannabis sativa Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 97 The same as irimeda according to Śivadāsasena and P.V. Sharma (1997); Niścala (ad mukharoga 104) identifies it as viṭkhadira, which is the same as arimeda (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 98 Locally called kalāmodakacavarāī according to Niścala; the same as moraţā according to Śivadāsasena. Jalakarnā is regarded as identical with jalapippalī (= jalakanā), Lippia nodiflora Rich. = Phyla nodiflora (Linn.) Greene (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1269; PV. Sharma, ed. z).
- 99 Known as pāṭhī according to Niścala. Jalakumbhī is identified as Pistia stratiotes Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1306) and Eichhornia crassipes Solms (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 656). The latter plant, i.e., the water-hyacinth, was introduced into India about half a century ago.
- 100 The same as mañjiṣṭhā according to Niścala and Śivadāsasena; P.V. Sharma (ed. z) agrees. Jingī is a synonym of mañjiṣṭhā (Bhāvaprakāśanighantu, harītakyādi 188).
- 101 P.V. Sharma's ed. y reads jīvākhya, but ed. z jīrākhya (unidentified). Jīrākhya is a vegetable resembling mārişa according to Niścala and Śivadāsasena.
- 102 Niścala (ad arśas 6): the same as ghoṣaka; arśas 6 mentions ghoṣā. Identified as Polygonum barbatum Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a); regarded as identical with kośātakī = ghoṣaka (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Ghoṣaka is also one of the names of dhāmārgava (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1044).
- 103 Niścala (ad galaganda 44 = Su.Ci.18.13): = mahatī himsrā (ed. z identifies it as mañjiṣṭhā); (ad nāḍīvraṇa 5): = kālāvakaclaka, not the same as mañjiṣṭhā (ed. z identifies it as mañjiṣṭhā); (ad vraṇaśotha 99): the same as mañjiṣṭhā according to Īśāna, Jinadāsa and Cakra

- (ed. z agrees), identical with kālānusārivā according to Jejjaṭa and Indu. Śivadāsasena (ad vraņaśotha 8): = hiṃsrā (ed. z: ahiṃsrā), a variety of kālākaṭā. Probably the same as kālāvakaṭaka (P.V. Sharma, 1985a). Kālā is found in Carakasamhitā, etc.
- 104 Corchorus capsularis Linn. according to P.V. Sharma (1985a; 1997; ed. z).
- 105 Ed. y reads kālavañ julaka, ed. z has kālāvakaḍaka; variants are kālākarkaṭaka and kālāvakaḍaka. Capparis zeylanica Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a). Compare kālā and kulikā.
- 106 Known as kalāyavidalī to cowherds, as vişalī to garland-makers according to Niścala (ad vranaśotha 65). Unidentified.
- 107 Called kāñcadā (Niścala ad atīsāra 37) or kanaţāma (Niścala ad grahanī 13) in the vernacular. See on this plant: G.J. Meulenbeld (1985a).
- 108 Called kāngaņi in the vernacular according to Niścala. In this case to be regarded as Setaria italica (Linn.) Beauv. (see P.V. Sharma, 1985a; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1480). The same as jyotişmatī in ed. z.
- 109 Locally called kāñciyā according to Śivadāsasena (ad vraņaśotha 51); the same as bhadramustaka according to Śivadāsasena; the same as musta in ed. z.
- 110 A climber of the genus Capparis, identical with the kumbhāṭa, called in the vernacular kumbhāṭa, of Paryāyaratnamālā 654 (P.V. Sharma, 1985a). A synonym of ahimsrā (ed. z). Kumbhāṭa is identified as Careya herbacea Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 330). Śivadāṣasena regards kumbhāṭulatā as identical with padmacāraṭī (ad viṣa 32–38); padmacāraṭī (mentioned at Ca.Ci.23.55) may be the same as padmacāriṭī, identified as Habenaria diphylla Dalz. (absent from WIRM; see Hooker VI, 151) (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 839), Hibiscus mutabilis Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 873), Hybanthus enneaspermus (Linn.) F. Muell. = Ionidium suffruticosum Ging. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 883), or several species of Nervilia (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 883), or several species of Nervilia (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 883), or several species of Nervilia (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 8164–1166). Niścala does not explain which plant is meant.
- 111 Locally called kavāḍavekṣuāka or eśivekṣuāka according to Niścala, who gives a description of this small shrub. Compare Śivadāsasena. Identified as Dalbergia lanceolaria Linn.f. (ed. z).
- 112 The same as uṣṭrakaṇṭaka or gangāpālankya according to Niścala (ad vṛṣya 54) and Śivadā-
- 113 Locally called karņāvadaka or karņāmoţa according to Niścala (ad jvara 207), kāṇākhoṭa according to Śivadāsasena.
- 114 Identified as Acacia arabica in MW, i.e., Acacia nilotica Delile.
- 115 Śivadāsasena regards it as either śvetārka or śvetasarṣapa, Niścala as śvetasarṣapa. The latter is identified as Sinapis alba Linn. = Brassica alba (Linn.) Rabenh. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1491). Ed. z has kaśikā.
- 116 Wedelia chinensis Merrill according to P.V. Sharma (1997; ed. z), Eclipta alba (Linn.) Hassk. according to others (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 653; WIRM III, 127).
- 117 Identified as either prasāraņī or vṛścikapattrī by Śivadāsasena. The same as kaṭabhī (ed. z). Vṛścikapattrikā is identified as Basella alba Linn. var. rubra (Linn.) Stewart = B. rubra Linn. = B. cordifolia Lamk. (see Hooker V, 21; WIRM II, rev. ed., 50-51) in MW. The same as bhadrāṇī (unidentified) according to Niścala, who reads kaṭambharā (ad vātavyādhi 201). Kaṭambharā is found in the Carakasaṃhitā (Ci.9.47) and at A.h.U.6.36.
- 118 Khaïri, i.e., aśokabī ja according to Niścala; the same as aśoka according to Śivadāsasena. Rather to be identified as Acacia pennata Willd. according to P.V. Sharma (1985a; 1997).
- 119 Probably Commelina benghalensis Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a).

- 120 The same as cavī according to Niścala and Śivadāsasena. Identical with pippalī (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Cavī is identified as Piper retrefractum Vahl = P. chaba Hunter (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1291; WIRM VIII, 116).
- 121 Tiliacora acuminata Miers = T. racemosa Colebr. according to P.V. Sharma (1985a; 1997); the same as asitavetra.
- 122 See kulikā.
- 123 Probably Pavetta indica Linn. according to P.V. Sharma (1985a; 1997).
- 124 According to Śivadāsasena the same as kudakarāni, which is a variety of himsrā (Capparis sepiaria Linn.). Identical with himsrā (ed. z). Śivadāsasena gives kālākada or kālākadā as a synonym of ahimsrā (ad galaganda 39 and visarpa 5).
- 125 Locally called kurahalichinnāka according to Niścala (ad vranaśotha 88–89). Probably Melothria heterophylla (Lour.) Cogn. according to P.V. Sharma (1985a; 1997).
- 126 The same as lavariga according to Niścala (ad mukharoga 109) and Śivadāsasena. P.V. Sharma (ed. z) agrees.
- 127 The same as tamālapattra according to Vāpyacandra, but identical with dhātukāsīsa according to Cakra (see Niścala). Interpreted as kāsīsa (an inorganic substance) by P.V. Sharma (ed. z). Lomaśa or lomaśā is identified as Girardinia heterophylla Decne. (see Hooker V, 550; compare WIRM IV, 129) (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 799).
- 128 A mahauşadhi, also called bhagavatī and prajñāpāramitā according to Niścala; vernacular names are manvī and garuḍacūḍāmaṇi. Equated with guvāka (Arecacatechu Linn.) by Śivadāsasena, an identification rejected by P.V. Sharma (1985a).
- 129 Compare vātavyādhi 225 and 239 of P.V. Sharma's edition (y). The same, according to M. Abdul Kareem (1997, Nr. 771) and P.V. Sharma (1985a), as madhurikā, i.e., Foeniculum vulgare Mill.
- 130 The sama as mahāvacā according to Niścala (ad vraņaśotha 46). Identified as Spilanthes oleracea Muπ. by P.V. Sharma (1985a; 1997), who adds that it is also a synonym of jalapippalī and regarded as Mentha pulegium Linn. Mahārāṣṭrī is a synonym of jalapippalī acording to M. Abdul Kareem (1997, Nr. 1269). Spilanthes oleracea is a plant introduced into India from Brazil (see WIRM X, 11).
- 131 The text mentions three types of nakhī. Śivadāsasena comments that five types are recognized. See the extensive comments of Niścala. Nakhī is not a vegetable substance, but consists of the opercula of particular shells (see U.Ch. Dutt, 1922: 15). Compare Ca.Ci. 28.153 (nakha; interpreted as svalpanakhī by Cakra).
- 132 Ed. s and P.V. Sharma's edition (z) read naradugdha; naravṛkṣa is a variant. P.V. Sharma (1985a) considers naravṛkṣa to be a species of Indigofera, the same as Soḍhala's narapusna
- 133 Mūrvā according to Niścala (ad śūla 37) and Śivadāsasena; P.V. Sharma (ed. z) agrees. Agnimantha according to P.V. Sharma (1997). Also regarded as a name of citraka (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1320).
- 134 The same as śaţī according to Niścala (ad hṛdroga 26) and Śivadāsasena (who reads palāśa). Ed. z has palāśa.
- 135 The edition of P.V. Sharma (z) reads pāmarā, which is regarded as a synonym of śaṭī. Probably the same as turuṣka, i.e., the resin of Styrax officinale Linn. according to P.V. Sharma (1985a). Turuṣka, variously identified, is already found in the Carakasamhitā (Ci.28.153).
- 136 Identified as Abutilon indicum (Linn.) Sweet (P.V. Sharma, 1985a) and A. hirtum (Lam.) Sweet (P.V. Sharma, 1997; ed. z).

- 137 The same as kantakiśirīşa according to Śivadāsasena. Kantakiśirīşa is Acacia lenticularis Buch.-Ham. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a).
- 138 Aristolochiaindica Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 161) or Celosia argentea Linn. = C. cristata Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 139 Alternanthera sessilis (Linn.) DC. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a).
- 140 Thesame as saptaparņa (Alstonia scholaris R.Br.) according to Niścała and Śivadāsasena; P.V. Sharma (ed. z) agrees.
- 141 P.V. Sharma's edition (y) reads śikaţī. Probably Securinega virosa (Roxb. ex Willd.) Pax et Hoffm. = S. obovata Muell.-Arg. = Flueggea microcarpa Blume (WIRM IX, 268; see the footnote about the nomenclature). P.V. Sharma (1985a) mentions Flueggea obovata Baill., a name not recorded in the literature I consulted. Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997): 244: Securinega virosa (Roxb. ex Willd.) Baill. = Flueggea microcarpa (Willd.) Prain ex Merr.
- 142 Called śiyalī in the vernacular according to Niścala and Śivadāsasena (see the latter's quotation from the Ratnakoṣa). Śītalī is identified as Limnanthemum cristatum Griseb. (see WIRM VI, 114-115) by P.V. Sharma (1985a), as Nymphoides hydrophyllum (Lour.) Kuntze = L. cristatum Griseb. by M. Abdul Kareem (1997, Nr. 1181).
- 143 Cardiospermum halicacabum Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a).
- 144 See for verses 73-78 the footnote at the end of the chapter in P.V. Sharma's edition (y). Identified as Aloe barbadensis Mill. = A. vera Tourn. ex Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a).
- 145 A plant known by this name according to Niścala. Argemone mexicana Linn. according to P.V. Sharma (1985a; 1997) and others (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 153); this plant is not indigenous to India and has been imported by the Portugese from the Americas. See on the use of this plant in āyurveda: P. Dwivedi, S. Pandey and C.B. Jha (1998).
- 146 Zizyphus mauritiana Lam. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1750) and Z. oenoplia Mill. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1753; P.V. Sharma, 1985a, 1997).
- 147 Identified as Sida rhomboidea Roxb. (see Hooker I, 324) by Kālīpad Viśvās (in his Bhāratīya Vanausadhi), according to P.V. Sharma (1985a).
- 148 Probably the same as svetāparājitā according to P.V. Sharma (1985a); the same as tarkārī (ed. z). Aparājitā is Clitoria ternatea Linn.
- 149 The same as śvetabalā according to P.V. Sharma (1985a; 1997).
- 150 The same as silhaka according to Niścala; identical with śilārasa (= silhaka) according to Śivadāsasena. P.V. Sharma (1997) identifies silhaka as Liquidambar orientalis Mill. M. Abdul Kareem (1997, Nrs. 1028–1029) mentions L. orientalis Mill. and L. styraciflua Linn.; the latter tree is the source of American storax.
- 151 A substitute of muñjātaka(phala) according to Niścala and Śivadāsasena. Muñjātaka is identified as Eulophia campestris Wall., E. herbacea Lindl., and Orchis latifolia Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 692, 694, 1205). Tālamastaka is identified as Borassus flabellifer Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 257; P. V. Sharma, 1997).
- 152 Probably Xyris pauciflora Willd. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a; ed. z) or the same as kattṛṇa (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 153 The same as te jovatī according to Niścala. Tvakpattra and tejovatī are different plants in the Carakasamhitā, etc.
- 154 Echinops echinatus Roxb. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 652; P.V. Sharma, 1985a, 1997).
- 155 Niścala: the variety of sūryāvarta called jāmātṛsūryāvarta. Vaśira is found in the Carakasamhitā (Sū.4.15).
- 156 A small ichneumon-like animal (alpabalanakulākāra) according to Niścala.

- 157 See AVI 369. P.V. Sharma mentions Bāṛia's Harṣacarita and the Bṛhatsaṇihitā as the first works acquainted with it, but it was well known to Kālidāsa. The Carakasaṃhitāeven mentions kastūrī (Ci.28.152). The Aṣṭāṅgasaṃgraha and Aṣṭāṅgaḥṛdayasaṃhitāalready knew it as kastūrī and darpa.
- 158 Śivadāsasena gives mrgamada as its synonym.
- 159 See on musk and its medicinal properties: R.N. Chopra et al. (1958): 465–472; DGV II–1II, 774–776; V.Ch. Dutt (1922): 280–281; S.J. Hussain (1977), (1978), (1980); Nadkarni II, 196–205; R.N. - 162 The title of the treatise is mentioned in the introductory and the concluding verses. The concluding verse identifies the author as Cakrapāņi.
- 163 See the last verse.
- 164 One MS (Cat. Berlin Nr. 953) is said to contain 543 verses, arranged in twenty-one sections.
- 165 The work is sometimes divided into fifteen vargas (AVI 381; V. Śukla I, 214) by splitting up varga thirteen into three: āhāravidhi, anupāna and miśraka.
- 166 More material has been taken from the Carakasamhitā than from the Suśrutasamhitā (see P.V. Sharma, 1992a).
- 167 See V. Śukla I. 214.
- 168 Compare P.V. Sharma (1992a) on special features of Cakrapāni's Dravyaguna.
- 169 Dhānyavarga 9 = Ca.Sū.26.45. The disagreements on the number of vīryas are referred to in the Carakasamhitā (Ca.Sū.26.64-69); see also G.J. Meulenbeld (1987): 11-14. Three types of vipāka are generally accepted.
- 170 Compare Ca.Sū.27.33ab; Su.Sū.46.31ab; A.h.Sū.6.17−18ab. The name tuvarī is used by Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.Sū.29.34). Ā≰hakī is Cajanus cajan (Linn.) Millsp.
- 171 This category is called udāsīna in Keśava's Siddhamantra. The term sarvadoşahara is explained in the same sense by ₱alhana (ad Su.Sū.26.214).

- 172 Fishes mentioned are: rohita, śakula, śilinda, ādimatsya, illisa, elanga, parvata, bhākuṭa, pāṭhīna, varmi, kuliśa, kuñcaka (called iñ jāka by Śivadāsasena, who adds that others call it vyāghramatsya; it is a big fish and has the same form as the ādimatsya), śṛṇgin, madgura, guttha (called candraka by others according to Śivadāsasena; candraka is a marine fish in the Suśrutasaṛnhitā), kavayya, caladaṛaga (called iṅrga according to Śivadāsasena), and kṣudramatsya. Suśruta describes the rohita, pāṭhīna, varmi, and kuliśa; kṣudramatsyas are known in the classical saṃhitās. The illisa may be one or more species of the genus Ilisha (see WIRM IV, Supplement 9–10). The elanga may be Liza corsula Hamilton = Mugil corsula Day, still called elanga in Bengal (see WIRM IV, Supplement 32), which would imply that it is identical with Suśruta's rājīva, not mentioned by Cakra. The śṛṇgin may be Heteropneustes fossilis (Bl.), a nourishing and tasty fish, called singī in Hindī and Bengali (see WIRMIV, Supplement 23). Clarias batrachus (Linn.), a nourishing fish, is called mahgur in Bengali and magurah in Oriya (see WIRM IV, Supplement 23), words resembling Cakra's madgura.
- 173 Compare Su.Sū.46 on fishes. Cakrapāṇi only deals with river fishes according to Śivadā-sasena, who remarks that those from the sea are less important as dietary items; this may be an error, for the kuliśa is a marine fish in the Suśrutasaṇṇhitā. See on Indian fishes in Graeco-Roman sources: K. Karttunen (1997): 216–217.
- 174 Drav yaguna 9 = A.h.Sū.6.113cd-114ab.
- 175 Identified as Glinus oppositifolius (Linn.) A.DC. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 802), Mollugo oppositifolia Linn. = M. spergula Linn. (Nadkarni I, Nr. 1636; P.V. Sharma, 1997; Vanauşadhicandrodaya IV, 100), and Mollugo cerviana Ser. = Pharnaceum cervianum Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1117; R.S. Simha and L.B. Simha, 1981).
- 176 Enhydra fluctuans Lour. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 673; P.V. Sharma, 1997) (not mentioned in the Bṛhattrayī).
- 177 Colocasia esculenta (Linn.) Schott. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 463; Vanauşadhicandrodaya I, 82).
- 178 Variously identified as Commelina benghalensis Linn., C. nudiflora Linn., Amaranthus caudatus Linn., A. tenuifolius Linn., Potamogeton indicus Roxb., and Jussiaea repens Linn. See on this plant: G.J. Meulenbeld (1985a); S.Bhattacharyya (1975).
- 179 Alocasia macrorrhiza (Linn.) G. Don = A. indica (Lour.) Spach. (WIRM I, rev. ed., 189; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 85, P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 180 Corchorus capsularis Linn. and C. olitorius Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Sometimes identified as Colocasia esculenta (Linn.) Schott (Chopra's glossary), which cannot be correct in this case (see kaccī).
- 181 Unidentified.
- 182 Identified as Citrus limettioides Tanaka = C. limetta (Vanauşadhicandrodaya VI, 22) or C. maxima (Burm.) Merr. = C. decumana Linn. (AVI 362 and P.V. Sharma, 1997: madhukarkatī).
- 183 Regarded as a vernacular word for white sugar by Dalhana (ad Su.Sū.45.162: tavarāja instead of tamarāja).
- 184 CC: not recorded. NCC: not recorded among the works of Cakrapānidatta.

- 204 Some MSS (CBORI XVI, 1, Nrs 62–63) call it Cakradattasangraha; it is also known as Ayurvedasangraha (NCC II, 153; VI, 284).
- 205 Concluding verse of the Āyurvedadīpikā and Cikitsāsaṃgraha, svasthādhikāra 52 (identical). D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 134–135) rejects the current reading of this verse and favours a variant (gauḍādhinātharasavatyadhikāripātraṃ nārāyaṇasya tanayaḥ, warranted by a MS described by P. Peterson, 1892: *154), saying that Cakrapāṇi himself was in charge of the kitchen. Bhattacharyya claims that the current reading (gauḍādhinātharasavatyadhikāripātranārāyaṇa), where a descriptive epithet is compounded with a proper name, is open to the rhetorical fault called vidheyāvimarśa, while the variant adopted by him is faultless. P.L. Paul (1939: II, 5–6) says that Nārāyaṇa, as suggested for the first time by N.N. Dasgupta (*IC 3, 156), seems to be identical with the author of the Ratnamālā, a medical vocabulary, and with Nārāyaṇa Kavirāja, who is quoted in the Saduktikarṇāṃtta of Śrīdharadāsa (A.D. 1205). See on the location of Gauḍa: N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 133–134; N. Dey (1979): 63; B.C. Law (1984): 217–218.
- 206 Cakrapāṇi's elder brother, Bhānu(datta), was, according to Atrideva (ABI 201) and G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 463), the author of a kāvya, called Kumārabhārgavīya; this Bhānudatta, however, who also wrote the Gītagaurīśa, Rasataraigiṇī, and other works, lived much later, in the period 1350–1450, and was the son of Gaṇanātha or Gaṇapati (CC I, 405 and 793; S.N. Dasgupta and S.K. De, 1947: 396, 561; Krishnamachariar 773–775). The title of Cakrapāṇi's commentary on the Suśrutasaṇnhtā, the Bhānumatī, may be a tribute to his brother.
- 207 The term antaranga has been used by Cakrapāṇidatta, Niścalakara, Śivadāsasena, and Surapāla (in the Vṛkṣāyurveda); the term also occurs in some colophons of Gopāladāsa's Cikitsāmṛta and is known from inscriptions (see P.L. Paul, 1939: I, 117: references to *Epigraphia Indica XII, 37 and XVIII, 76ff.). Śivadāsasena observes (ad Cakradatta, svasthādhikāra 52) that a learned physician of good family is designated as acut. D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 135) translated antaranga as royal physician. It may have been a title that was conferred especially in Bengal and surrounding regions. See on the term: Biswarup Das (1978): 123; R.P. Das (1988): 423; N.N. Das Gupta (1934/35); R.C. Majumdar (1974): 300 and 326. P.L. Paul (1939: 1, 117–118) expressed as his opinion that the antaranga was an officer in charge of crown land and property.

- 213 AVI 211. D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 134. R.C. Majumdar (1974): 137. C. Vogel, IL 375. Atrideva's dates of Nayapāla (ABI 274) are A.D. 1041–1072.
- 214 ABI 276. Satyaprakāś 220. VŚS, Preface 6. The Gulabkunverba edition and translation of the Carakasamhitā (I, 117) supports this claim by a quotation from an unspecified author called Jayadeva, who says that a temple of Cakrapāṇīśvara, founded by Cakrapāṇi, is located there.
- 215 ABI 276.
- 216 G.P. Srivastava (1954: 100-101) has put forward that Cakrapāņi inclined towards Buddhism, which is very improbable, being not supported by any evidence.
- 217 Dates assigned to Cakrapāṇi are: A.D. 1050 (P.V. Sharma, 1993: Intr. 4; P.V. Sharma suggests that the formula of rāmamaṇḍūra, Cakradatta, pariṇāmaśūla 42-45, was called thus in honour of king Rāmapāla, who reigned from A.D. 1077 to 1120); 1050-1060 (R. Satyaprakāś, 1965: 219 and 221); about 1055 (AVI 211); about 1060 (J. Jolly, 1901: 6; C.G. Kashikar 7; Winternitz III, 550). The only one to suggest an earlier date was D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 134-135), in whose view Cakrapāṇi wrote his works about 1040-1050; this author was convinced that Cakrapāṇi himself was in the service of Nayapāla.

Gode (1939a): 60–62; P.V. Sharma (1976): 71–80, AVI 217–218, (1992i), (1993): Intr. Edition: see edition y of Cakrapāni's Cikitsāsamgraha. P.V. Sharma used four MSS for his edition: (a) CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 62; (b) CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 63; (c) Nr. 1/90-73743 of Sarasvatī Bhavan, Vārānasī; (d) a MS in the possession of the Vangīya Sāhitya Parisad, Calcutta. CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 63 contains a very large part of the text and the commentary; CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 62 is an exact copy of Nr. 63; Nr. 62 dates from 1757/58, Nr. 63 from 1727/28. The Vārāṇasī MS contains the commentary on vātavyādhi 253-278. The Calcutta MS contains the commentary up to parts of the chapter on vranasotha, but many folios of the preserved chapters are missing. One MS, formerly kept in the Library of the Mahārāja of Bikaner (Cat. Bikaner Nr. 1388), has disappeared without leaving a trace; D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 124) supposed it to have been the original of the two BORI MSS. One MS (and a partial transcription with notes by P. Cordier), probably a copy of one of the BORI MSS, forms part of the Collection P. Cordier of the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (J. Filliozat, ListeNrs. 115 and 116). See on the MSS: D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 123-127; P.V. Sharma (1991a): 107-108 and (1993): Intr. 1-3.

The portions of the Ratnaprabhā missing in the MSS are those covering vraṇaśotha 3-45, netraroga 37 to the end of the chapter, śiroroga, asṛgdara, yonivyāpad, strīroga, bālaroga, viṣa, rasāyana 1-159, nasyadhūma 24-34, kavalagaṇdūṣa, āścyotana-añjana-tarpana-putapāka, sirāvyadha, and svastha.

- The title of the commentary is mentioned in the introductory verses and the colophons. Śivadāsasena's commentary on the Cakradatta was largely based on Niścala's Ratnapra-bhā.
- 220 A very rich collection of manuscripts must have been at Niścala's disposal. This may mean that he had access to a royal library.
- 221 See the colophon of the chapter on jvara.
- 222 These epithets are found in the introductory prose of the Ratnaprabhā.
- 223 Ad āmavāta 35-37; prameha 18.
- 224 Ad āmavāta 35-37.
- 225 This attitude is termed gatānugatikatva, for example ad hikkāśvāsa 19-20.
- 226 Ad mukharoga 1; karnaroga 30.
- 227 Ad mukharoga 1.
- 228 Ad jvara 167.
- 229 For example, ad jvara 182; arśas 43; gulma 41–42; galagaṇḍa 51; kuṣṭha 49 and 105; masūrikā 12.
- 230 Forexample, ad arśas 122; parināmaśūla 63; udāvarta 16 and 28; mūtrāghāta 7; mukharoga 14, 73–74, 113–117; karnaroga 43.
- 231 These errors are called apapāṭha and pramādapāṭha. Examples are found ad śūla 6 and 12; galagaṇḍa 51 (= Su.Ci.18.32-33ab; the reading of the Cakradatta is a pramādapāṭha, as attested by the text of Su.); vidradhi 8; kuṣṭha 8-12; udarda 1, 3, 15; visarpa 11; kṣudraroga 67; karṇaroga 57; netraroga 20. A scribe's error is indicated ad hṛdroga 25, an error in the Siddhayoga ad mukharoga 53.
- 232 Ad arśas 120; vātarakta 13 (tantrāntaraprāmānya); prameha 22–26; visarpa 2 (tantrāntarasamvāda).
- 233 For example, ad ivara 188.
- 234 Adjvara 211.
- 235 Adraktapitta 82-96; prameha 22-26.
- 236 Ad bhagandara 13-17; kustha 71.
- Examples: ad raktapitta 38 (ubhayam śastarn); vātarakta 13 (dvayam api pramāṇam smṛtidvaidhavat); prameha 30–37 (prāmāṇyam tu sarvasya matabhedāt); kuṣṭha 131–133 (u-bhayam api pramāṇam) and 150 (dvayor api prāmāṇyam smṛtidvaidhavat); kṣudraroga 96 (ato dvayam api yuktarṛi smṛtidvaidhavat); vireka 10–15 (sarva eva pakṣaḥ pramāṇam smṛtidvaidhavat).
- 238 Many formulations are said to be dṛṣṭaphala, mahāphala, (pra)siddhaphala; see Niścala ad arśas 120–126; pāṇḍuroga 11; rājayakṣman 27; śūla 63; pariṇāmaśūla 70–74; mūtrakṛcchra 25; udara 65–66; vṛddhi 22; vidradhi 14; visarpa 21; kṣudraroga 7, 24, 29. Recipes which proved to be effective in his own experience (anubhūta; anubhūtam asmābhil; mayā dṛṣṭaphalal, etc.) are mentioned ad vātavyādhi 29–30 and 31; prameha 2–3; masūrikā 29; kṣudraroga 1 and 100.
- 239 They are called prasiddha: ad vranaśotha 47; vireka 28.
- 240 Mentioned ad mukharoga 11.
- 241 Ad raktapitta 34 (mentioned in only one of the MSS).
- 242 Lokeśvara and Yatapālita are mentioned in only one of the MSS (see P.V. Sharma, 1993: Intr. 6 and 83).
- 243 Ad jvara 110, 211, 253–254, 277–278; atīsāra 88–91; arśas 153–158; kāsa 43 and 59–64; vātavyādhi 88–92 and 95; vātarakta 33–34 and 40; ūrustambha 6; parināmaśūla 21–22, 24,

- 26–28; udāvarta 28; udara 23 and 55–56; plīhayakṛṭ 4 and 19–23; ślīpada 24–30; amlapitta 6; vireka 16; anuvāsana 11–12.
- 244 Ad vrsya 15-25.
- 245 Ad jvara 134 (disagreeing with the śāstrayukti); vātavyādhi 24-25 (conflicting with a paribhāsā); śūla 35 (disagreeing with Suśruta).
- 246 Niścala often says yuktam (idam): ad jvara 277-278; prameha 47-49; udara 57 and 58. Another expression frequently used is ayam (pakṣalı) pracārī: ad agnimāndya 2; raktapitta 82-96; vātavyādhi 32-35 and 71-73; karnaroga 23-24.
- 247 Ad udāvarta 7 (ayukta); vrsya 15-25 (tad api na); nirūha 26-27 (tad asāram).
- 248 Ad arśas 83-92; raktapitta 15; hikkāśvāsa 19-20 and 24-29.
- 249 Ad vātavyādhi 27, 74-75, 106-116; gulma 47.
- 250 Ad grahanī 72-76; arśas 14.
- 251 Adjvara 20; pāṇḍuroga 11; vātavyādhi 87; hṛdroga 10.
- 252 Ad hikkāśvāsa 19–20 and 24–29; apasmāra 23–28; vātavyādhi 62–63; śūla 50–51; parināmaśūla 65–76; hrdroga 10.
- 253 Adivara 3.
- 254 Ad jvara 5 and 10.
- 255 Ad ivara 149 and 150.
- 256 Ad jvara 64 and 65-68.
- 257 Ad vranasotha 99: the terms discussed are vikalpa, samuccaya, bādha and pratinidhi; see on these terms P.V. Sharma (1993): Intr. 10-11.
- 258 See: Cakrapānidatta's Cikitsāsamgraha.
- 259 Niścala's identifications are more than once unusual.
- 260 Ad nādīvrana 6: = jyotismatī.
- 261 Ad kuştha 111-115: = vidanga. Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 670.
- 262 Ad vātavyādhi 276-278: = kunkuma.
- 263 Ad udara 65-66: = jhintī.
- 264 Ad mukharoga 39: = alambuşa.
- 265 Ad vātavyādhi 276-278: = devahulī.
- 266 Ad kustha 111-115: = saptacchada.
- 267 Ad kustha 71-72: = śamatha. See Cakra ad Ca.Sū.4.11: gandīra = śamathaśāka.
- 268 Ad udara 65-66: = sūryāvarta.
- 269 Ad udara 65-66: = ksīrakañcukī.
- 270 Ad udara 65-66: = khandakarna.
- 271 Ad aśmarī 13-16: = goksuraka.
- 272 Ad upadamśa 10: = kāsthaguvāka.
- 273 Ad gulma 56: = brhatī.
- 274 Ad arśas 172-179: = khandakarna.
- 275 Ad vātavyādhi 227–271: a fragrant substance.
- 276 Ad ksudraroga 126-133: = madayantī.
- 277 Ad jvara 284: = guggulu. Mūlakaparnī is also identified as Euphorbia fusiformis Ham. = E. acaulis Roxb. (absent from WIRM; see Hooker V, 257–258) (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 699) and regarded as a synonym of sigru (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1133 and 1134).
- 278 Ad jvara 284: = nīlajhintī.
- 279 Ad udara 65-66: = varuna.

- 280 Ad vātavvādhi 276-278: = śvetacandana.
- 281 Ad udara 65-66: = kṣemaka (identified as Angelica glauca Edgew.; see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 135).
- 282 Ad jvara 284: = dugdharuhā or samangā. Ruhā is identified as Cynodon dactyl•n (Linn.) Pers. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 554).
- 283 Adjvara 284: a fragrant root. Possibly Calamus rotang Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 290).
- 284 Ad įvara 284: = tagaramustaka (unidentified).
- 285 Ad vātavyādhi 276-278: = vihanākhya. Unidentified.
- 286 Ad udara 65-66: = the roots of vātyālaka.
- 287 Ad vātavyādhi 276-278: = kustha.
- 288 Ad gulma 34–329: = pāṭhā. Identified as Cyclea peltata (Lam.) Hook.f. et Thomson (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 543a).
- 289 Examples: ad mūtrāghāta 3 (upadaméa = lakuna), 11 (godhāvatī = gohāli), 14 (uṣṇavāta = tātaṇikā); aśmarī 37-38 (śītalī = śiyalī); vraṇaśotha 51 (kāntakrāmaka = kāñciyā) and 67 (śampāka = suvarṇāhali).
- 290 Ad atīsāra 4-5; pāṇḍuroga 35-40; raktapitta 34 and 82-96; rājayakşman 24-25 and 34-37; unmāda 29-30; śotha 21; vraṇaśotha 1-2; bhagandara 3; bhagna 11; kuṣṭha 46; kṣudraroga 40; vṛṣya 15-25.
- 291 Ad atīsāra 4–5; raktapitta 42–43; madātyaya 20; śūla 12; aśmarī 37–38; karıjaroga 38; nā-sāroga 9–10 and 12.
- 292 See Cakrapāni's Cikitsāsamgraha for a list of these sources.
- 293 A few examples may suffice: chardi 20, 24, 27, 28; tṛṣṇā 3, 4, 9, 11, 18, 19, 20, 22, 25; mūrchā 3, 4, 5, 6–8, 11–12.
- 294 For example, chardi 15 (= Su.U.49.28cd) and trsnā 8 (= Su.U.48.21 = Siddhayoga 16.5).
- 295 Compare the lists compiled by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b), G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 52–56), and P.V. Sharma (1991a: 108–110; 1993: Introduction 14–27). Compare also the authors and works quoted by Śivadāsasena.
- 296 NCC I, 73. The author of the Ayurvedasāra; see Niścala ad jvara 277-278. Compare the quotations from the Ayurvedasāra. An Acyuta is quoted once in Anantakumāra's Yogaratnasamuccaya (18.484). The terminus ante quem of Acyuta is provided by Vında, who quotes the Ayurvedasāra (Siddhayoga 53.13-14ab = Cakradatta, amlapitta 14, borrowed from the Ayurvedasāra). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 54) places Acyuta in the ninth or tenth century.
- 297 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 298 Cakrapāņi borrowed jvara 64 from Agniveśa.
- 299 NCC I, 492. Govardhana also wrote a Karmamālā. Compare Karmamālā.
- 300 The quotation (in prose) gives details on the preparation of a compound drug, tālīśā-dyamodaka, borrowed by Cakrapāni from the Carakasamhitā (Ci.8.145–148).
- 301 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 302 See: commentaries on the Carakasamhitā; see also: Yogaśataka.
- 303 Compare Cikitsātiśaya.
- 304 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya, G. Hāldār and the NCC (I, 357) call this work Amoghajñānatantra, a variant reading of Amoghayogatantra in one of the MSS; it is a Buddhist work according to Niścala ad unmāda 21–28; G. Hāldār ascribes it to an Amoghavaidya who lived in the twelfth century; a Buddhist monk called Amogha translated several Buddhist Tantric

- works into Chinese (see B. Nanjio, 1980: 444-448). Śivadāsasena quotes Amogha; Trivikrama refers to Amoghācārya.
- 305 NCC I, 346. Also quoted in Gopāladāsa's Cikitsāmrta.
- 306 NCC I, 351. Quoted in Anantakumāra's Yogaratnasamuccaya and Candrața's work of the same title.
- 307 Some verses of the Cakradatta were borrowed from the Amṛtamālā: vātarakta 10, 12, 20, 25; kustha 150
- 308 NCCI, 353. A work of Śrīkantha according to Niścala ad amlapitta 1. The quotations are in verse, one excepted (ad amlapitta 1). The Amṛtavallikā is quoted in Gopāladāsa's Cikitsāmṛta.
- 309 A commentator on the Carakasamhitā.
- 310 These verses are quoted from an Aśvavaidyaka.
- 311 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 312 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 313 A variant reads Kṛṣṇātreya. See Ca.Sū.4.7: the definition of a śīta, attributed to Śaunaka by Cakrapāṇidatta.
- 314 Ātreya's Uttarakārikā is quoted.
- 315 An unknown work, different from treatises of the same title. P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 15) suggests that it may be a commentary on the Suśrutasannitā. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 52) regards it as a work of Mādhavakara; he places it in the seventh or eighth century.
- 316 Not mentioned in G. Hāldār's list. A treatise in verse by Acyuta.
- 317 Ā yurvedaśāstrasāra.
- 318 Verses from the Āyurvedasāra borrowed by Cakrapāņidatta are: jvara 105 and 127; hikkā-śvāsa 14 (common to Āyurvedasāra and Yogapañcāśikā); apasmāra 11 and 15; vātavyādhi 26, 39-40, 42, 47, 50, 52-55, 59; āmavāta 72; śūla 6; mūtrakrechra 13 and 26; mūtrāghāta 3; śotha 12 and 44-47; vrddhi 26; galaganda 1, 6, 18, 23, 28, 30, 57; ślīpada 12; vidradhi 14; vranaśotha 60; kuṣtha 70 and 120-121 (common to Āyurvedasāra, Ravigupta and Vāgbhata); udarda 5 and 8; amlapitta 14.
- 319 See: commentaries on the Carakasamhitā.
- 320 Left unmentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 321 The NCC (XIII, 293–294) records a number of poets called Bālasarasvatī. One of them, also called Madana, wrote a poem called Bālasarasvatīkāvya, that may be the same as the Pārijātamañjarī (see NCC XII, 48); this Bālasarasvatī was the preceptor of king Arjunavarman (about A.D. 1213–1215).
- 322 The Amoghayogatantra is quoted.
- 323 Quoted in Anantakumāra's Yogaratnasamuccaya and Candrata's work of the same title.
- 324 Nine verses are quoted on the (in)curability of fevers.
- 325 This verse is common to Bhadravarman and Vrddhavāgbhata.
- 326 Verses borrowed by Cakrapāṇi from Bhadravarman are: jvarātīsāra 3-4; arśas 4-7; agnimāndya 86; raktapitta 13; tṛṣṇā 12; udāvarta 12; vidradhi 12; bhagandara 23; upadaṃśa 7; kuṣṭha 32; visarpa 22; kṣudraroga 81 and 86; nāsāroga 23; vamana 6.
- 327 A Bhās ya on arśas 76-82 (the recipe of vijayacūrna, from a n unknown source) is quoted.
- 328 I.e., Bhattāraharicandra.
- 329 Author of a Gandhaśāstra. Probably identical with the famous Bhavadevabhaṭṭa, who mastered many subjects. Vṛddhatrayī 52 and 55: Bhavadevabhaṭṭa, author of a Gandhaśāstra(nibandha), who lived in the eleventh or twelfth century; 464: a famous smārtapaṇḍita, who wrote the Saṇṇipātacandrikā (CC I, 398 and 694).

- 330 Four verses on the purification (śuddhi) of nakhī.
- 331 This treatise distinguishes five varieties of nakhī: badarapuṣpābhā, utpaladalābhā, aśva-khurākārā, gajakarṇasamā, and varāhakarṇasaṇkāśā. The same five varieties are described by Prthvīsinha and in the Vangadeśīyagandhaśāstra.
- 332 G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 52, 53, 55, 464) regards, for unknown reasons, Bhavyadatta as a specialist in metallurgy (lohaśāstra); he places him in the eleventh century.
- 333 Quoted repeatedly (fourteen times) in Anantakumāra's Yogaratnasamuccaya; Niścala's citations are not found in Anantakumāra's work.
- 334 Some verses about a formula against haemorrhoids (gudakīla) and similar growths (warts and polyps) of ears, nose, throat, navel and penis.
- 335 A recipe against afflictions caused by piśācas, grahas, bhūtas and brahmarāksasas.
- 336 Vrddhatrayī 48, 49-50: a work by Bindubhatta, who lived in the tenth century; 462: Bindunātha or Bindubhatta (ninth or tenth century) was the author of the Bindusāra or Bindusarngraha (see CC I, 373), Rasapaddhati and Bandhutrayavidhāna (CC I, 367; a work on Hathayoga). The Bindu who wrote the Rasapaddhati is, however, much later than Niścala.
- 337 The Bindusära does not contain recipes against įvarātīsāra as a distinct disorder.
- 338 Eight verses are quoted.
- 339 Five verses are quoted.
- 340 Mercury (pārada) is prescribed. Verses Cakrapāņi borrowed from the Bindusāra are: jvara 232–233; kāsa 39; arocaka 13; apasmāra 29; vātavyādhi 43 and 56–57; udara 43; galaganda 2, 8, 25; vidradhi 7; vraņasotha 52. Galaganda 19, borrowed from the Viśvasāra, is from the Bindusāra according to a variant.
- 341 A verse of Vāgbhaṭa (not found in A.h.U.6) is said to be inspired by the Bodhicaryāvatāra. This reference is only found in an additional passage of one of the MSS.
- 342 This work may have been written by Naradatta. Compare Tantrapradīpa.
- 343 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya.
- 344 The edition reads siṣṭāḥ, but the variant cakrasiṣyāḥ of one of the MSS is preferable; the quotation is in verse, like the other ones from the cakrasiṣyāḥ.
- 345 The quotations of these pupils of Cakra are in verse.
- 346 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 347 This Cakraţippaṇī consists of a variant of pāṇḍuroga 40cd; it is identical with the Cakraţippaṇī of Rakṣitapādāḥ, quoted ad pāṇḍuroga 35-40; 40cd is an addition (by Cakra) to 35-40ab, quoted from Caraka (Ci.16.73-77). Compare pāṇḍuroga 40cd with a remark of the same type (introduced by kecit tu) in Cakra's commentary ad Ca.Ci.16.102cd-105ab.
- 348 A commentary of Cakra or on the Cakradatta; contrasted with the Bakulavyākhyā.
- 349 The quotation ad amlapitta 23–24 derives from a commentary (the source of Cakra's verses is not indicated by Niścala); the quotation ad vireka 8–9 (= Su.Sū.44.24–26ab) is probably from a commentary on the Suśrutasaṃhitā, Niścala prefers Candana's interpretation to that of Cakra. G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 55) identifies Candana with Candranandana; this view is not defensible.
- 350 Absent from the lists of D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār. Not mentioned by Śivadā-sasena.
- 351 Five verses on the formula of jātīkādyataila.
- 352 Seven verses on the formula called gaurādyasarpis.

- 353 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 354 The Candikā isreferred to on a grammatical question. A variant reads Mārkandeyapurāna. The Candikā may be the Candikāstotra from the Mārkandeyapurāna (see CC I, 176). P.V. Sharma (1993: 37) assumes it to be the Durgāsaptaśatī, the same as the Devīmāhātmya, also found in the Mārkandeyapurāna (NCC IX, 83 and 143–149).
- 355 Dhruvapāla's commentary on the Yogaśataka.
- 356 Cakradatta, agnimāndya 15 = Yogaśataka 31.
- 357 Cakradatta, atīsāra 64 = Yogaśataka 10.
- 358 Cakradatta, vraņašotha 75, said to be taken from Amitaprabha, is identical with Yogaśataka 65.
- 359 Compare Yogaratnasamuccaya.
- 360 Caraka is extolled as the granthakārāṇām agraṇīḥ, who did not write down anything useless (ad rājayakṣman 9-12).
- 361 I.e., Drdhabala.
- 362 Cakra borrowed from the Carakottaratantra: bhagna la-d; kṣudraroga 4, 10, 11, 14, 17, 18, 21 ab, 24ab, 26, 34, 84–85, 96.
- 363 Absent from the lists compiled by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār. Not mentioned by Śivadāsasena.
- 364 The formulae of khadiragudikā and sahakāravati are quoted.
- 365 Compare Tisata.
- 366 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 367 A work by Amitaprabha. Cakrapāṇi borrowed chardi 23 from the Cikitsātiśaya.
- 368 Mentioned in the Candrikā.
- 369 Mentioned in Amitaprabha's Carakanyāsa.
- 370 Dandin's Kāvyādarśa is quoted.
- 371 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 372 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 373 Dattaka is quoted as an authority on kāmaśāstra in the Kāmasūtra (1.11) and Kuṭṭanīmata (1.77) (CC 1, 243, NCC VIII, 306). A variant reads Dentaka (NCC: not recorded). G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 55) regards Dentaka as an author on rasaśāstra from Southern India; he assigns him to the eleventh century.
- 374 Referred to by Prthvīsimha in a formula of gandhataila.
- 375 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 376 Deśānga is said to follow Bakula's opinion.
- 377 An anekārtha lexicon is quoted, which may be Dharanidāsa's Anekārthasāra, dating from the early twelfth century (C. Vogel, IL 326–327). G. Hāldār, who claims (Vrddhatrayī 55) that Niścala quotes Dharanidāsa's lexicon, places him in the eleventh century.
- 378 Quoted in a passage that is only found in one of the MSS.
- 379 Cakrapāni's Āvurvedadī pikā.
- 380 I.e., Cakrapāņidatta.
- 381 Almost all the quotations are found in the Dhanvantarīyanighaṇṭu. See: Dhanvantarīyanighaṇṭu. G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 53) regards this Dravyāvalī as Candraṭa's Vaidyakakoṣa (i.e., Candraṭa's Dravyāvalī).
- 382 Not listed by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 383 Absent from the lists of D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār. NCC: not recorded.
- 384 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār. I.e., the Mādhavanidāna. Compare Rugviniścaya.

- 385 A work of Bhavadevabhatta according to G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 52).
- 386 The formula of sahakāraguḍikā (mukharoga 109–110) was borrowed from the Gandhaśāstra.
- 387 NCC V, 309. A work of Prthvīsimha according to G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 52).
- 388 The variant reading Gandhatattva in all the passages cited may be preferable; the work quoted appears to be distinct from the other treatises on gandhayukti quoted by Niścala. Erroneously thought to be a treatise of Bhavyadatta by G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 52), who confuses this author with Bhavadeva. Seventeen verses are quoted, containing descriptions of fragrant substances and their best varieties. The other quotations are of the same type. The single quotation from the Śāstrīyanāmakoṣa of the Gandhatantra (ad vātavyādhi 227–271; Gandhatattva is not a variant in this case) contains a string of synonyms.
- 389 The variants read Gandhatattvaśāstra. The quotations are of the same type as those from the Gandhatantra.
- 390 A school of interpretation of the Carakasamhitā; jvara 124 = Ca.Ci.3.198cd-199ab.
- 391 A school of interpretation of the Carakasamhitā; karnaroga 18-22 = Ca.Ci.26.226-230.
- 392 A school of interpretation of the Carakasanhitā.
- 393 The reading of the gauḍāḥ differs from that preferred by the kāśmīrāḥ; kuṣṭha 8-12 = Ca. Sū.3.3-7.
- 394 Mentioned in a variant ad rājayakṣman 40-46: Vaidyasāra, Govardhana, Mādhavakara, Gopati (see D.Ch. Bhattacharyya, 1947b: 141). NCC: not recorded. An ancient muni according to G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 54).
- 395 Absent from the list compiled by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya.
- 396 One of Niścala's most distinguished authorities.
- 397 These quotations appear to be from a commentary, which is not the Karmamālā. Govardhana is not mentioned by Śivadāsasena; his works are not quoted by Anantakumāra. Govardhana follows upon Gadādhara and precedes Cakradatta in a list of authors ad jvara 64; Jejjaṭa was one of Govardhana's authorities (ad arśas 111–114 and agnimāndya 73–75); he is mentioned in the company of Mādhava, author of the Yogavyākhyā (kāsa 59–64; unmāda 29–30; gulma 9–10; udara 57); Sanātana's commentary on the Yogaśataka refers to Govardhana's Karmamālā, which establishes that Govardhana is earlier than Sanātana.
- 398 Arthamālā is a wrong reading for Karmamālā, the quotation from the Arthamālā is identical with one from the Karmamālā ad arśas 133-141.
- 399 This work is a commentary on the Yogaśataka. Niścala also quotes the Akṣadevīya Karmamālā, which is not a commentary on the Yogaśataka. Not mentioned by G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 52-56).
- 400 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 401 A prescription in verse is quoted. P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 17) suggests it to be the same as the Gurugrantha; the quotations from the latter work are, however, in prose.
- 402 A kind of commentary in prose, probably identical with the Guruparamparāvyākhyā.
- 403 The Gurugrantha quotes Bakula.
- 404 A variant of aréas 168 is quoted.
- 405 A commentary, probably identical with the Gurugrantha.
- 406 Details concerning the making up of the prescriptions are given.
- 407 Verses borrowed by Cakra from the Haramekhalä are: śūla 56; kşudraroga 52, 80, 99, 121; mukharoga 96; vṛṣya 54 and 56.
- 408 Absent from the lists compiled by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.

- 409 Absent from G. Hāldār's list; G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 462) records an anonymous Hārā-valī, dating from the ninth or tenth century.
- 410 On the identity of muñ jāta; this remark is repeated ad vṛṣya 26-36.
- 411 A remark on the identity of muñjātaphala (vṛṣya 27). D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 150) was convinced that Hārāvalīis an error for Dravyāvalīin this case, since he could not find the quotation in Purusottamadeva's Hārāvalī, which dates from the first half of the twelfth century (C. Vogel, IL 331). The corresponding passage of the Kusumāvalī(ad Siddhayoga 21.11) refers the quotation to the Dravyāvalyabhidhāna; it is absent from the Dhanvantarīvanighantu, cited as Dravyāvalīin Niścala's Ratnaprabhā.
- 412 Compare Bhattara(ka).
- 413 Indu's Śaśilekhā is quoted.
- 414 See: commentaries on the Carakasamhitā.
- 415 See: Īśāna.
- 416 A variant reads Isvarasena.
- 417 See: commentaries on the Carakasamhitā. Compare Īśānasena.
- 418 See: commentaries on the Carakasamhitā.
- 419 Jīvanātha is also quoted by Trivikrama. He is probably the same as the Jīvanākhya quoted by Śivadāsasena in his commentary on the Cakradatta (rasāyana 81).
- 420 Jīvanātha's treatise contains a formula resembling the khandakhādyaloha of the Cakradatta (raktapitta 82–96).
- 421 NCC VII, 338: probably the same as Jñānaśrīmitra, a Buddhist writer (see on him and his works: NCC VII, 339; M. Hahn, 1967: I, 12–15; H. Nakamura, 1996: 330–331; P.L. Paul, 1939: II, 21) associated with the Vikramaśīla monastery, and a younger contemporary of Atīša. Jñānaśrīmitra flourished in the first half of the eleventh century; the quotations are from a work on metrics, which clearly is his Vṛttamālāstuti (edited, translated into German and annotated by M. Hahn, 1967); compare the quotation ad śotha 54 with Vṛttamālāstuti 102 (kusumitelatāvellitā; see M. Hahn, 1967: I, 39).
- 422 Vrddhatrayī 54: an error for Kolahadāsa, who wrote the Kolahasainhitā in the tenth century. NCC V, 95: a Kolahasainhitā formed part of Kavīndrācārya's library (see Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram, Nr. 949). P.V. Sharma (AVI 180) records a Kalahasainhitā, dating from the twelfth century.
- 423 Kalahadāsa refers to Suśruta's kālinga and Caraka's māgadha system of weights.
- 424 NCC IV, 31. Vrddhatrayī 51 and 54: a synonym of Śambhunātha, author of the Kālajñāna. A formula ascribed to Kālapāda Śambhu is recorded by G. Mukhopadhyaya (HIM I, 40 and 71–72).
- 425 Seven verses are quoted on the preparation of a silājatuguţikā.
- 426 The famous poet.
- 427 NCC III, 260. The quotations show that this work was a metrical treatise on the preparation of compound drugs. Its author followed some views of Bhattāra and Jejjaṭa (Niścala ad rājayakṣman 9-12 and 24-25); Niścala agrees with its preference for a particular reading of Vāgbhaṭa and Candraṭa to a reading adopted by the Guruparamparāvyākhyā and the Vaidyapradīpa. G. Hāldār's contention (Vṛddhatrayī 52) that the Kalyāṇasiddhi is Ugrāditya's Kalyāṇakāraka is unfounded.
- 428 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 429 Niścala asserts that vātarakta 4 (a prescription) is a verse from Kāmarūpa.
- 430 A remark on the interpretation of the substance called śvetāśvakhura jā masī according to

- the gauḍāḥ and kāmarūpīyāḥ. Kṣudraroga 43 = A.h.U.32.16 (compare A.s.U.37.24) = Si-ddhayoga 57.36. Compare the comments of Indu and Śrīkaṇṭha.
- 431 A quotation from Vātsyāyana's Kāmasūtra according to G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 52).
- 432 A Karmamālā was written by Aksadeva and Govardhana.
- 433 Govardhana's Karmamālā on the Yogaśataka is quoted.
- 434 Govardhana's commentary on the Yogaśataka is quoted.
- 435 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 436 The quotations are partly in verse, partly in prose; the verses look like coming from a Nighantu, the prose passages may be from a commentary (on the Suśrutasanhitā?). The quotation from Lokoka ad vātavyādhi 272–276 is registered as from Kātoka by P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 16).
- 437 Mentioned in one of the MSS.
- 438 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 439 The Lauhaśāstra called Yogaratnākara is quoted.
- 440 The Lauhaśāstra called Yogasārasamuccaya is quoted.
- 441 Attributed to Siva according to G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 53).
- 442 Cakra borrowed śüla 57 from the Lohaśāstra.
- 443 On the use of iron in medicine.
- 444 The formula of simhyamṛtādyaghṛta (arśas 110) is ascribed to the Bodhisattva Lokanātha; Cakrapāni's text mentions a Bodhisattva.
- 445 The Lokavyavahārākhyakāmaśāstra is quoted.
- 446 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 447 Two quotations on a mahāsugandhitaila. See Kātoka.
- 448 P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 23) regards the Svayogavyākhyā referred to here as the Svalpayogavyākhyā.
- 449 A variant reads Yogaratnavyākhyā.
- 450 G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 53) identified the Dravyaguṇa quoted as Cakrapāṇidatta's work of that title.
- 451 Mādhavadrav yaguņa 26.3ab is quoted.
- 452 Mādhavadravvaguna 25.7 is quoted.
- 453 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 454 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 52-56). This Mādhavasaṇgraha is the Mādhavacikirsā according to D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 146).
- 455 Hikkāśvāsa 30-33ab = Siddhayoga 12.31-34ab.
- 456 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G.Hāldār.
- 457 A mantra, consisting of six verses, is quoted.
- 458 Compare Viśvavallabhā. A commentary on the Yogaśataka.
- 459 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 460 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 461 Amitaprabha and the Mālāare said to agree with Jejjaţa (and Kārttika, who follows Jejjaṭa) on the interpretation of a statement by Dṛḍhabala. P.V. Sharma (1993; Intr. 23) identifies the Mālā as Govardhana's Ratnamālā; a variant of (Govardhana's) Karmamālā reads Mālā (ad arśas 133–141).
- 462 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 463 Some verses about Cyavana are reproduced.
- 464 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.

- 465 A metrical medical treatise is quoted.
- 466 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 467 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 468 Cakra borrowed atīsāra 54; grahaņī 37–38 and 93–99, arsas 66–75, agnimāndya 29 from Nāgārjuna.
- 469 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 470 Mentioned in one of the MSS.
- 471 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 472 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 473 Compare Sūdaśāstra.
- 474 These verses are borrowed from Nala's treatise.
- 475 Medinīkara's Nānārthakoşa according to G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 53), whose identification is wrong, P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 20) suggests it to be Hemacandra's Anekārthasangraha.
- 476 Different from Medinīkośa, yāntavarga 77cd-78ab (kaṣāya).
- 477 Different from Medinīkośa, khāntavarga 12ab (višākha).
- 478 Naradatta may have been the author of the Bṛhattantrapradīpa.
- 479 A variant of Naradatta is Bhattāra; this variant is preferable, because a series of early commentators on the Carakasarnhitā is referred to: Bhattāra (or Naradatta), Jejjata and Īśāna. Naradatta was Cakrapāṇi's teacher.
- 480 Cakra is referred to as adhering to Naradatta's opinion.
- 481 Those who follow Naradatta's interpretations.
- 482 P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 20) asserts this to be a tippani of Cakrapāni, Naradatta's pupil, but the verses, quoted from an unknown source, do not have this tippani as an addition of Cakra; neither can the Āyurvedadī pikā be meant, because the stanzas are definitely not from the Carakasanhitā. Niścala may have had in mind a tippani of a pupil of Naradatta whose name is unknown to us. Compare the quotation from an unspecified tippani.
- 483 The same as Naradatta. See Naradatta (a commentator on the Carakasamhitā).
- 484 Cakradatta, kustha 97-100, was borrowed from the Nāvanīta.
- 485 G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 53) reads Nāmanītaka.
- 486 Arśas 120–126 was borrowed from the Nāvanītaka.
- 487 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 488 These quotations are neither from the Dhanvantarīyanighantu, nor from the Sodhalanighantu.
- 489 Absent from G. Haldar's list.
- 490 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 491 A school of interpretation of the Carakasainhitā.
- 492 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 144) read Pālapaula; he supposed this reading to be an error for Pākala or Pālakāpya.
- 493 Some names of fever in animals are quoted.
- 494 Īśāna quotes Pālakāpya's Ga jā yurvedaśāstra on the subject of weights.
- 495 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 496 The work on prosody by this author (the Prākṛtapingala) is referred to.
- 497 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār. D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 147) supposed this uncle (pitr-jyeṣṭha) of Niścala to be Bakula, but P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 21 and 87) threw doubt on this identification, which depends on the dates of Bakula and Niścala. Amitaprabha and Jejjata are referred to by Niścala's uncle.

- 498 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 499 The followers of Prabhākara, who wrote the Bṛhatī on Śabarasvāmin's commentary on Jaimini's Pūrvamīmāmsāsūtra.
- 500 An important authority on gandhaśāstra, quoted several times: on the five types of nakha or nakhī and the purification of a number of fragrant substances. One long quotation consists of eighteen verses, which refer to Dattaka, Nāgārjuna and Rambharāma. Vātavyādhi 258–263 and 266–268ab are borrowed from Pṛthvīsimba. G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 55) places Prthvīsimba in the ninth or tenth century.
- 501 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 502 Quoted on the purification of mercury.
- 503 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 504 Quoted on kşīrapāka.
- 505 On the identity of a medicinal plant.
- 506 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 507 On the Rāḍhīya tradition concerning the identity of a medicinal plant.
- 508 I.e., Vijayaraksita. Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 509 I.e., Vijayaraksita.
- 510 Compare Cakratippanī.
- 511 A commentator on the Suśrutasamhitā. Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 512 The name of a king.
- 513 Mentioned in a quotation from Pṛthvīsinha on the preparation of gandhataila. G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 55) regards him as a pupil of Dentaka (= Dattaka) and places him in the eleventh or twelfth century.
- 514 A quotation on the medicinal use of inorganic substances.
- 515 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 516 A recipe is quoted.
- 517 Ad Cakradatta, atīsāra 31-32 = Paryāyaratnamālā 1649-1651; the remark ad rājayaksman 65-66 refers to Paryāyaratnamālā 1748. D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b. 147) and P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 23) attribute the Ratnamālā, erroneously, to Govardhana. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 53) was right in identifying it as Mādhava's Paryāyaratnamālā.
- 518 G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 53) regards it as Buddhabhatta's Ratnaparīksā.
- 519 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 520 A verse on the bad effects of unpurified mercury.
- 521 I.e., Ravigupta.
- 522 Bhattoji Ravigupta.
- 523 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 524 This may be a lexicon or a work on grammar. See CC I, 534. Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 525 Vācaspati's lexicon of this title. See C. Vogel, IL 306-307. Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 526 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 527 The long formula of śivagutikā (rasāyana 167-189) is said to be from the Śaivasiddhānta.
- 528 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 529 The same as Śaivasiddhānta: the formula of śivagutikā was borrowed from the Śaivatantra.
- 530 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 531 Nasya 8-10 is from the śālāk ya.
- 532 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 533 The five kşīrivṛkşas are listed: udumbara, vaṭa, aśvattha, madhūka and plakṣa.

- 534 Śālihotra's formula of bālanārāyaṇataila (devised by Viṣṇu) is quoted.
- 535 This verse derives from Śālihotra.
- 536 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār. A variant reads Sangu. D.Ch. Bhattacharyya calls Śangu an author who wrote in Prakrit. Śanku(ka) is probably meant; this poet was one of the nine gems at the court of Vikramāditya. The quotation is in Prakrit. See on Śanku(ka): S.N. Dasgupta and S.K. De (1947; see index).
- 537 A quotation on the four types of sthāvaravisa.
- 538 Not mentioned by G. Haldar.
- 539 Cakrapāṇidatta's Cikitsāsaṇgrahais referred to or quoted, except ad grahaṇī 77-85, where other Sangrahas are meant.
- 540 Cakrapāṇidatta is meant, except ad kuṣṭha 134-135, where some other Sarṇgrahakṛt is mentioned
- 541 Authors who wrote a Saingraha.
- 542 Commentators on the Cakradatta.
- 543 Not mentioned by G. Haldar.
- 544 A long quotation of about twenty verses on a formula called navāyasarasāyana.
- 545 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 546 This treatise had the same prescription as the Cakradatta (jvara 244-246 is from Caraka), but with a single variant.
- 547 The author of the Vallabhā commentary on the Yogaśātaka. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 53) is in error, claiming that Sanātana commented on the Yogaśāstra. Compare Vallabhā.
- 548 A commentator on the Carakasannhitā is quoted. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 56) regards him as Sanndhyākaranandin, author of the Rāmacarita, who lived in the eleventh or twelfth century. See on this Rāma(pāla)carita, a citrakāvya which describes the story of Rāma and the reign of king Rāmapāla of Bengal: S.N. Dasgupta and S.K. De (1947): 339, 359–360, 618; Krishnamachariar (1989): 268 and 374; R.C. Majumdar (1974): 186–187.
- 549 Probably identical with the Nyāyasārāvalī. Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 550 A work of Bakula.
- 551 The author of the Sāroccaya follows the opinion of the Candrikā.
- 552 Compare Ravi(gupta).
- 553 A variant reads Bindusāra.
- 554 Compare Vrnda(kunda).
- 555 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 556 A variantreads Jinadāsa (the author of the Karmadanḍī). A commentary on the Yogaśataka is quoted. Govardhana wrote a commentary called Karmamālā on the Yogaśataka.
- 557 Quoted on the subject of weights. Rejected by Niścala. Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 558 Niścala quotes Śrīkarıthacakra, supposed to be Śrīkantha's version of the Cakradatta by PV. Sharma (1993: Intr. 15). The Kusumāvalī ad Siddhayoga 59.26 is referred to.
- 559 P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 26) regards this Śrīkantha as the commentator on Mādhavanidāna and Siddhayoga.
- 560 Cakra's Vyagradaridraśubhanikara.
- 561 Cakra's Vyagradaridraśubhamkara.
- 562 Absent from G. Hāldār's list. Compare Nalanṛpati's Sūdaśāstra. Bhavyadatta's Yogaratnākara contained a sūdaśāstrapariccheda (see Niścala ad jvara 31–32).
- 563 Cakra borrowed jvara 32 and rājayakṣman 15 from the Sūdaśāstra.

- 564 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 565 Mentioned in a list of Samgrahas, i.e., therapeutic compendia.
- 566 A commentator on the Suśrutasamhitä. Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 567 A commentator on the Carakasamhitā. Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 568 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 569 One of the two quotations consists of eight verses on the purification of sulphur. Umāpati's Rasāyana may be the work consulted by Niścala.
- 570 Rādhādideśayogas against amlapitta are quoted.
- 571 The tantrantaras quoted are the treatises of Caksusyena and Harita.
- 572 These verses are from a tantrantara used by Candrata.
- 573 Two quotations from a tantrantara used by the author of the Vaidyapradīpa.
- 574 These verses are from a tantrantara used as a source by Candrata.
- 575 These verses are from a tantrantara used by Candrata.
- 576 Verses of the Cakradatta borrowed from an unspecified tantrāntara are: kṣudraroga 23; mukharoga 8 and 51; rasāyana 160 and 166.
- 577 This treatise may be identical with the Bṛhattantrapradī pa, as already suggested by G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 53).
- 578 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 579 Prescriptions are cited. The term ekānda is explained in the quotation ad vrsya 55.
- 580 Not a ţippaŋī of Cakra. A Naradattaśiṣyaţippaŋī? P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 18) regards it as a Candrataţippaŋī.
- 581 Compare Cikitsākalikā.
- 582 A commentary on the formula of bṛhanmāṣataila (vātavyādhi 156-154) is quoted. Although Niścala refers to Trilocana as a rādnīyavaidyopādhyāya and prājña, he does not accept his interpretation. NCC VIII, 262: Trilocana, a kāyastha, son of Megha and father of Gadādhara, was the author of the Pañjikā on Durga's commentary on the Kātantra. Vṛddhatrayī 464: Trilocana, a (vaidya)kāyastha, father of Gadādhara, was the author of the Vaidyasāra and Kalāpapañjī; he lived in the eleventh century. Niścala once associates the Vaidyaprasāraka with Gadādhara (ad jvara 256-257).
- 583 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 584 A school of interpetation of the Carakasamhitā.
- 585 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 586 Cakra borrowed nādīvraņa 5 from Ugrasena.
- 587 Ujjvala is a lexicographer, quoted in Mallinātha's commentary on the Meghadūta (CC I, 62). Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 588 A distinguished physician (P.V. Sharma, 1993: Intr. 15). D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 139): Śivadāsasena calls him a distinguished physician (antaranga); he should not be confused with Umāpatidhara (twelfth century) or with Umāpati, the grammarian of the Kalāpa school (fourteenth century). G. Hāldār's claim (Vrddhatrayī 54) that Umāpati was one of the courtiers of Lakṣmaṇasena is based on a confusion with Umāpatidhara.
- 589 Ascribed to Ātreya (?), quoted by Āṣā♠havarman; a quotation in prose. Absent from G. Hāldār's list (Vṛddhatrayī 52-56).
- 590 G. Hāldār (Viddhatrayī 54) mentions a Sūksmasamhitā.
- 591 A work of Bhavyadatta.
- 592 A work of Bhavyadatta.
- 593 Mādhavakara's Vaidyaprasāra is quoted (vaidyaprasāre mādhavakaro muniś ca). A variant reads vaidyasāre govardhano mādhavakaro gopatiś ca.

- 594 The Vaidyaprasāra and Vaidyaprasāraka are both quoted twice. The Vaidyaprasāra agrees with Indu
- 595 See: Gadādhara.
- 596 A school of interpretation of the Carakasamhitā. Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 597 P.V. Sharma reads Vallabha in his edition, but records (1993: Intr. 24) that a Vallabhā is quoted on these verses.
- 598 Sanātana's commentary on the Yogaśataka. Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya.
- 599 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 600 Compare Bhavadevī yagandhaśāstra.
- 601 A commentator on the Carakasamhitä.
- 602 A quotation on pharmaceutical processing and one from a treatise on jyotişa. These quotations are not found in the Bṛhatsaṃhitā.
- 603 An author belonging to the Prābhākara school of Pūrvamīmāmsā is quoted.
- 604 The formula of Vasistha's vasisthaharītakī is quoted from a tantrāntara.
- 605 An authority on lohaśāstra and rasaśāstra.
- 606 Nāgāriuna is referred to.
- 607 Cakra borrowed from Videha: kāsa 43; kṣudraroga 12, 15, 16, 66–71, 83, 112; mukharoga 89 and 97–98 (common to Videha and Cakṣuṣyeṇa); karṇaroga 34, 36, 37; nāsāroga 2–3 (common to Videha and Caksusyena).
- 608 The name of a king from a story, mentioned in connection with the recipe called śrībāhuśālaguḍa. G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 56) regards him, quite unfoundedly, as the author of the Samsārāvartakosa (CC I, 681) and a Vikramaparākrama.
- 609 Ca.Vi.3.39 is quoted.
- 610 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 611 A school of interpretation of the Carakasamhitā.
- 612 A medical author is quoted. A variant reads Visnuśarman. Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 613 Not mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 614 This verse was taken from the Viśvasāra or, according to a variant, the Bindusāra.
- 615 Mahīdhara's commentary on the Yogaśataka.
- 616 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 617 A varianthas Vrddhavāgbhata.
- 618 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 619 Compare Siddhayoga.
- 620 Compare Vrnda.
- 621 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār. Vyādi is said to be the Vindhyavāsin to whom the recipe is attributed.
- 622 A work of Cakrapānidatta. Compare Śubha(mkara).
- 623 Not mentioned by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and G. Hāldār.
- 624 Probably a quotation from the Mahābhārata.
- 625 Deśīyayogamālā is a variant of Akşadevīya Karınamālā in one of the MSS.
- 626 A work of Nāgārjuna.
- 627 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 628 Cakra borrowed stanza 14 from the Yogapañcāśikā; it is also found in the Āyurvedasāra.
- 629 A work of Bhavyadatta.
- 630 The Yogaratnākara follows the (Pātañjala)lohaśāstra.

- 631 On alchemy.
- 632 This may be Candrata's work of this title. Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 633 An ayurvedic prescription.
- 634 A lauhacūrnayoga.
- 635 Absent from G. Hāldār's list. Probably the same as the Yogaratnasamuccaya.
- 636 A lauhayoga.
- 637 Two treatises called Yogaśata, those by Nāgārjuna and Akṣadeva, are quoted acording to D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 146). P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 23) is right in stating that the Yogaśataka of Nāgārjuna or Vararuci was Cakra's source. See: Yogaśataka.
- 638 Govardhana's Karmamālā is referred to.
- 639 Probably Sanātana.
- 640 Absent from G. Hāldār's list.
- 641 Cakra borrowed kāsa 65-68 from the Yogayukti.
- 642 This is the name of a formula (P.V. Sharma, 1991a: 109; 1993: Intr. 29), not a work on lohaśāstra, as suggested by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya.
- 643 Also mentioned by G. Hāldār.
- 644 Also mentioned by G. Hāldār. The edited text reads śrīvikramapurakrama (see the formula of a lakṣmīvilāsataila quoted from an unknown text ad vātavyādhi 276–278), explained as the tradition of Vikramapura by P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 29).
- 645 Ad Śārṅgadharasamhitā III.8.15.
- 646 Twenty-one references. Gopāladāsa had a predilection for Niścala's views and called him Niścalakarapādāḥ (see D.Ch. Bhattacharyya, 1948: 322).
- 647 Niścala refers to it as Rāḍhā. See on this region: N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 257; N. Dey (1979): 164–165. Niścala mentions rāḍhīya names of medicinal plants: ad agnimāndya 9–10; mūtrakrcchra 28; masūrikā 5; vṛṣya 15–25 and 38–44; some medicines which were current in Rāḍhā are described ad amlapitta 23–24. See also D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1943). Other parts of Bengal mentioned by Niścala are Vanga (ad vātavyādhi 227–271 and āmavāta 66–71) and Varendrī (ad kustha 24).
- 648 See Niścala ad ivara 292.
- 649 P.V. Sharma prefers in his edition the reading Maheśvara to Khasarpana, the reading found in the Calcutta MS.
- 650 Lokanātha is invoked at the beginning of the formula. P.V. Sharma prefers in his edition the reading Somanātha to Lokanātha, the variant occurring in the Calcutta MS.
- 651 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 129. See Sādhanamālā I, 42-43; compare F.W. Thomas (1903): 13 (Subharnkara is mentioned), 14, 22 (Subharnkara is mentioned). Lokanātha or Lokeśvara is, in his turn, an emanation of Amitābha (see Sādhanamālā II, Intr. 152-155) or a form of Avalokiteśvara (see M.-Th. de Mallmann, 1967: 175-180; D.L. Snellgrove, 1957: 78, 115). See on Khasarpaṇa: B. Bhattacharyya (1964): 140-141; N.K. Bhattasali (1929): 25-28; L. Chimpa and A. Chattopadhyaya (1970): 194-195; A. Foucher (1905): 24-28; M.-Th. de Mallmann (1967): 194-197. See on Khasarpaṇasādhanas and an Āryakhasarpaṇalokeśvarasādhana: F.W. Thomas (1903): 11-13, 14, 22.
- 652 This treatise is referred to ad kustha 38.
- 653 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 130 and 133. P.K. Gode (1939a) and N.N. Das Gupta (1936/37) are two other authors who seriously considered the possibility that Vijayarakşita was Niścala's guru.
- 654 Niścala quotes earlier commentators on the Cakradatta, whose views he rejects (see his comments ad vidradhi 8).

- 655 Śrīkanthadatta, for instance, names Vijayarakşita as his teacher in the introductory verses to his part of the Madhukośa.
- 656 P.V. Sharma (1976): 76, 79-80; (1993): Intr. 5 and 39. Compare AVI 217-218.
- 657 P.V. Sharma (1993): Intr. 26.
- 658 Ad Cakradatta, jvarātīsāra 2 (= Siddhayoga 2.4); raktapitta 6 (= 9.4); svarabheda 6 (= 13. 4); upadarņša 3 (= 49.2); kuṣṭha 116–119 (= 51.98–101) and 159 (= 51.137); mukharoga 32–33 (= 58.29–31); karnaroga 4 (= 59.3ef); anuvāsana 24–25 (= 75.19).
- 659 Ad Cakradatta, arsas 107-110; netraroga 36.
- 660 Partially in conformity are the quotations ad śūla63 (= Siddhayoga 26.52) and pariņāmaśūla 36-41 (= 27.31-36).
- 661 See, however, Niścala's quotations from a Gurugrantha in prose, which may be a commentary on the Cakradatta.
- 662 Ad vidradhi 8.
- 663 P.V. Sharma (1993): Intr. 5 and 39.
- 664 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 137.
- 665 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 135) also mentions Niścala's criticism of Cakra's pupils.
- 666 Ad pānduroga 35-40.
- 667 Ad agnimāndya 2 and vātavyādhi 106-116.
- 668 P.V. Sharma (1993): Intr. 40. Compare P.V. Sharma (1976): 79; AVI 217-218.
- 669 Ad āmavāta 29-34.
- 670 Compare the formulae of simhanādaguggulu (Cikitsāsārasaṃgraha, vātarakta 166–172 and 173–179). See also D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 147.

- 674 P.V. Sharma (1993): Intr. 38.
- 675 P.V. Sharma (1993): Intr. 19.
- 676 Niścala appears to follow Cakrapāṇidatta, not Dalhaṇa, in his comments ad aśmarī 2-4 (modelled after Su.Sū.38.12-13).
- 677 P.V. Sharma (1993): Intr. 40.
- 678 The quotation (ad mukharoga 113-117), introduced by yad uktam, is identical with Gu-nasamgraha 333-334. See P.V. Sharma (1993): Intr. 38.
- 679 See: Sodhala.
- 680 See C. Vogel, IL 326-327.
- 681 See C. Vogel, IL 331.
- 682 Ad kuştha 74-82.
- 683 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 133.
- 684 Rāmapāla reigned from 1078 to 1120 according to D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 134), whose calculation of the year of this king's death appeared in an earlier article (1927: 583); D.Ch. Bhattacharyya's method was criticized by R.C. Majumdar (1974: 164).
- 685 P.V. Sharma (1976): 65-76; (1993): Intr. 34-35.
- 686 P.V. Sharma refers to *Haraprasād Śāstrī's edition (Calcutta 1969) of Samdhyākaranandin's Rāmacarita (see CC III. 109 and 143).
- 687 See Niścala ad unmāda 17.

- 695 P.V. Sharma (1976): 77; (1993): 36-37.
- 696 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 129-134) assigned Niścala to the period A.D. 1110-1120. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 51, 57, 196, 199, 278, 466) places Niścala in the twelfth or thirteenth century.
- 697 See on the particularities of the interpolated text and commentary: P.V. Sharma (1993): 52-79.
- 698 See on the author: commentaries on the Carakasamhitā.
- 699 The title is found at the end of the work.
- 700 See the introductory and concluding verses of the Tattvacandrikā. Compare the similar remarks in the introductory verses of Niścala's Ratnaprabhā.
- 701 An authority on alchemy, not mentioned by Niścala; Cakrapāṇi's description of abhraka-śodhana is based on that by Aghora according to Śivadāsasena. The NCC records a medical Vidyāvalī by an Aghora (I, 56) and the Bhiṣaksarvasva of Aghoranāthaśāstrin (I, 57).
- 702 Niścala's quotations from the Amoghayogatantra are entirely different.
- 703 Not quoted by Niścala.
- 704 Niścala quotes a Bhadravarman, not a Bhadra.
- 705 Quoted in ed. q, on the formula of lokanātharasa (plīhayakrt 21). Not quoted by Niścala.
- 706 See also Hariścandra.
- 707 A quotation on the identity of a medicinal plant. Not mentioned by Niścala.
- 708 Not quoted by Niścala.
- 709 Not mentioned by Niścala.
- 710 Dhruvapāla, who wrote a commentary on the Yogaśataka.
- 711 Candrāta is the same as Candrata.
- 712 Not quoted by Niścala.
- 713 NCC: not recorded. Compare Niścala's Dāsarasāyana.
- 714 Probably Cakrapāni's Āyurvedadīpikā.
- 715 This Guṇapāṭha, not quoted by Niścala, is the second part, the Guṇasaṇgraha, of the So-dhalanighaṇṭu; the quotations ad atisāra 10 and chardi 19 are identical with So-dhalanighaṇṭu II.1 49cd.
- 716 See the notes on the quotation from the Hārāvalī in Niścalakara's Ratnaprabhā.
- 717 See also Bhattarahariścandra.
- 718 NCC: not recorded. Probably the same as the Jīvanātha, quoted by Niścala.
- 719 Not quoted by Niścala.
- 720 The Mādhavanidāna is quoted.
- 721 Compare the Madhyasanhitā, quoted by Niścala.
- 722 This Maheśvara is a medical authority, different from the author of the Viśvaprakāśa; compare the quotations from the Maheśvarapattrikā. Maheśvara is not quoted by Niścala.
- 723 Not quoted by Niścala, who is earlier than Medinī.
- 724 The quotation ad rasāyana 123-125 is only found in ed. q (ad rasāyana 54), not in ed. s.

- 725 The NCC (X, 44) records two authors of a lexicon of this name: Nandadāsa and Hanumān. Not quoted by Niścala.
- 726 Not quoted by Niścala.
- 727 Compare Ratnaprabhā. See P.V. Sharma (1993): upodghāta 10-13.
- 728 Ed. q quotes Niścala on a verse that is absent from ed. s (ed.q, verse 67).
- 729 Parameśvararaksita was the author of the Gaṇādhyāya (NCC: not recorded), a work on the classification of medicines (STMI 168). Not quoted by Niścala.
- 730 Not quoted by Niścala.
- 731 Not quoted by Niścala. The NCC (VIII, 72) records several authors of a work of this title. A medical Prayogaratnākara was written by Kavikanthahāra.
- 732 The reference to rasaśāstra and the quotations from Rasataraṅgiṇī and Rasendrasārasaṃgraha are found in ed. q (ad plīhayakṛt 21), not in ed. s. Niścala does not mention these works.
- 733 See preceding note.
- 734 See note on rasaśāstra.
- 735 Not quoted by Niścala. The Ratnakośa is, according to the quotations from it, a nighanţu. A work of this title is quoted by commentators on kośas, for example, by Bhānuji Dīkṣita in his Vyākhyāsudhā on the Amarakoṣa and Mallinātha in his Amarapadapārijāta on the same lexicon. Compare CC I, 489.
- 736 Compare Niścala.
- 737 Compare Siddhasāra.
- 738 Not mentioned by Niścala.
- 739 See C. Vogel, IL 306-307.
- 740 This is a quotation from the Suśrutasamhitā.
- 741 The Samgraha is Cakrapāni'a Cikitsāsamgraha.
- 742 The Samgrahakāra is Cakrapāni.
- 743 The Samgrahakrt is Calcrapāni.
- 744 See also Ravigupta.
- 745 Compare Vrnda.
- 746 Niścala does not mention Śrīkanthadatta.
- 747 Edition q reads Candraţī kā.
- 748 Compare Siddhayoga and Vrndasamgraha.
- 749 These quotations are from the Kusumāvalī on the Siddhayoga.
- 750 Niścala quotes a Yogaratnasunuccaya and Yogaratnasārasamuccaya.
 751 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 143) and G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 167).
- 752 Compare P.V. Sharma (1993): Intr. 12.

Part 7

Authors and works from A.D. 600-1500

Chapter 1 Authors and works from the period A.D. 600–1000

- 1 NCC I, 459. Check-list Nr. 48. STMI 625-626. Edition: The Aṣṭāṅga Nighaṇṭu of Ācārya Vāhaṭa, ed. by Dr. P.V. Sharma, The Kuppuswamy Sastri Research Institute, Madras 1973 (previously published in the Journal of Oriental Research, Madras, 38, 1968/69, I-XXIII, 1-52, I-XI, and *39, 1969/70, I-XI, 1-12). This ed. is based on two MSS (Cat. Madras Nr. 13256 and Cat. Tanjore Nr. 11297). See on these MSS: P.V. Sharma's Intr. to his ed., I-V (thereare considerable differences between the two MSS; their texts are very corrupt and had to be reconstructed on the basis of the Amarakosa and the Dhanvantarinighantu).
- 2 Cat. Taniore Nr. 11297.
- 3 Verse 202: "After describing those drugs which are (contained) in the ganas of the Samgraha and Alpasamgraha (= Aṣṭāṅgaḥṛdaya)..." P.V. Sharma is wrong in asserting that the Aṣṭāṅganighaṇṭu describes the drugs according to the gaṇas of the Aṣṭāṅgaḥṛdaya (Intr. to his ed., XIX).
- 4 See A.h.Sū.15.9-45 and A.s.Sū.16.2-37. The eight groups of A.h.Sū.15.1-8 are not discussed
- 5 Stanza 30.
- 6 It may be a later addition, because A.s.Sū.16.40 speaks of a total of twenty-five groups, though the number is actually twenty-six.
- 7 See the long series of examples in P.V. Sharma's Intr. to his ed., XXI-XXII.

- 10 P.V. Sharma (DGV IV, 269) considers the author to be a Vāhaṭācārya who is different from Vāgbhaṭa. P. Hymavathi (1993: 48-49) regards a Bāhaṭācārya as the author of the Aṣṭā-nganighaṇṭu and the Bāhaṭagrantha.
- 11 See P.V. Sharma's Intr. to his ed., VII-VIII (the examples are from verses 380-400). The date of the Amarakoşa remains uncertain, but it may have been composed in the sixth century (C.Vogel. IL 309-310).
- 12 See P.V. Sharma's Intr. tohis ed., XII, where nine quotations, which, in P.V. Sharma's view, can only be from the Aṣṭāṅganighaṇṭu, are listed. See Indu for a critical evaluation of this, not sufficiently established, claim.

- 22 Compare G.J. Meulenbeld (1979): 71. P. Hymavathi (1993: 48-49) is not very helpful in expressing as his opinion that the author of the Aṣṭānganighaṇṭu may have lived during the last quarter of the thirteenth and the first quarter of the fourteenth century because his work is quoted or referred to by other scholars from the middle of the fourteenth century onwards.

- 73 NCC VI, 355-356. Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram, Nr. 1033 (Madanādinighaṇṭa). Candranandana does not mention the name of his nighaṇṭu. The colophons of the Kottayam edition call it Madanādinighaṇṭu, a title easily explained since the first drug described is called madana.

Edition: Candranandana's Madanādi-nighaṇṭu, ed. by Aṣṭa Vaidya Vayaskara N.S. Mooss, Vaidyasarathy Sanskrit Series, Book No. 8, Kottayam 1985. This edition is based on four MSS, three from South India and one from Paris (see the Intr. to the ed. 11–17); it does not present the viprakīrṇadravyaprakaraṇa, because of the bad state of this part of the text in the only MS containing it that was available to N.S. Mooss. A fifth MS, deposited at the Asiatic Society, Calcutta (*Nr. G.8426) was examined by P.V. Sharma. His observations on this MS (see his articles: 1985b and 1986b) show the title of the work to be Madanādinighaṇṭu; as an alternative title, Gaṇanighaṇṭu is written on the margin in a different hand. P.V. Sharma also discovered that the Calcutta MS resembles the Paris MS very closely, which indicates a common source for both. The readings of the Calcutta MS enabled P.V. Sharma to improve numerous readings of the Kottayam edition and to fill part of its gaps.

The section on miscellaneous drugs (viprakīmadravya) forms part of the Calcutta MS and of one of those from Kerala. It has been separately edited by P.V. Sharma: The Miscellaneous portion of Madanadi Nighantu of Chandranandana, Supplement to BIIHM 16, 1986, published in 1987.

Unfortunately, neither N.S. Mooss nor P.V. Sharma made use of the quotations from the Madanādinighanṭu and the synonyms found in Candranandana's Padārthacandrikā to improve the readings of the text they edited.

- 74 NCC III, 96; V, 239; VI, 355-356: Oṣadhinighaṇṭu or Gaṇanighaṇṭu; recorded separately from the Madanādinighaṇṭu. Check-list Nr. 295: Gaṇanighaṇṭu. STMI 44: Oṣadhinighaṇṭu. P. Cordier (1901c: 185) referred to Candranandana's nighaṇṭu as Gaṇanighaṇṭu, and once, erroneously, as Guṇanighaṇṭu (1903b: 350). The work is called Guṇanighaṇṭu in J. Filliozat's list of MSS of the collection P. Cordier in Paris (Liste Nr. 31), although the title page of the MS itself clearly indicates its title as Gaṇanighaṇṭu (see Intr. 14 to the Kottayam ed.); the Paris MS is a copy of a MS preserved in the Palace library of Bikaner (see Intr. 17 to the Kottayam ed.). A Gaṇanighaṇṭu by Candranandana, mentioned by Bāpālāl Vaidya (1968, Intr. 37) is probably a misprint for Gaṇanighaṇṭu.
- 75 See preceding note.
- 76 The Tibetan translation of the Madanādinighantu (see below) only contains the synonyms.
- 77 Actually, Vāgbhata describes thirty-three groups (see A.h.Sū.15.46), which was a source of confusion to N.S. Mooss (see the Intr. to his ed. 14-6; compare N.S. Mooss, 1980: 25), who tried to solve the difficulty, in conformity with a tradition prevalent in Kerala, by splitting up gana six, the dūrvādigana, into two groups, a dūrvādigana proper and a sthirādigana. P.V. Sharma gave a different and more convincing explanation by pointing out that ganas five and six, the bhadradārvādi- and dūrvādigana, describe drugs subduing vāta and

- pitta, and that the group subduing kaphahas deliberately been left out because it consists of substances already mentioned as forming part of preceding groups.
- 78 The viprakīrņadravyaprakarana is not a later addition, but belongs to the original Madanā-dinighanu since it forms part of the Tibetan translation and is quoted under Candranandana's name by Ksīrasvamin.
- 79 Vāgbhata only mentions the chief actions of the gana to which a drug belongs.
- 80 According to P.Cordier the correct Tibetan title is Yan-lag brgyad-pa-nas bstan-paḥi sman-gyi min-gi rnam-grans, i.e., Aṣṭāngopadiṣṭabheṣajanāmasūcī. See on the Tibetan translation: Vaidya Bhagwan Dash (1987) (based on the Tibetan text, with Sanskrit equivalents, botanical identifications, and notes); P. Cordier (1903a): 615-616; P. - 83 Śivadatta quotes the Madanādinighantu as Candranandana ad Śivakoṣa 340 (= Madanādi 24.11); two other quotations from Candranandana agree only partially with verses from the Madanādinighantu (compare the quotations ad Śivakoṣa 2.31 with Madanādi 8.21, and the quotation ad 441 with viprakīma, p.13: tāmalakī).
- 84 Candra and Candranandana are quoted ad Nighaniuseșii84–85ab (= Madanādi3.7-8),91–92ab (= 16.19), 130cd-131ab (= 1.26-27), 135cd-136ab (= viprakīrna, p.13), 137 (= I. 8), 244 (= viprakīrna, p.28), 256–257ab (compare Madanādi 24.7), 260–261ab (compare Madanādi 5.3), 307ab (= 24.11), and 325 (= 31.26).

- 92 Identified as Mucuna monosperma DC. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1137).
- 93 P.V. Sharma (1986b) was temporarily convinced that the two are different; in earlier publications he assumed the two to be identical (AVI208-209 and 380; 1976a: 107); in a recent publication (1993: Intr. 34) he returned to his early views on this issue. C. Vogel (1965: 15-16) is doubtful on this problem. Usually, however, both authors are regarded as identical (see, for example, Mooss's Intr. to his ed. of the Madanādinighantu, 7-11; STMI 44).

- 97 The Tibetan equivalent is, according to P. Cordier, Chags-la mnon-par dgah-ba in the Madanādinighantu, Chags-pa-la dgah-ba in the Padārthacandrikā; P. Cordier renders these names as Ravinandana, adding that Prema- or Anandanandana are more literal translations. Vaidya Bhagwan Dash renders Chags-pa-la mnon-par dgah-ba as Ratyabhinandana; C. Vogel (1965: 15), who reads Chags-pa-la dgah-ba, gives Ratinandana as its Sanskrit equivalent (zla-ba is the Tibetan equivalent of Sanskrit candra, chags-pa of rati, mnon-par of abhi, and dgah-ba of nandana).
- 98 NCC VI, 355. See the colophon and translator's postscript to the Tibetan version of the Padārthacandrikā, where Candranandana's grandfather is called Mahāśrīnandana (Mooss's Intr. to the Madanādinighaṇṭu, 10). Compare on Candranandana's genealogy: L. Rabgay (1981): 16.
- 99 See the introduction to this commentary by Candranandana himself.
- 100 As indicated in the Tibetan translation of the Padārthacandrikā (see P. Cordier; C. Vogel, 1965: 15). Candranandana is regarded as a contemporary of king Abhimanyu II (A.D. 958–972) of Kaśmīr (see P. Cordier, 1909–15: *III, 472, referred to by C. Vogel, 1965: 15). The author's colophon and translator's postscript to the Tibetan translation of the Padārthacandrikā praise a king Thakhana, who is identified as the Śāhi ruler Thakkana, a contemporary of Abhimanyu II, against whom Yaśodhara, the latter's commander-in-chief, undertook a military expedition (Mooss's Intr. to the ed. of the Madanādinighaṇṇu, 9–11, based on information supplied b y C. Vogel).
- 101 R.E. Emmerick (1977): 136. C. Vogel (1965): 15. The colophon and postscript to the Tibetan translation of the Padārthacandrikā mention that it was made by the Indian professor Jārandhara and the monk Rin-chen bzan-po (Mooss's Intr. to the Madanādinighaṭṭṭu, 10). Vaidya Bhagwan Dash gives A.D. 1013 as the year in which this translation was made. P.V. Sharma (AVI 208) mentions the period 1033-35. See on Rin-chen bzan-po: Bhagwan Dash (1976): 44; T. - 103 R.E. Emmerick (1977): 1163. Rechung (1973): 209–210. Bhagwan Dash calls the Candradeva, visited by the elder G-yu thog-pa, Candranandana (Bhagwan Dash, 1976: 4; 1987: Preface 8) and Candrābhinandana (Bhagwan Dash 1976: 15); he calls the latter a physician who may or may not be identical with Candranandana. C. Vogel (1965: 15–16) is of the opinion that Candranandana may or may not be identical with the physician Candrābhinandana (Zla-ba-la mnon-dgah), who is said to have assisted Vairocana in putting the Rgyud-bži into Tibetan at the time of king Khri-sron lde béan (A.D. 755–797), or with the medical lexicographer Candranandana. Lokesh Candra (Intr. to Terry Clifford, 1984: 16) asserts that Candranandana rendered the Sanskrit original of the Rgyud-bži into Tibetan. Terry Clifford too (1984: 42) is in error when claiming that Candranandana wrote down in Sanskrit the teaching of the Rgyud-bži and gave it to the Tibetan translator Vairocana on the occasion of the latter's pilgrimage to India; he regards Candranandana as a pupil of Aśvaghoşa. Most sources relate that Vairocana, after receiving the original, translated it into Tibetan. See on Vairocana: Bhagwan Dash (1976a): 18; Rechung (1973): 17, 187, 203, 298. See on the Rgyud-bźi: Vāgbhata.

Rechung (1973: 14) relates that, according to the Tibetan tradition, Zla-ba mnon-dgah was a paṇḍit from Kaśmīr and a disciple of Aśvaghoṣa; to this Aśvaghoṣa, who was a prolific author, a number of medical treatises are attributed: Yan-lag brgyad-pa chen-po, Yan-lag brgyad-pa-la lijug-pa, and Yan-lag brgyad-pa ni sñiñ-po bsdus-pa. Similar statements about Aśvaghoṣa are found in Terry Clifford (1984: 42), who renders the titles of these medical treatises (correctly) as 'The great eight branches', 'Entering the eight branches' and 'Collection of the essence of the eight branches'; he adds, as a fourth treatise, an autocommentary on the last work of the three; one of his notes says (1984: 245) that, according to the Tibetans, Aśvaghoṣa and Vāgbhaṭa are the same person (see also: P. Yonten Arya, 1998: X); T. Clifford (1984: 42) ascribes to Candranandana, Aśvaghoṣa's pupil, a commentary on his teacher's works, a dictionary of their medical terms, and major volumes of his own.

- 104 R.E. Emmerick (1977): 1136. See on this issue also R.F.G. Müller (1932): 793–794. Emmerick's view is criticized by M. Taube (1981: 18–19, 22, 28).
- 105 G. Huth (1895a): 270–271, (1895b): 280–281; compare P. Cordier (1901c): 180. Huth transcribed Candranandana's name wrongly as Candrananda (see C. Vogel, 1965: 15). The NCC (I, 464) places Candranandana in the tenth century; P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 34) assigns him to about A.D. 1000.
- 106 NCC VI, 354.
- 107 The NCC (VII, 26) calls this commentary Yogaratna, which may be based on a confusion with Candrața's Yogaratnasamuccaya. Seef or the editions: Tīsaṭa. References are to ed. d. - 130 Cat. IO Nr. 2646. The MS is incomplete, covering only chapters 12 and 13 of the Sūtrasthāna, the whole of the Nidāna- and Śārīrasthāna, and the greater part of the Uttaratantra; explanatory notes are added above and below the text, which are, according to Hoernle (1906a: 292–293), extracts from Dalhana. Another, also incomplete, MS forms part of the collection of the Rajasthan Oriental Institute at Udaypur; this MS, *S.No.1806(3), copied in A.D. 1407, covers the Kalpasthāna only (see R.P. Bhatnagar, 1992: 287).

- 135 AVI 66-67. This opinion is repeated by K.R. Srikanta Murthy (1992): 200-201.
- 136 Additions of Candraţa are, according to P.V. Sharma: Su.Sū.24.11 and 45.18-19, Ni.5.33-34, the references to blood as a fourth doşa (e.g., Su.Sū.21.3), and the references to the medicinal plant called aśvabalā (Su.Sū.46.256 and 261, Ci.1.113 and 6.8); he also detected influence from the side of Candrata in Su.Sū.6.17-20.
- 137 Anantakumāra's Yogaratnasamuccaya contains about 190 quotations from the Pāṭhaśu-ddhi; the Mahāpāṭhaśuddhi is cited at least twenty-eight times (probably some quotations from a text indicated as Mahā-are also from the Mahāpāṭhaśuddhi).

- 139 CC I, 181 and 479; II, 111. NCC VI, 354. Check-list Nr. 1058. STMI 45: one of the MSS contains 4,580 verses. CBORI XVI, 1, Nrs. 176–177; Nr. 176 can be regarded as a complete MS (R.P. Bhatnagar, 1992: 283); Nr. 177 contains the ctirṇādhikāra (R.P. Bhatnagar, 1992: 283). Cat. BHU Nr. 143 (contains the text from ghṛtādhikāra up to mukharogacikitsā; see R.P. Bhatnagar, 1992: 285). Cat. Anup Sanskrit Library Nrs. 4182–83 (these two MSS belong together and contain a complete text: 4182 contains the text up to bastividhi, 4183 is a continuation in a different hand to the end of the kalpādhikāra; compare R.P. Bhatnagar, 1992: 283–284). MSS Nrs. 4816 E (P.M. Jinavi jaya, 1965: II B, 230–231: dating from the seventeenth century, Appendix 164: extract) and *8662 of the Rajasthan Oriental Research Institute, Jodhpur. *MS Nr. 34 of the Sāhitya Saṃsthān, Udaypur (this MS contains the kalpādhikāra; see R.P. Bhatnagar, 1992: 284). Three more MSS are available in collections in Calcutta, Kāṭhmānḍū and Mysore (see R.P. Bhatnagar, 1992: 285).
- 140 CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 176.
 141 It also gives details on the preparation of compound medicines (STMI 45).
- 142 A vranādhikāra of Candrata is referred to in one of Anantakumāra's quotations (Yogaratnasamuccaya 5.5cd-6ab); it may form part of the gadaśānti section.
- 143 The ghrtādhikāra is referred to by Niścala ad Cakradatta, vranaśotha 49.
- 144 The order of the diseases in the chapter on gadaśānti differs from that of the Mādhavanidāna; pāṇḍuroga comes after gulma and kāsa after vātavyādhi, while upadaṃśa and ślīpada are treated in one chapter (see Cat. BHU Nr. 143).
- 145 See the third introductory verse (CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 176). See also Cat. BHU Nr. 143. Niścalakara (ad Cakradatta, svarabheda 13) refers to a paribhāṣādhikāra; he quotes two paribhāṣās ad raktapitta 28-29.
- 146 R.P. Bhatnagar (1992): 285.
- 147 P.K. Gode (1944e). Gode's sources consisted of the two BORI MSS: Nr. 147 of A. 1882–83 (identical with Cat. BORI, XVI, 1, Nr. 176) and Nr. 1072 of 1886–92 (identical with Cat. BORI XVI, 1, Nr. 177).
- 148 Confirmed by Niścala ad Cakradatta, kustha 29.
- 149 Confirmed by a quotation from Candrața in Anantakumāra's Yogaratnasamuccaya (16. 277–280: the Āśvinasamhitā is mentioned in the quotation).
- 150 Bhadraśaunaka according to R.P. Bhatnagar (1992: 286).
- 151 The same as Bhadravarman. Confirmed by Niścala ad Cakradatta, kuṣṭha 32; visarpa 22 and 30.
- 152 Confirmed by Niścala ad Cakradatta, unmāda 34-37; prameha 22-26 and 30-37.
- 153 Confirmed by Niścala ad Cakradatta, galagarida 31; mukharoga 111-112.
- 154 Confirmed by Niścala ad Cakradatta, śūla 12.
- 155 This work is not the same as the Nāvanītaka that forms part of the Bower MS according to P. Cordier (1903b: 342). R.P. Bhatnagar (1992: 286) notices that seventeen recipes are quoted from the Nāvanītaka. Confirmed by Niścala ad Cakradatta, arśas 120–126; raktapitta 79–81.

- 156 Confirmed by Niścala ad Cakradatta, vranaśotha 76-80.
- 157 Confirmed by Niścala ad Cakradatta, visarpa 14.
- 158 Confirmed by Niścala ad Cakradatta, ksudraroga 66-71.
- 159 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 152) studied *MS Nr. 5168 of the Royal Asiatic Society, Calcutta.
- 160 See NCC VII, 30.
- 161 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya claims in another publication (1947a: 122) that the Yogaratnasa-muccaya quotes the recipe of vijayabhairavataila (Rasaratnasamuccaya 21.148-151) from Rasavāgbhata; this claim is unfounded, because the Rasaratnasamuccaya leans heavily on earlier sources and is later than Candrata.
- 162 AVI 285. R.P. Bhatnagar (1992): 286.
- 163 Confirmed by Niścala ad Cakradatta, raktapitta 39—42 (a quotation from Acyuta's Āyurvedasāra).
- 164 Compare NCC I, 346.
- 165 Undoubtedly the same as Amitaprabha.
- 166 See NCC VII, 27.
- 167 See NCC IV, 31.

- 178 CC I, 180. NCC VI, 354. STMI 44. This confusion may find its source in the second introductory verse of the Yogaratnasamuccaya, where Candrata claims to have extracted the essence from the ocean of āyurveda, as if it were the amṛta (uddhṛtyāmṛtavat sāram ā-yurvedamahodadhel)).
- 179 See: Niścala. The majority of Niścala's quotations are from the Yogaratnasamuccaya.

- 184 Another work of this title was compiled by Anantakumāra.
- 185 See: Hemādri.
- 186 Anantakumāra's Yogaratnasamuccaya contains more than eighty quotations from Candrata. These quotations baffled N.S. Mooss (1979: XX), because he failed to distinguish between Anantakumāra's and Candraţa's Yogaratnasamuccaya.

- 187 Śivadāsasena refers consistently to Candrata as Candrāta.

- 193 AVI 209 and 426 (repeated by B. Rama Rao, 1992: 305). The Dravyāvalīis also called Dravyakoṣa or Vaidyakakoṣa (AVI 209 and 426.). Candraṭa's Dravyāvalī (also called Vaidyakoṣa) is quoted by Niścala according to G. Hāldār (Vrddhatravī 53).

- 196 NCC: not recorded. Ad Cakradatta, agnimāndya 87.
- 197 CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 176.
- 198 The same applies to Candrața's Yogaratnasamuccaya, as becomes apparent from remarks of Śivadāsasena in his commentary on the Cakradatta. See, e.g., his comments ad jvaracikitsā 75, where he states that this yoga is also found in Candrața's śamanādhikāra (= gadaśāntyadhikāra), and those ad vranaśothacikitsā 52 and vrsyādhikāra 15-24.
- 199 Ad Siddhayoga 74.16-17.
- AVI 209, 271, 286. P.V. Sharma placed Jejjaţa in the ninth century (AVI 207-208, 271, 286) and concluded, because Tīsaṭa and Candraṭa are quoted by Cakrapāṇidatta, that both lived in the tenth century (AVI 271 and 286). R.P. Bhatnagar (1992: 287) agrees with P.V. Sharma, but, on another page of the same article (1992: 280), he assigns Candraṭa to the middle of the fifth century.
- 201 Jejjata lived, in my opinion, in the seventh or eighth century.
- 202 In his commentary on the Cikitsākalikā and in the Yogaratnasamuccaya.
- 203 In the Yogaratnasamuccaya, as claimed by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya.
- 204 Ad Cakradatta, agnimāndyacikitsā 39.
- 205 A.F.R. Hoemle (1978: 100) placed both authors in the ninth or tenth century on faulty grounds, because he departed from a wrong chronology of Drdhabala, while D.Ch. Bhattacharryya, assuming, on weak grounds, that both lived after Vṛnda, places them in the first half of the tenth century (1947a: 124-125; 1947b: 151-153). The quotation from Vangadatta in Candraṭa's Yogaratnasamuccaya (see AVI 285) has no certain chronological value, because Vangadatta is absent as one of Candraṭa's sources from the lists compiled by P.K. Gode and D.Ch. Bhattacharyya.
- 206 P.V. Sharma (AVI 213) calls the author Govardhana(datta).
- 207 P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 21 and 22) regards the Bṛhattantrapradīpa as a work of Bhavyadatta in his edition of Niścalakara's Ratnaprabhā; formerly (AVI 213), he attributed it to Naradatta, Cakrapāṇi's teacher. In spite of these claims, it may have been written by Bindusāra (see Niścala ad Cakradatta, jvara 232–233 and jvarātīsāra 16–25). The references to the Bṛhattantrapradīpa and Bhavyadatta in the Ratnaprabhā (ad mukharoga 1) need not imply that Bhavyadatta wrote the treatise; Bhavyadatta may have been acquainted with it.

A.F.R. Hoemle (1917) studied part of the MS; he provided a transcription of the Khotanese and the Sanskrit texts, a restoration of the Sanskrit, and a translation of the Khotanese text of Jīvakapustaka [1]-[3] and [18]. A facsimile of the text was published by H.W. Bailey (Codices Khotanenses, 1938, 71-141), as well as a transcription of the Sanskrit and Khotanese texts (Khotanese Texts I, Cambridge 1945, 136-195). The Khotanese text was edited, with an English translation and a vocabulary, by S. Konow, A medical text in Khotanese, Ch. II 003 of the India Office Library, with translation and vocabulary; Avhandlinger utgitt av Det Norske Videnskaps-Akademi i Oslo, II. Hist.-Filos. Klasse, 1940 No. 4, Oslo 1941 (reviewed by H.W. Bailey, BSOAS 10, 1939/42, 1021-1023, M. Leumann, OLZ 1942, 11/12, 465-467, and *H. Oertel, KZ 67, 1942, 244). H.W. Bailey (1983) translated part of the first tract of the Jīvakapustaka. Hoernle intended to publish a study of folios 44-72 recto under the title of 'An ancient medical manuscript from Eastern Turkestan' as volume 2 of his 'Manuscript remains of Buddhist literature found in Eastern Turkestan' (Vol. 1 was published at Oxford in 1916; second edition, Delhi 1988); his planned edition included a lengthy introduction on the manuscript, its script, and its language, and contained besides his edition and translation of the Khotanese text his reconstruction of the Sanskrit text (see R.E. Emmerick, 1982; 1984a; 142; 1992; 61; 1992a: 43); A.F.R Hoemle's article was published in: S.K. Belvalkar (1917): 415-432. R.E. Emmerick (1992, 1994) edited, translated and annotated the Sanskrit and Khotanese versions of Jīvakapustaka 44rectol-47verso3 (the Svastika antidote) and 51recto4-52 verso3 (the Mahāsauvarcalādi ghee). Some parts of the Jīvakapustaka (text, English translation, glossary) are (imperfectly) reproduced, without mention of the source and the name of the work, in Kshanika Saha (1985). See on some other medical texts in Khotanese: H.W. Bailey (1983): 1234; R.E. Emmerick (1979b): 49, (1992a): 45.

- 224 Text 1 runs from 44rectol-47verso3 (an agada), text 2 from 47verso4-88versol (ghees), text 3 (incomplete) from 88versol-116verso5 (oils and powders); these texts consist of collections of formulae, written in Sanskrit and Khotanese (R.E. Emmerick, 1992: 60). R.E. Emmerick distinguishes four tracts in a later article (1994: 29); he divides text 3 into two sections, on oils (88versol-105recto2) and powders (105recto2-116verso5) respectively, since the word siddham occurs at 88versol and 105recto2.
- 225 H.W. Bailey gave the work this title on account of the reference to Jīvaka.
- 226 See R.E. Emmerick (1979a).

- 230 See J. Filliozat's review of H.W. Bailey's Khotanese Texts I in JA 235, 1946-47, 134-135. For five prescriptions he gave references to Caraka, but one of these passages corresponds only in content, not in formulation; it has nevertheless proved possible to identify this passage (R.E. Emmerick, 1979a: 236). The earliest author to identify one of the prescriptions of the Jivakapustaka as being from Caraka was A.F.R. Hoernle (1917): 415-432; see on this article R.E. Emmerick (1982): 343.
- 231 A total of twenty-nine formulae has now been traced; see the list in R.E. Emmerick (1979a): 236.
 - The Khotanese text of the Jīvakapustaka has ninety-two sections and counts ninety formulations in S. Konow's edition. An additional formula, almost complete, is found at the end of the Sanskrit text, but without a Khotanese rendering.
- 232 Fifteen formulae were borrowed from the Siddhāsara.

- 240 See Hemarājašarman 118–119 for the pertinent fragment of the Jvarasamuccaya. Some of these verses are very close to passages of the Kāšyapasaṃhitā (Kalpasthāna, višeṣakalpādhyāya, 215). Compare G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 165–167.

 - *a Ed. by Vitsarakāra, Calcutta 1891/92.
 - *b by C. Bhaṭṭācārya under the title Ratnamālābhidhānam arthāt Vanauṣadhivarga (see T. Chowdhury's Intr. to ed. c).
 - c by Tarapada Chowdhury, Patna 1946 (reprinted from *Patna University Journal, Vol. 2); reviewed by K.V. Sarma, The Journal of Oriental Research (Madras) 19 (1949), part 1, 94–95. This is a critical edition, based on eight MSS, which are described in the lntr. In addition to these, T. Chowdhury made use of a printed ed. (b) and the quotations found in the Śabdakalpadruma and Umeśacandragupta's Vaidyakaśabdasindhu, the authors of which often quote from the Ratnamālā and had access to independent MSS. Among Chowdhury's MSS there is only one that reaches the end (Cat. Skt. MSS Calcutta Sanskrit College X, 41, Nr. 51: Ratnamālā by Mādhavakara.). Another complete MS was described by R. Mitra (Notices X, Nr. 3150: 221 verses). Compare G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 10–11.

- 248 The title of the work is Ratnamālā according to its concluding stanzas; it is also quoted under that name.
- 249 Concluding stanzas of the Ratnamālā. One MS ascribes the work to Rājavallabha (*R. Mitra, Notices I, Nr. 207; see S.K. De, 1937/38: 275).
- 250 According to the colophon.
- 251 See on homonyms: J. Gonda (1936a).
- 252 The term astavarga is absent from the Brhattrayī and the Asṭāngasaṃgraha. See on the history of the astavarga: V.K. Joshi (1983).
- 253 Unidentified.
- 254 Already mentioned at Ca.Sū.4.18. A climber, the leaves and flowers of which resemble those of the aśoka. Identified as Erycibe paniculata Roxb. by T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar (1972). The same as kaţukā according to P.V. Sharma (1997) and others (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1282). Kaţukā is identified as Picrorrhiza kurroa Royle ex Benth. (see G.J. Meulenbeld, 1974: 533-534; T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972; WIRM VIII, 49) and P. scrophulariiflora Pennell = P. kurrooa auct. non Royle (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1282; compare S.S.R. Bennet, 1987 and WIRM VIII, 49-50).
- 255 Compare Dhanvantarinighanţu 5.134 (astapadī = mallikā) and Rājanighanţu 10.225 with Paryāyaratnamālā 311. Identified as Vallaris solanacea Kuntze = V. dichotoma Wall. in MW.
- 256 Usually identified as Cissus quadrangularis Linn.
- 257 A small variety of karkāru: identified as Cucumis sativus Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 527), Cucurbita pepo Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 530; P.V. Sharma in his ed. of the Kaiyadevanighanţu; P.V. Sharma, 1997; T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972), and Benincasa hispida (Thunb.) Cogn. = B. cerifera Savi (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 228; H. Losch, 1959).

- 258 Unidentified.
- 259 Several species of Datura.
- 260 Identified as Butea monosperma (Lam.) Taub., B. superba Roxb., and Leea macrophylla Roxb. ex Horn. See M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nrs. 275 and 1008; Bāpālāl (1982): 89–91; P.V. Sharma (1985a): 354–355, (1997); R.S. Singh and A.N. Singh (1981).
- 261 Enhydra fluctuans Lour. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 673; Chopra's Glossary, DGV V, 275; DWH II, 266; P.V. Sharma, 1997; WIRM III, 173).
- 262 Several species of Sorghum, great millet (see P.K. Gode, 1944f; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Also identified as Thysanolaena maxima (Roxb.) Kuntze and Th. procera Mez. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1618–1619).
- 263 Unidentified.
- 264 This may the first occurrence of kāśmīraja in a nighanţu, though the word is already used by Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.U.37.44); the closely related kāśmīrajanman is found in the Amarakoṣa (2.6.124).
- 265 Cassia absus Linn. (DGV V, 323). Mentioned in the Suśrutasamhitā (Ci.16.26).
- 266 This plant may be the same as kumbhāḍulatā = kanṭākumbhāḍu, a Capparis species (see P.V. Sharma, 1985a: 349). Kumbhāṭa is identified as Careya herbacea Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 330; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 267 Identified as Citrus limetta Risso (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 422) and C. limettoides Tanaka = C. medica var. limetta Wight et Arn. (Vanausadhicandrodaya VI, 22).
- 268 Also mentioned by Dalhana ad Su.Sū.36.27.
- 269 Identified as Arundo donax Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997), Lobelia nicotianaefolia Roth ex R. et S. (see S.S.R. Bennet, 1987), Phragmites karka Trin. ex Steud., and Typha australis Schum. et Thonn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 177, 1033, 1268, 1661). Also identified as Saccharum spontaneum Linn. (MW).
- 270 Sarpagandhā is usually identified as Rauvolfia serpentina Benth. ex Kurz.
- 271 Usually identified as Ophiorrhiza mungos Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1202; Chopra's Glossary; DGV V, 291; Nadkarni I, Nr. 872; P.V. Sharma, 1997); its identity is, however, disputed (see Bāpālāl, 1982: 320-321; DGV V, 291; K.V. Nair et al., 1984: 65).
- 272 Usually identified as Crinum latifolium Linn. or C. asiaticum Linn., sometimes as Tinospora sinensis (Lour.) Merrill = T. malabarica Miers ex Hook.f. = T. tomentosa Miers ex Hook.f.; see M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nrs. 505, 507, 1621; Chopra's Glossary; DWH III, 464-466; Nadkarni I, Nrs. 699 and 2475; P.V.Sharma, (1979a): 133 and (1985a): 354.
- 273 Lawsonia inermis Linn. = L. alba Lam., the henna plant (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1005; AVI 352). See on this plant and its names P.K. Gode (1947d).
- 274 Of uncertain identity. Mentioned in the Carakasamhitā, etc. See DGV V, 60-64; T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972.
- 275 One of Jīvaka's patients suffered from a disease called antaganṭḥābādha (see K.G. Zysk, 1990: 122-123); this term may the Pāli equivalent of antragranthi.
- 276 Compare, e.g., Aştılinganighantu 405.
- 277 It may be the same as pravāhikā.
- 278 C. Vogel, IL 316. Mādhava is quoted ad Amarakoşa 1.10.37 (= Ratnamālā 279), 2.4.28 (= 348), and 2.4.49 (= 286).
- 279 Paryāyaratnamālā 950 is quoted (ad Su.Sū.14.18) as being from Mādhava.
- 280 Haricaranasena refers to Mādhava's Ratnamālā in the introductory verses of his work.
- 281 C. Vogel, IL 315. See A.A. Ramanathan (1971: Intr. 47); Ratnamālā 54 is quoted ad

- Amarakoşa 2.4.23cd-24ab. The quotations in this commentary from an author called Mādhava are not from the Ratnamālä.
- 282 See C. Vogel, IL 347. Mādhava and his Ratnamālā are referred to in the upasaṃhāra of the work
- 283 Quoted as Mādhava and Ratnamālā; see T.R. Chintamani (1938).
- 284 Quoted as Ratnamālā ad Cakradatta, atīsāra 31-32 (= Paryāyaratnamālā 1649-1651); raktapitta 39-42; rājayakṣman 65-66 (refers to 1748). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 53) correctly identified Niścala's Ratnamālā. D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 147) and P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr.23) are wrong in regarding it as a work of Govardhana.
- 285 See T. Chowdhury's notes to edition c.
- 286 C.Vogel, IL 315. Mādhava (Ratnamālā 279) is quoted ad Amarakoşa 1.10.37; the Ratnamālā is also quoted, according to Th. Aufrecht (1874: 116).
- 287 Śivadāsasena quotes, without indicating his source, Ratnamālā 1652–53 (ad madyādivarga 25), 1669–70 (ad kṛtānnavarga 48), 1665–66 (ad kṛtānnavarga 49), 1671–73 (ad bhaksyavarga 9), and 1676–78 (ad bhaksyavarga 13).
- 288 C. Vogel, IL 377. Mādhava is quoted ad Śivakoṣa 51 (= Ratnamālā 290), 66 (= 348), 85 (=265), 195 (= 286), 221 (= 1664), 244 (= 632), 428 (= 286), and 441 (= 434). The quotation from Mādhava ad 151 cannot be traced.
- 289 At least five quotations are found in this commentary: vol. 1, 112: tathā ca ratnamālā (= Ratnamālā 1324); vol. 1, 203: iti ratnamālāyām mādhavaḥ (= 185-186); vol. 2, 81: iti mādhavaḥ (= 348); vol. 3, 245: tathā ca ślokārdhaparyāye mādhavaḥ (= 439); ibid.: iti ślokaparyāye mādhavaḥ (= 451 and 446). Variants have been disregarded. According to T. Chowdhury's notes to ed. c, Sarvānanda quotes moreover: 17 (ad Amarakoṣa 2.4.51); 54; 122 (ad 4.126-127); 161 (ad 5.4.54); 227 (ad 2.4.98); 338 (ad 2.4.74); 632 (vol. 2, 91); 773-774 (vol. 1, 188); 925 (vol. 2, 332); 1036 (vol. 3, 31); 1323 (vol. 1, 112); 1663-1664 (vol. 3, 282).
- 290 T.R. Chintamani (1938).
- 291 Th. Aufrecht (1874): 112. The identity and date of this author are unknown; he is different from Nārāyanaśarman, who wrote his Padārthakaumudī on the Amarakoşa in 1618/19 (NCC I, 327 and XI, 104; C. Vogel, IL 316).
- 292 Ratnamālā 1506b is quoted ad Mādhavanidāna 2.10-11.
- 293 Ad Nidāna 2.10-11.
- 294 C. Vogel, IL 314. The Mālā and Mālākara's work, repeatedly quoted by Kṣīrasvāmin, do not resemble the Paryāyaratnamālā.
- 295 NCC IX, 120; X, 138-140.
- 296 NCC X, 43: Nāmanighantu by Mādhava; quoted by Devarā ja Yajvan in his Niruktabhāsya.
- 297 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 154.
- *Ed. Chowkhamba 301 acc. to D.Ch. Bhattacharyya: na khalu pāṭaliputra upalabdhasya prāsādasya śilāhrade smarannabhrāntah. Vācaspatimiśra lived about A.D. 850 (Winternitz III, 436–437).
- 299 AVI 374; DGV IV, 270; P.V. Sharma (1976a): 98. This identification of Šilāhrada was originally proposed by G. Hāldār in his Vrddhatrayī (as P.V. Sharma informed the present author by letter). P.C. Choudhury identified Śilāhrada with the village of Śilā near Barpeta in Kāmarūpa (see his Intr. to Brajanāthaśarman's Vaidyakasāroddhāra, 7).
- 300 P.V. Sharma (1976a: 98; see also DGV IV, 270) supposes that Mādhava was attached to this university as a teacher.

- 301 N.N. Das Gupta (1936/37): 155. D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 153–154. S.K. De (1937/38: 275) regarded this argument as hardly conclusive.
- 302 The same word is found in the Vaijayantī (3.3.102); related words occur in Puruşottamadeva's Trikāṇḍaśeṣa (vātiṃgana; 2.4.27), Medini's Nāṇārthaśabdakoṣa (vātiga; gāntavarga 47), the Kaiyadevanighaṇṭu (vātiṅginī; 1.576cd), and the Śabdaratnāvalī
 (according to the Śabdakalpadruma). The Persian form of the word is bādingān. Compare Mayrhofer III, 186: not a Persian loan-word, but belonging to a group of non-Indoeuropean names of plants; the word vātiṅgaṇa is found in Pāli texts (see T.W. Rhys Davids and W. Stede, 1972).
- 303 AVI 374; (1976a): 99.
- 304 P.V. Sharma (1976a): 99.
- 305 Intr. to his ed. of the Astāriganighantu, 16-18.
- 306 P.V. Sharma dates it to the ninth century (Intr. to his ed. of the Aṣṭānganighaṇṭu, 18; AVI 374-375; DGV IV, 270-271; 1976a: 98-100).
- 307 This earlier view was adhered to by, e.g., T. Chowdhury (see the Intr. to his ed. of the Paryāyaratnamālā), Atrideva (ABI 425), N.N. Das Gupta (1936/37), and G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 5–12. Compare G.J. Meulenbeld (1979): 63–71.
- 308 NCC XI, 239. A MS of the text is said to be available in the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris (Cat. IO, 976; CC I, 330), though not recorded in Filliozat's Liste (1934).
- 309 Compare CC I, 62 and 755. The title of the work is given by the author as Haramehalā, i.e., Haramekhalā (1\frac{1}{1}.10 and 11; 2.103; 5.277 and 279). A second title is, according to the author, Viadehārurāakai, i.e., Vidagdhānurāgakri (5.278). He also calls it, in agreement with its contents, a Yogamālā (1\frac{1}{1}.10); the commentator refers to it as a Prayogamālā (ad 5.278 and 280).

310 Editions:

- a The Haramekhalā of Māhuka with commentary, edited by K. Sāmbaśiva Śāstrī; Part I (pariccheda 2-4), Trivandrum Sanskrit Series (Anantaśayanasaṃskṛtagranthāvali) No. CXXIV, Śri Citrodayamanjari No. XIII, Trivandrum 1936. Part II (pariccheda 5), Trivandrum Sanskrit Series (Anantaśayanasaṃkṛtagranthāvali) No. CXXXVI, Śrī-Citrodayamanjarī No. XXV, Trivandrum 1938. This edition is based on a single MS, said to be 800 years old (Editor's Preface to Part I, 3).
- b mādhukadhīrasahāyapaṇḍitaviracitā haramekhalā saṭīkā, (pūrvakhaṇḍaḥ, i.e., pariccheda 1–4); purātattvaprakāśanamālāyāḥ 64tamaṃ puṣpam, 'bhaṭṭarāī'ityupāhva paṃ. kṛṣṇaprasādaśarmaṇā saṃpāditā, śrī paṃ. buddhisāgaraśarmaṇaḥ pradhānānusandhānādhikāritve nepālarāṣṭrīyābhilekhālayataḥ prakāśitā, kāṣṭhamaṇḍapaḥ 2029 vaikramābda bhādra mase (Kāṭhmāṇḍū 1972/73). This edition has an Introduction (prāstāvikaṃ kiṃcit) in Sanskrit by Kṛṣṇaprasāda Bhaṭṭarāī and is based on three Nepalese MSS. It is unknown to me whether the second volume, comprising pariccheda 5–7, has ever been published. References are to b for pariccheda 1–4 and to a for pariccheda 5.

There are rather considerable differences between the texts of a and b, that of b being more reliable, accurate and complete. Parts of chapter four were translated into English by B. Rama Rao (1971a; 1972). Chapter one was translated into English by P.V. Sharma (1986c). See on the Haramekhalā also Tāntrika Sāhitya 730.

- 311 See prāstāvikam kimcit of ed. b, 1.
- 312 Ibidem.

- 313 This difference is only apparent, since 2.14–15 of ed. a = 2.14 of ed. b, and 2.62–63 of ed. a = 2.61 of ed. b.
- 314 Edition b has one extra verse after 29 (= 29 of ed. a), twenty-four extra verses after 182 (= 181 of ed. a), and one extra verse after 393 (= 368 of ed. a).
- 315 See the verses following upon 1¹.11 and 1³.6.
- 316 The author says that his treatise is helpful in acquiring dharma.
- 317 It contains about 150 prayogas according to prāstāvikam kirncit of ed. b.
- 318 It contains more than one hundred ābhicārikaprayogas (prāstāvikam kirncit of ed. b).
- 319 It contains more than sixty prayogas (prāstāvikam kimcit of ed. b).
- 320 The editors of a (Preface to Part II) and b (prāstāvikarn kimcit, 1) remark that its title is vidagdhadayita (compare 5.1: viaddhadaia), but this term is also used by the author as a qualification of chapter three (3.71). Chapter five contains about 300 prayogas (prāstāvikam kimcit, 1).
- 321 See on gandhaśāstra: P.K. Gode's articles in SICH I, 1-100; see also the descriptions of Gangādhara's Gandhasāra and the anonymous Gandhavāda.
- The commentator summarized the contents of 5.3–272 in some verses ad 5.273.
- 323 Compare on substitutes for rare fragrant substances, the extraction of essential oils, and related subjects: Rasaratnākara, Vādikharıda 19.
- 324 See prāstāvikam kimcit, 1; it is said to contain more than 250 prayogas.
- 325 Prāstāvikam kirncit, 1: it contains 125 prayogas.
- 326 Ad Amarakosa 2.4.101. Kṣīrasvāmin quotes the Haramekhalānighantu and says that the synonym aheru of śatāvarī is mentioned there; the quotation does not agree with the printed text of the Haramekhalānighantu, but the related synonym haherī occurs in it (p.83).
- 327 Ad Cakradatta, jvara 282; agnimāndya 3 and 11–12; śūla 56; kṣudraroga 52, 76–79, 81–82, 88, 98, 99, 121; mukharoga 96; vṛṣya 54 and 56. Niścala quotes the Haramekhalānighanṭu ad vṛṣya 54. P.V. Sharma's suggestion (1993: Intr. 30) that two distinct works called Haramekhalā once existed, one in Prakrit, written by Māhuka, and one in Sanskrit, from which Cakra borrowed a number of lines, is unfounded; Niścala's quotations are either in Prakrit or in a mixture of Sanskrit and Prakrit. The verses borrowed by Cakra (śūla 56; kṣudraroga 52, 80, 99, 121; mukharoga 96; vṛṣya 54 and 56; see Niścala) were without any doubt rendered into Sanskrit by him; it is a known fact that he adapted verses taken from other authors and versified passages in prose.
- 328 Rasendrakhanda, pānduroga 83-85.
- 329 According to P.V. Sharma (AVI 381); not traceable in Śivadāsasena's commentaries.
- 330 Ad Siddhayoga 57.84.
- 331 Ad Nighantuśesa 50ab.
- 332 Ratirahasya 14.1 and 41.
- 333 The Haramekhalakagrantha is mentioned in the introductory verses of the Mantrakhanda.
- 334 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b): 151.
- 335 T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta (1981): 121.

Kurukullä is mentioned by Dalhana ad Su.Sū.46.448, Ka.5.9-10 and 51cd-54.
- 345 Unidentified.
- 346 Sudarśanā is mentioned in the Madanapālanighantu (1.316).
- 347 Kañcuka is identified as Carissa carandas Linn. (Chopra's Glossary), kañcukī as a Euphorbia or Ceropegia species (DGV V, 89).
- 348 Unidentified.
- 349 Unidentified.
- 350 The same as kumārī: Aloe barbadensis Mill.
- 351 Unidentified.
- 352 Unidentified; gopālapītha is mentioned in the Rājamārtaņda (26.8).
- 353 Kanaka is the name of several plants: Cassia occidentalis Linn., some species of Datura, and Mesua ferrea Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 350, 577, 579, 1099). Compare suvarnatvac. Sauvarnītvac occurs in the Carakasamhitā (Ci.7.77).
- 354 A Crinum species, identical with sudarsana (DGV V, 98-99; P. V. Sharma, 1979a: 133), Crinum asiaticum Linn. (P. V. Sharma, 1997), C. defixum Ker-Gawl. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 506), Gloriosa superbaLinn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 803). Kandalī is mentioned at Su.Sū.39.8.
- 355 Caesalpinia crista Linn. (Bāpālāl Vaidya, 1968, Nr. 168; DGV II-III, 619; P.V. Sharma, 1997; C.M. Tewari et al., 1978). Mentioned by Dalhana ad Su.Sū.11.13.
- 356 Sometimes regarded as identical with gangāpālaka (Śivadāsasena ad Cakradatta, vṛṣya 57); gangāpālanka is Sonchus arvensis Linn. (P.V. Sharına, 1985a: 350). See P.K. Hajra et al. (1995: 320): Sonchus brachyotus DC. = S. arvensis Linn. var. glaber Haines.
- 357 The same as kāndīra according to the Madanādinighanu (viprakīrna, p.12); kāndīra is Ranunculus sceleratus Linn. (DGV V, 319; P.V. Sharma, 1979a: 99; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Kāravallī is mentioned in the Kaiyadevanighanu (1.594: palāšikā and suṣavī are synonyms).
- 358 Cassia fistula Linn.
- 359 Momordica tuberosa (Roxb.) Cogn. (DGV V, 322; P.V. Sharma, 1997; V.S. Togunashi et al., 1977).
- 360 Unidentified, see DGV V, 312. Kukkutamardaka is found in Todara's Āyurvedasaukhya (I: 31.140). Dalhana (ad Su.Ci.8.39) mentions kunkumardanikā as a synonym of jyotismatī. Rāmasītalika is identified as Amaranthus tricolor Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 111).

- 361 Sudhāvrkṣa is identified as Gymnosporia montana (Roth) Benth. (WIRM IV, 277); compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 834.
- 362 Potikā is identified as Foeniculum vulgare Mill. = F. capillaceum Gilib. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 771).
- 363 Galls of Quercus infectoria Oliv.; see AVI 351.
- 364 Unidentified.

- 366 Probably the same as kuthāracchinnā, which is of uncertain identity (P.V. Sharma, 1979c: 15); kuthāra(ka) may be Melothria heterophylla (Lour.) Cogn. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a: 349; 1997).
- 367 The same as kanakatvac.
- 368 Unidentified.
- 369 The same as karabhavāruņī.
- 370 Unidentified; uttundaka is Echinops echinatus Roxb. (DGV V, 313).
- 371 Niṣpāva is Vigna unguiculata (Linn.) Walp. = V. cat jang (Burm.f.) Walp. or Lablab purpureus (Linn.) Sweet (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1700 and 988).
- 372 The same as cirbhiṭā according to the commentary: Cucumis melo Linn. var. momordica Duthie et Fuller (Kirtikar and Basu II, 1142; T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972).
- 373 P.V. Sharma (1997) identifies gosthāmlikā as cāngerī.
- 374 The same as vandhyakarkoţī according to the commentary: Momordica dioica Roxb. ex Willd. (P.V. Sharma, 1985a: 353).
- 375 The same as aśwagandhā (Dhanvantarī yani ghantu 1.272): Withania somnifera Dunal (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1725).
- 376 Melothria maderaspatana (Linn.) Cogn. (DGV V, 334).
- 377 11.9: Māhua. The Sanskrit chāyā and commentary of ed. b have Mādhuka. If the reading Māhaä of one of the MSS is adopted, the author's name may have been Mādhava (note to 11.9 in ed. b).
- 378 5.280: Māhua. The chāyā and commentary of ed. a have Māhuka.
- 379 1¹.9: māhamahākai kuṃ jarakulakalaha (māghamahākavikuñ jarakulakalabha). Māgha lived in the second half of the seventh century.
- 380 5.280.
- 381 5.280: Māhavasua.
- 382 The name is written thus in prāstāvikam kimcit to ed. b, 2, but the text has Duggabhaṭṭa (11.3).
- 383 11.2-3. The master-sorcerer Müladeva, also known as Karnīsuta and Kalānkura, and often mentioned along with his associate and friend Śaśin, is known from Dandin's Daśakumāracarita (see P.E. Pavolini, 1896: 177-178), the Harṣacarita, the Kathāṣaritsāgara (see the Index of C.H. Tawney's translation; see also P.E. Pavolini, 1896), Kṣemendra's Kalāvilāṣa (see P.E. Pavolini, 1896: 176-177), the Śukasaptati, and other texts (see Sukumar Sen, 1968: 681), as well as from the Dattātreyatantra (T. Goudriaan, 1978: 65, 342, 344). An ancient authority on erotics (kāmaṣāstra) of this name is mentioned in Jyotirīsvara Kaviśekhara's Pañcasāyaka (1.3) (compare: J. Charpentier, 1908: 57; S.K. De, 1959: 93; Winternitz III, 541) and Kokkoka's Ratirahasya (5.22) (see K. Mylius, 1995: 167). An erotically stimulating recipe, called kāmāgnisaṇdīpanamodaka, is attributed to him (Bṛhadrasarājasundara 550; Rasayogasāgara, kakārādi 183). The Ṣaṇmukhakalpa, a treatise on the art of stealing, is associated with Mūladeva (see D. George, 1991: 143–144; S.C. Banerji, 1988: 497). The Jaina tradition is also acquainted with Mūladeva (see Sukumar Sen, 1968: 681) and associates him with a work on erotics (kāmaśāstra). Compare on Mūladeva: M. Bloomfield (1913); J. Charpentier (1908): 57–83; P.E. Pavolini (1896); R. Schmidt (1911): 49–50. See also CC I, 464.

Edition: Positive health in Tibetan medicine, based on Sman-'tsho-ba'i mdo (Vaidya-Jī-va-sūtra), Vaidya Bhagwan Dash and Ven. Doboom Tulku, Indian Medical Science Series No. 13, Sri Satguru Publications, Delhi 1991; this edition contains the Tibetan text (in transliteration), a reconstructed Sanskrit version, an English translation, a Tibetan-Sanskrit vocabulary, and a Sanskrit-Tibetan vocabulary; the Tibetan text is based on the Derge, Narthang and Peking editions of the Tanjur, and an *edition of the Jīvasūtra by Prof. J. Cai of the Academy of Traditional Chinese Medicine, Bei jing 1988; variant readings are given in footnotes.

The Tibetan title is Sman hého-bahi mdo (Vaidyajīvasūtra); it is ascribed to Slob-dpon hphags-pa Klu-sgrub sñini-po (Ācārya Ārya Nāgārjunahrdaya). The name of the translator has not been transmitted.

406 NCC X, 18-19. Editions:

- a Bhadanta Nagarjuna's Rasa Vaişeshika Sutra with the commentary of Narasimha, edited with an introduction by Kolatteri Sankara Menon, Trivandrum Sanskrit Series, Śrī Vañci-Setu-Lakṣmī Series No. 8, Government Press, Trivandrum 1928 [IO.San.D.597/8].
- b bhadantanāgārjunaviracitaņi rasavaišeşikasūtram narasimhakrtabhāşyopetam (Bhadanta Nagaarjuna's Rasavaiseshikasutra with Naarasimha Bhaashya), sampādakaņ N.E. Muttusvāmi (edited with an introduction by N.E. Muttuswami), keralapra-śāsanāyurvedagranthāvaliḥ (Kerala Government Ayurvedic Publication Series) 2, Trivandrum 1976. Sankara Menon's Introduction to a has been reproduced in b. Both editions are based on a single MS from Kerala, said to be more than 500 years old (see on this MS Sankara Menon's Intr., 22–23).

References are to b. An English translation of chapter one, by K. Raghavan Thirumulpad, has been published in Āryavaidyan (part XI, stitra 149–168, in Āryavaidyan 10, 3, 1997, 157–161).

- 407 The four chapters count 171, 123, 119 and 73 sūtras respectively.
- 408 Terms discussed are ankura, skandha, granthi, suşira, kubjatva, dvaitala, viţapa, pattra, pattraśākhā, pattralekhā, vakratva, puṣpaphala, vallī, kesara, karnikā, sammīlana, unmīlana. Compare on the same subject: 2.123.
- 409 Noteworthy terms are: phalgu (the outer part of the bark of a tree), limsaka(the inner part), and paripotaka (the outer part of the bark of the arjuna and other trees).
- 410 Some are said to add kṣāra to the usual six tastes (the commentary quotes a verse on the subject), while others add avyakta (an indistinct taste). The commentator regards kṣāra as a guria and rejects an avyakta taste because it cannot be perceived.
- 411 Varieties are tīkṣṇa and manda madhura, etc., according to the commentary (see also 3.19 and 24). Moreover, the sweetness of sugar, milk, etc., differ from each other.
- 412 The characteristic actions of each taste are also enumerated (3.18). Compare 3.34.
- 413 If substances with a tīvra rasa, guṇa or vīrya are unobtainable, one should take those with a manda rasa, guṇa or vīrya, and the other way round.
- 414 Ad Cikitsākalikā 16.
- 415 Ad Su.Śā.4.80.
- 416 In the auto-commentary on his Dravyagunasūtra.
- 417 Ad Rāvana's Nādīparīksā 24-25.

- 420 See, e.g., 4.30.
- 421 Seven prakṛtis based on the doṣas, and seven based on the three guṇas of Sāmkhya (sattva, rajas, tamas). This sūtra is quoted by Dalhaṇa (ad Su.Śā.4.80).
- 422 These tengunasare śīta, uṣṇa, snigdha, rūkṣa, viśada, picchila, guru, laghu, mṛdu, and tī-kṣṇa. Caraka (Śā.6.10) and Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.Sū.l.18) list twenty guṇas. See G.J. Meulenbeld (1987): 8.
- 423 Two series of vīryas are enumerated; the first consists of chardanīya, anulomanīya, ubhayatobhāga(vamanavirecanakara), prašamanīya, sanggrahana, dīpanīya, prāṇaghna, madana, vidārana, śvayathukaraṇa, and vilayana (4.1; compare the verses quoted in the commentary ad 4.30). The second and longer list (4.27) enumerates: medhya, āyuṣya, vayasya, varcasya, rakṣoghna, puṃṣavana, saubhāgya, viśalya(karaṇa), vimokṣa(karana), unmāda(karuna), klaibya(karana), vaśīkarana, vidvesana, pravāsana, ākarsana, antardhānika, pauṣṭika, and rājadvārika; the commentator explains these actions and gives examples in verses quoted from unknown treatises; the list may consist of vīryas recognized by other authorities. The items of the first series are accessible to discursive thought (1.30: anumeya), those of the second list are not (see the commentary: acintya, aparimeya). See also N.E. Muthuswami's Intr., 44–46. The vīryas of the first list of the Rasavaiśeṣikasūtraresemble the actions of drugs mentioned in Ca.Sū.4, which are largely based on their prabhāva.

- 424 See the commentary ad 4.62.
- 425 See the commentary for explanations and examples.
- 426 See Sankara Menon's Intr., 14.; J. Filliozat (1979): Intr. X; S. Kuppuswami Sastri (1927). The title bhadanta is also current in Jain literature as a term of respect applied to monks (Bhagchandra Jain Bhaskar, 1972: 178–179).
- 427 See the colophon at the end of the work.
- 428 See MW; PW; F. Edgerton's Buddhist hybrid Sanskrit dictionary; The Pali Text Society's Pali-English dictionary. I-ching refers to a biography of the ten Bhadantas (J. Takakusu, 1966: 181). The title of Bhadanta was given to Aśvaghoṣa (A.B. Keith, 1973: 55), Dignāga (S.Ch. Vidyabhusana, 1971: 125), and Tson-kha-pa (G.N. Roerich, 1976: I, 34). The term is employed to refer to and to address a Buddhist sage in the Harşacarita (ucchvāsa 8, p.256, 257; translation Cowell and Thomas, p.257). Bhadanta Nāgārjuna is mentioned as a teacher in an inscription, assigned to about A.D. 500, below the feet of a Buddha image found at Jaggayyapeta of Guntur district in Āndhra Pradeś (K.R. Srikantamurthy, 1992b: 293; Srikantamurthy refers to *Sacchidananda K. Murthy, 1978: 14).
- 429 Ad Su.Śā.4.80.
- 430 J. Filliozat (1979: Intr. XI-XIII). J. Filliozat posits that the notion of svabhāva, as expounded in the Rasavaiśeṣikasūtra (3.58-60), corresponds to the svabhāvaśūnyatā of Madhyamaka philosophy (see on this point K.G. Zysk's review of J. Filliozat's Yogaśataka, IIJ 23, 1981, 309-313).
- 431 See N.E. Muthuswami's Intr.
- 432 See his Intr., 17.
- 433 See also J. Filliozat (1979: Intr. X-XI).
- 434 A text called Rasavaiśeşika is quoted four times by Candrața in his commentary on the Ci-kitsākalikā (ad 16). The first of these quotations is identical with Rasavaiśeşikasūtra 1.95. The Rasavaiśeşika quoted by Candrața was formerly regarded as different from Bhadanta Nāgārjuna's work (J. Jolly, 1906: 468; AVI 286 and 373).
- 435 Intr. 18 and 22-23.
- 436 Sankara Menon adds that, if the author is identical with the famous Buddhist scholar, his period is somewhere near the second century, and, if he is neither this Nāgārjuna nor Narasimha's preceptor, he must have lived between the second and the seventh century.
- 437 See on the meaning of this term, usually the subdivision of a district: Hobson-Jobson.
- 438 AVI 373.
- 439 K.R. Srikantamurthy (1992b: 293) assigns Bhadanta Nāgār juna to about A.D. 400.
- 440 J. Filliozat (1979): Intr. XV-XVIII.
- 441 NCC IX, 359.
- 442 Sankara Menon's Intr., 23. It can hardly be questioned that Narasimha wrote his commentary in Kerala, because he made use of a method of notating numbers, the so-called nannādi system (see the commentary ad 3.95–96, 98–100), which is current only in Kerala (Sankara Menon's Intr., 98–100).

- 446 Intr., 17-18.
- 447 Sankara Menon tried to maintain that Narasimha was the earliest commentator on the text (Intr., 18).
- 448 Intr., 10 and 21–22: the family of astavaidya physicians to which the MS of the Rasavaiśeṣikasūtra belongs, originates from the Taluk of Shertalla, where the Tiruvilai temple is located, which may once have been a Buddhist vihāra; even to this day, psychiatric patients are treated in that temple.

- 453 The Yogaśataka is sometimes ascribed to Śrīpandita (STMI 216 and 249; Cat. Mysore XIII, Nrs. 42281–86; R. Mitra's Notices IX, Nr. 3128: 943 verses) or Dhanvantari (STMI 216 and 249).
- 454 See for a complete index of metres ed. e, 271; ed. f, 21; ed. g, XXXIII-XXXIV.
- 455 According to Bhagwan Dash the text contains exactly one hundred recipes (ed. e, 251).
- 456 The popular names of these yogas are to be found in notes to ed. e.
- 457 Their number is 105 (ed. c), 109 (Sanskrit and Tibetan text of ed. g), 111 (Sanskrit text of ed. e; Sanskrit and Tibetan text of ed. e; the high number results in this case from counting a colophon as a verse), 157 (ed. h). D. Wujastyk (1990: 109–110) records a MS of a Vrddhayogaśata (Bodleian c.305(4)) that consists of 363 verses, and another one with 323 verses [Bodleian d.727(4)]. R. Mitra (Notices IX, Nr. 3128) describes a MS of Śrīpaṇḍita's Yogaśataka that consists of no less than 943 ślokas.

- 465 Not quoted in connection with the Yogaśataka. See: Niścala.
- 466 The correspondences between the Yogasataka and these later texts are indicated in edition e, and, more accurately, in ed. f.

- 468 Țoḍara III: 2.97; 2.76 and 78–81, erroneously said to be from the Cikitsākalikā, are actually from the Yogaśataka.
- 469 It contains Yogaśataka 18-20, 85-88, 99-102 and 109.
- 470 These bilingual fragments were published first by S. Lévi, Étudedes documents tokhariens de la mission Pelliot, I, Les Bilingues, JA 17, 1911, 431-449. They were studied again and translated into French by J. Filliozat, Fragments de textes koutchéens de médecine et de magie; texte, parallèles sanscrits et tibétains, traduction et glossaire; Paris, 1948.
- 471 J. Filliozat (1948: 8) dated the MSS as probably belonging to the early part of the period A.D. 500-1000; later (L. Renou and J. Filliozat, 1953: 157) he assigned them to the seventh century or somewhat earlier.
- 472 References to the editions of the Tanjur, its catalogues, etc., are to be found in ed. f (38).
- 473 See ed. e (9–17) on the Tibetan translations of twenty-two āyurvedic works incorporated in the Tanjur. Compare P. Cordier (1903a).
- 474 This is the interpretation of P. Cordier (1903a: 606), Manfred Taube (1981: 17), and Bhagwan Dash (ed. e, 248), which seems preferable to H.H.M. Schmidt's rendering 'the commentary on the text', because the Tibetan has réa hgrel.

- J. Filliozat was of the opinion (L. Renou and J. Filliozat, 1953: 158) that the Aṣṭāngahr-daya quotes the Yogaśataka, although he did not adduce arguments proving that the reverse process can be excluded; H.H.M. Schmidt (ed. f. 13) tends to adopt the same view without being sure in this matter. Verses common to Yogaśataka and Aṣṭāngahrdaya are: 22 = A.h. Ci.14.38 (absent from the Saṃgraha); 72 = U.5.18 (= A.s.U.8.21); 73 = U.5.19 (= A.s. - 492 An example is Bu-ston (see E. Obermiller, 1986: 126). The only exception is Niścalakara, who often quotes from Nāgārjuna's Yogaśata and never mentions Vararuci in connection with this work.
- 493 P.V. Sharma was in error when he distinguished Nāgārjuna's Yogaśataka from that by Vararuci. He regarded the former as probably written by the Nāgārjuna mentioned by al-Bīrūnī and living in the eighth-ninth century, the latter as dating from the tenth century (AVI 178-179). Later, P.V. Sharma wrote that the Yogaśataka by Vararuci is identical with that by Nāgār juna (Intr. to his edition of Nāgār juna's Yogaratnamālā, 13).
- 494 See: Nāgārjuna. Chr. Lindtner (1982: 15) adduced some arguments in favour of attributing the Yogaśataka to the famous Buddhist philosopher Nāgārjuna.
- 495 Two parts from another medical text associated with Vararuci, the Vararucisannhitā, are extant, the Ariştasthāna and Aṣṭakarmasthāna (NCC I, 274 and 327; P. Cordier, 1903b: 335-336; Cat Tanjore Nr. 11006: vararucīya aṣṭakarmasthāna). An author called Vararuci wrote a commentary, called Abhidhānacintāmani, on Śrīkanṭthadāsa's Yogaśataka (ABI 315). Compare on Vararuci: S.C. Banerji's edition of the Saduktikarnānṛta (1965:

- 498 The author is called Dhruvapāda by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 141) and P.V. Sharma (AVI 179). Compare NCC IX, 230 and 308; X, 19: Nāgārjunī yayogaśataka, compiled by Dhruvapāda or Dhruvapāla.
- 499 NCC IX, 368: Candrakalā, commentary on the Nāgārjunīyayogaśataka, by Dhruvapāda or Dhruvapāla. A Cambridge MS (Or 150) of the Yogaśataka with Dhruvapāla's commentary dates from A.D. 1365 (see D. Wujastyk, 1990: 115). J. Jolly (1901: 125; C.G. Kashikar 151) calls the author Dhanvapāla and mentions a MS completed in A.D. 1415. Quoted by Niścalakara and Śivadāsasena. Extracts from this commentary are to be found in H.H.M. Schmidt's edition (t) of the Yogaśataka.
- 500 NCC III, 205. Quoted by Niścalakara (see: Niścala).
- 501 CC: not recorded. Check-list Nr. 956; author's name is Maithila Harihara. J. Filliozat (Intr. to ed. g, XXVII: MS B2) says that this is not a commentary in the usual sense, because it merely consists of short indications, like, for example, atha jvaracikitsām āha.

- 504 CC: not recorded. See Räjkumār Jain (1981): 87.
- 505 CC I, 479 and 533. J. Filliozat, Liste 102. According to Eggeling (Cat. IO Nr. 2757), this commentary quotes Bhadrasaunaka, Bhattāraka Hariscandra, Bheda, Bhoja, Caraka, Hārīta, Jayasena (see NCC VII, 196–197), Jejjaṭa, Kāsyapa, Siddhasārakāra, Suśruta, Vāgbhaṭa, and Vṛddhabhoja. Th. Aufrecht (CC II, 171) mentions that Rūpanayana quotes the Siddhasārasaunhitā. One of the MSS dates from A.D. 1634/35 (STMI 188).
- 506 CC: not recorded. J. Filliozat (ed. g, XXVII: MS B1): this commentary agrees with that by Dhruvapāla. STMI 216.

Berlin Nr. 962: commentary by Śrīsūryasena on a Yogaśataka. V.P.P. Śāstrī (1984: 393, n. 28) records one MS (*Nr. 45963) in the Sarasvatī Bhavan, Vārāṇasī, and four MSS in the Kāśī Hindū Viśvavidyālaya (Nrs. B 4281, and C 3146, 3811, 3567; see Cat. BHU Nrs. 144–148). Pūrṇasena was a Jain scholar; at the beginning of his commentary he pays homage to Vardhamāna and Samantabhadra (Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 42288; JAI 107–108).

Edition: Yogaśatakam of Śrī Paṇḍitarāya (with the commentary of Pūrṇasena), ed. by H. Shankarganapathi Pathak and C. Srinivasa Somayaji, University of Mysore Oriental Research Institute Series 151, Mysore 1985; this edition is based on seven MSS of the Mysore Oriental Research Institute (compare Cat. Mysore XIII, Nrs. 42281–86 and Nr. 42289: Śrī Paṇḍita's Yogaśataka, i.e., the treatise usually attributed to Nāgārjuna or Vararuci, as appears from the lines quoted in the catalogue; Nrs. 42287–88: Pūrṇasena's commentary); the other editions of the Yogaśataka are not taken into account.

- 510 NCC XII, 177. J. Filliozat, Liste 105. Pūrņasena himself does not mention the title of his commentary.
- 511 Edition h has, compared with edition f, the following additional verses: 3-22, 24-27, 33, 35-36, 38, 40, 42-43, 51, 55-59, 62-70, 73, 76-77, 92-93, 113-117, 121-123, 125, 155; verses present in ed. f, but absent in ed. h, are: 9, 19-20, 23, 34, 43, 72, 74, 81-82, 89-92, 106, 109.
- 512 An interesting feature of the commentary is its unusual list of the angas of āyurveda (ad 2): bālatantracikitsā, śalyacikitsā, śālākyacikitsā, śarīracikitsā, viṣacikitsā, bhūtacikitsā, ksudrarogacikitsā, rasāyanacikitsā.
- 513 He uses, once only, a Marāthī term in his commentary (see the upodghāta to the edition).
- 514 CC: not recorded. STMI 249. Compare the commentary by Śrīpūrņasena, who is sometimes called Śrīsūryasena.

- 519 G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 52) assigns Dhruvapāla to the twelfth century. The same author (Vrddhatrayī 53 and 459) says that Mahīdhara was a son of Kalyāṇabhaṭṭa, who wrote the Bālatantra and lived in Ahicchattra; he places him in the eighth or ninth century. Kalyāṇa, however, belongs to the sixteenth century. Mahīdhara may be earlier than Vrnda, because he was acquainted with the disorder called bradhna (= Vrnda's vardhma); see Niścala ad Cakradatta, vrddhi 22. Sanātana refers to Govardhana's Karmamālā (see Niścala ad Cakradatta, agnimāndya 14–15) and is therefore posterior to the latter.

- 522 Akṣadeva's Yogaśata(ka) (not recorded in the NCC) is quoted by Niścala (ad Cakradatta, hikkāśvāsa 9; plīhayakṛt 11; karṇaroga 7), as well as his Karmamālā, a treatise in verse, not to be confused with Govardhana's work of the same title. Akṣadeva's Yogaśata differs from that by Nāgārjuna or Vararuci, as shown by the quotations. G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 54) places Akṣadeva in the eleventh century.
- 523 NCC I, 349. D. Wujastyk (1990: 169): by Amitaprabhā, according to a Bodleian MS, d.716(8), dating from A.D. 1708. See: Amitaprabha.

- 525 NCC I, 178 and 24I; IX, 330. This work has been edited, according to P.V. Sharma (AVI 311–312: *Ānandāśrama, Poona, no date indicated). Nandalāla is assigned to the sixteenth century (STMI 155 and 250).

Both editions are based on a single MS, belonging to Nārāyaṇārya, son of Oļaśa Brahmaśrī Parameśvara.

- Though thirty-six or thirty-five (depending on the interpretation of the term pūrvapakṣavidhāna as one or two items; see on this point: A. Comba, 1994: 156) tantrayuktis are described in the Carakasaṃhitā, their number is said to be twenty-six in the text of Ca.Si.12.41ab. For that reason, some authorities amend the reading ṣaḍviṃśatā to ṣaṭtriṃśatā. One ed. (Jīvānanda 1896) reads pañcatriṃśat (see Kane I.1, 216).

 - e Le Kumāratantra de Rāvaṇa et les textes parallèles indiens, tibétains, chinois, cambodgien et arabe, par Jean Filliozat; Cahiers de la Société Asiatique, Première Série IV Étude de démonologie indienne, Paris 1937. This book is a valuable study on Indian demonology. It contains an edition of Rāvaṇa's Kumāratantra, based on a MS of the collection P. Cordier of the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris (J. Filliozat, Liste Nr. 74d, a copy of a Tanjore MS), ed. b of *1911, two editions of the Cakradatta, and a MS of Niścalakara's Ratnaprabhā (J. Filliozat, Liste Nr. 116), accompanied by an annotated French translation.

References are to e; b is referred to in prescriptions against various children's diseases. A Kumāratantra was also *edited by Kavirāj Yāminībhūṣan Rāy (Calcutta 1920). A partial edition of the Kumāratantra exists too: *rāvaṇakṛta kumāratantrāntargata...cakradattakṛta pūtanāvidhāna, (hindī-)bhāṣā ṭīkā sahita, Bhāratabhūṣaṇa Press, Lucknow 1929 [IO.San. B.948(i)]. The Kumāratantra, described by A.C. Burnell (1880: 204, C: Tantric literature, VI, Nr. 9,119), has nothing in common with Rāvana's Kumāratantra (see ed. e, 4).

- 560 Compare the bālagrahas of Suśruta and Vāgbhaṭa.
- These mātṛkās are distinct from the bālagrahas who are described in the classical saṛṇḥitās and many later works, though some of the mātṛkās bear the same or similar names (e.g., Mukhamaṇḍikā, Pütanā, Revatī, Śakunī). Some medical treatises, for example, the Hārītasaṇḥitā, deal with both bālagrahas and mātṛkās, but in separate chapters (Hārītasaṇḥitā III.54: the pūtanās, who are the same as the mātṛkās; 55: the bālagrahas). See on the Tibetan equivalents of the mātṛkās, called ma-mo: R. De Nebesky-Wojkowitz (1993): 269–273. See on their Khmer equivalents: Ch. Ang (1992).
- 562 All the mantras are addressed to Nārāyaṇa in the Bombay edition (b).
- 563 Variants of the names of the mātrkās are Nandā (instead of Nandanā), Mukhamanditikā, Sūtikā.
- 564 Variants of the names are Nandā, Stitikā, Kālikā (instead of Kāmukā).
- VIII: 7.140-194. Variants of the names are Nandā (instead of Nandanā), Grhī (instead of Aryakā), Sūtikā (instead of Bhtisūtikā), Nairrtā (instead of Nirrtā). The mantras are addressed to Nārāyaṇa, apart from those concerning Grhī and Mukhamundikā, which are addressed to Rāvaṇa. Three mantras are added at the end, addressed to Rudra and Khadgarāvaṇa.
- 566 See Cat. 10 Nr. 2679.
- 567 Amṛtasāgara, Nidāna 42: Nandā, Śubhadā, Pūtanā, Mukhamandikā, Pūtanā, Śakunī, Śuskarevatī, Nānā, Sūtikā, Kriyā, Pipīlikā, and Kāmukā.
- Variants of the names are Mukhamandikā, Vidālikā (instead of Kaṭapūtanā), Śakunī, Vidālikā again (instead of Aryakā), Madamedasā (instead of Bhūsūtikā), Revatī (instead of Nirrtā), Arcakā (instead of Pilipicchikā), Adbhutā (instead of Kāmukā).
- 569 Yogataranginī 77; variants of the names are Nandā, Manditakā, Pūtanā (instead of Kaṭapūtanā), Śakunī, Āryakā, Sūtikā, Nirīti, Pilipindikā.
- 570 Brhadyogataranginī 144.85-104; variants of the names are Nandā, Mukhamanditikā, Pūtanā (instead of Katapūtanā), Śakunī, Śuskarevatikā, Āryakā, Sūtikā, Nirrti, Pilipindikā.
- 571 The names of the first series of grahīs, who attack a child on the first to tenth day after birth, are Nandinī, Sunandanā, Ghantālī, Kantakālī, Ahankārī, Şaşthikā, Sinnhikā, Revatī (omitted in the Nighanturatnākara), Meṣī, and Rodanī. The grahīs who endanger the life of a child in its first to tenth month are Kumārī, Kukkutā, Gomukhī, Pingalā, Balavāhinī, Padmanābhā, Kumārī again, Argikā, Kumbhakarnikā, and Tāpasī.
- 572 CC: not recorded.
- 573 U.P. Shah (1952/53): 34.
- 574 See ed. e of the Kumāratantra, 67-68; the twelve mātrkās are replaced by thirteen yoginīs with the following names: Mātrkā, Stanadā, Pūtanā, Mukhamun dikā, Bidālī, Nākulī, Jambhalā, Ajitā, Dākinī, Patinī, Bhadrakālī (the name of the tenth is omitted in the text).

- on Khadgarāvaṇa: T. Goudriaan, 1977: 143–169) describes twelve mātṛkas or grahīs; their names are Nandā, Sunandā, Pūtanā, Mukhamanḍlikā, Vilālā, Śakunikā, Śuṣkāngī, Jambhikā, Añjikā, Revatī, Śilā (the name of the twelfth one is omitted; see ed. e of the Kumāratantra, 69).
- 576 Compare the second part of the bālacikitsā chapter of the Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati, taken from the Nārāyanī ya.
- 577 Their names are: Pāpinī, Bhīṣanī, Ghandālī (Jhandālī at Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati 41.53), Kākolī, Hamsāmbikā (Simhikā at Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati 41.56), Phatkārī, Muktakeśī, Tridandī (Dandinī at Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati 41.60), Mahāmāhisī, and Rodanī.
- 578 The names of these, who belong to the class called Pūtanā, are: Śakunī, Makuṭā, Gomukhī, Pingalā, Laṭanā (Haṃsikā at Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati 41.69), Pankajā, Śiṭalā, Yamunā, Kumbharnikā. Tāpanī (Tāpasī at Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati 41.74), Rāksasī, and Capalā.
- 579 The names of these, who are called Kumārī, are: Yātanā, Rodinī, Caṭakā, Cañcalā, Dhāvanī, Yamunā, Jātavedā (Jātavedasī at Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati 41.81), Kākolī (Kālinī at Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati 41.82), Kalahamsī, Devadūtī, Bālikā, Vāyavī, Yaksinī, Muñcakā (Muñjakamukhī at Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati 41.87), Vānarī, and Bandhāvatī (Bandhavatī at Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati 41.88).
- 580 Edited by Ācārya Baladeva Upādhyāya, Kashi Sanskrit Series 174, Vārāṇasī 1966; translated by Manmatha Nath Dutt Shastrī, Chowkhamba Sanskrit Studies Vol. LIV, 2 vols., Varanasi 1967. Their names are: (1) Pāpinī, Bhīṣaṇī, Ghaṇṭhālī, Kākolī, Hamsādhikā, Phaṭkārī, Muktakeśī, Śrīdaṇdī, Mahāgrahī, Rodanī; (2) Pūtanāsaṃkulī, Mukuṭā, Gomukhī, Pingalā, Lalanā, Pankajā, Nirāhārā, Yamunā, Kumbhakarnī, Tāpasī, Rākṣasī, Cañcalā; (3) Yātanā, Rodanī, Caṭakā, Cañcalā, Dhāvanī, Yamunā, Jātavedā, Kālā, Kalahamsī, Devadūtī, Bālikā, Vāyavī, Yakṣinī, Muṇḍikā, Vānarī, and Gandhavatī. Compare de. e of the Kumāratantra, 69-71. Compare also A. Kumar (1994: 304-306); S. Hāṇṇḍā (1982): 223-238; Vettam Mani 297-299 (grahapīḍā).
- They are found in the part of chapter twenty-two that reproduces Jīvaka's Bālatantra. Their names are: (1) Dhanvinī, Bhiṣaṇī, Kanṭhamālinī, Kākolī, Hastinī, Huṃkārī, Muktakeśī, Tridaṇḍī, Ajameṣī, Rodinī; (2) Śakunī, Makuṭā, Gomatī, Pingalā, Kāñcanī, Pankajā, Śītalā, Rajanī, Kumbhakarṇī, Śabatī, Rākṣasī and Cañcalā; (3) those who seize a child from the first (not the second year in this case) to the sixteenth year: Gandhinī, Nandinī, Bandhinī, Capalā, Tāpasī, Kārmukī, Jātavedā, Nalinī, Capalā again, Revatī, Bālikā, Yāminī, Yakṣinī, Sundarī, Vārunī, Dhanadā (some verses of the last part are missing). The end of the chapter (187–228) has verses on two more series of grahīs who assault children from the first to the tenth day and the first to the twelfth month of life; Anantakumāra does not name the source of these verses, but they literally agree with the verses describing these grahīs in chapter eleven of the Tantrasārasaṃgraha.

This edition, which contains a large number of misreadings, is based on the photographs of the two MSS then known (see T.R. Gambier-Perry, 1930: *45-47, items 49 and 50). It gives those passages of the Sanskrit original that correspond to the preserved parts of the Khotanese version, as well as those corresponding to a fragmentary Uighur translation. The complete Sanskrit text was critically edited in an exemplary way by R.E. Emmerick, who based his text on five Nepalese MSS, three among these newly discovered by him, and one MS from a private collection in Kerala: The Siddhasara of Ravigupta, Vol. I: The Sanskrit text, edited by R.E. Emmerick; Verzeichnis der Orientalischen Handschriften in Deutschland, Supplementband 23.1, Wiesbaden 1980; references are to this edition; it was reviewed by D. Pingree (JRAS 1982, I, 70-71), J.C. Wright (BSOAS 45, 1, 1982, 184-185), and C. Vogel (OL 80, 4, 1985, 393-394). A description of the Nepalese MSS is found in R.E. Emmerick (1974a: 629-634). - 658 See R.E. Emmerick (1981).
- 659 From Ravi are: jvara 106, 107, 115, 117, 119-121, 161.

From Ravigupta are: jvara 69, 82, 87, 99, 104, 185–186; atīsāra 67; raktapitta 24, 25, 37; rājayakṣman 1, 22, 23, 27; kāsa 5–6 and 49; hikkāśvāsa 1 and 8; chardi 2cd, 13, 19; tṛṣṇā 16, 17, 24; madātyaya 3–6 and 24; unmāda 1 and 15–16; apasmāra 4; ūrustambha 2ef; udāvarta 31; gulma 92; mūtrakṛcchra 19; prameha 21; udara 41 and 45; plīhayakṛt 6; śotha 22; bhagandara 3 and 22; upadaṇṣśa 9; kuṣtha 55, 64, 65, 68, 92, 156; visarpa 7; mukharoga 52; kaṛṇaroga 15; nāsāroga 5 and 21; netraroga 22 and 31.

From the Siddhasāra are: atīsāra 98 and 102; pāṇḍuroga 8, 25, 26, 30; madātyaya 10; apasmāra 3; udāvarta 6; gulma 31–32; plīhayakṛt 8 and 9cd; vraṇaśotha 50 and 85; nādīvrana 1; upadaṃśa 1–2; visarpa 14 and 19; vireka 2.

The majority of these quotations are found in the text of Ravigupta's Siddhasāra, edited by R.E. Emmerick. P.V. Sharma (1993: Intr. 29) suggested that some verses quoted from the Siddhasāra (ad visarpa 33; mukharoga 52; vireka 10–15 and 16) are from another treatise of this title, because they are absent from the edition. The stanza cited ad mukharoga 52, however, is a variant of Siddhasāra 26.87; the other quotations may also be variants or may have formed part of the text of the Siddhasāra consulted by Niścala; additional verses are far from rare in some of the MSS.

- 660 This may explain the insertion of additional chapters in some MSS, such as a chapter on vidradhi, borrowed from Vāgbhaṭa, in MS A (see Intr. Siddhasāra, 9). The absence of chapters on the disorders enumerated does not prevent their being mentioned incidentally.
- 661 See on this term R.E. Emmerick (1977a): 219–220: pāṛdunāga, although rendered as skyarbab-kyi nad (the equivalent of pāṇduroga) by the Tibetan translators, must be some skin disease; the Ravigupta mentioned in the Blue Annals, who founded a cult of Tārā in Kaśmīr, was cured by this goddess of a disease called kluḥi gnod-pa (probably the same as klu-gnod = klu-nad = mie-nad, the Tibetan equivalent of kuṣtha).
- 662 The Tibetan translation of the Siddhasāra (Tibetan title: Gces-grub), extant in its entirety and contained in the Tanjur (see the references in the Intr. to the Siddhasāra, 3), is a close prose rendering with some additional matter. The part corresponding to the Khotanese version has been edited in transcription by H.W. Bailey (Khotanese Texts I, 5–105). A new edition of the complete text has appeared as vol. II of R.E. Emmerick's Siddhasāra-series: The Siddhasāra of Ravigupta, vol. 2: the Tibetan version with facing English translation, edited and translated by R.E. Emmerick; Verzeichnis der orientalischen Handschriften in Deutschland, Supplementband 23, 2, Wiesbaden 1982; reviewed by D. Pingree (JRAS 1984, 1, 157–158) and in the IIJ (28, 1985, 226). The Tibetan translation, due to Jinamitra, Ādityavarman and Candra, is to be dated to the early ninth century (R.E. Emmerick, 1977a: 215; Intr. to the Siddhasāra, 2–3). Bhagwan Dash (1976a: 15) mentions Jinamitra and Atirāgyavarman as the translators (see, however, the colophon of the Tibetan version).
- 663 The Khotanese version was published by H.W. Bailey in facsimile: Codices Khotanenses, 1938, 1–67, and also in transcription: Khotanese Texts I, 2–104 (Cambridge 1945; *reedited 1969), V, 315–324 (Cambridge 1963). A new edition of the Khotanese text is being prepared by R.E. Emmerick. A metrical introduction to the Siddhasāra, only found in its Khotanese version, was translated and commented upon by H.W. Bailey (1962) (see also H.W. Bailey, 1983: 1233). The Khotanese version, probably to be dated to the tenth century

- according to R.E. Emmerick (Intr. to the Siddhasāra, 4), was made from the Tibetan translation, as shown first by H.W. Bailey (1940), but R.E. Emmerick convincingly demonstrated that the translator also availed himself of the Sanskrit original and knew Sanskrit far better than Tibetan, since the Khotanese text sometimes renders the Sanskrit correctly where the Tibetan translation is in error (R.E. Emmerick, 1971b). See on the Khotanese version also R.E. Emmerick (1984a): 141–142.
- 664 Eleven fragments of an Uighur version were published, unidentified, by G.R. Rachmati (1930), (1932). Three of these fragments were identified by H.W. Bailey (1945, I: VII and 133-134), *(1953). R.E. Emmerick located some more fragments (Intr. to the Siddhasāra, 13). An Uighur-Sanskrit bilingual fragment of the Siddhasāra was discovered by D. Maue. A new edition of the Uighur fragments is being prepared by R.E. Emmerick; see R.E. Emmerick (1984a): 141-142; Emmerick mentions in his articles that Rhazes (al-Rā-zī) frequently quotes Ravigupta's Siddhasāra in Arabic (see for more details Emmerick, 1981: 28-31).
- 665 The Siddhasāra was also translated into Sinhalese; see J. Liyanaratne (1989): 123-124, and (1990).
- 666 R.E. Emmerick, 1971b.
- 667 Most of the verses of the first ten chapters of the Mādhavanidāna which I could not trace (see G.J. Meulenbeld, 1974: Appendix One, A) proved to derive from the Siddhasāra (see also R.E. Emmerick's review of my book on the Mādhavanidāna in BSOAS 38, 3, 1975, 649–650). The Mādhavanidāna is the earliest treatise to borrow from the Siddhasāra.
- 668 R.E. Emmerick (1977a: 219–221) inclines to the view that the author of the Siddhasāra is the same as the Ravigupta who founded a cult of Tārā in Kaśmīr, but J. Naudou is of the opinion that these two are different persons (J. Naudou, 1968: 65–66). R.E. Emmerick rejects J. Naudou's opinion that the founder of the cult of Tārā has to be placed in the eighth century and concludes that there is no reason to assume that he is later than the seventh century. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 459–460) mentions that Ravigupta, the author of the Siddhasāra, whom he calls a sarvadandanāyaka, is referred to in Jayantabhatta's Nyārvarañ iarī.
- 669 The last colophon of a MS (post fourteenth century) of Vāgbhaṭa's Aṣṭāngahṛdaya, forming part of the collection of the Wellcome Institute for the History of Medicine, London, declares Vāgbhaṭa to be a descendant of Ravigupta; the colophon admits of two interpretations: Ravigupta was either Vāgbhaṭa's great-grandfather or his grandfather; if correct, this statement means that Ravigupta's date is much earlier than generally assumed (see D. Wujastyk, 1985).
- 670 Critically edited by R.E. Emmerick in the same volume as the Siddhasāra. It is also called Sārottaranighaṇṭu (see H.P. Śāstrī, 1905: XXIII and 37, Nr. 1114), because it is appended to the Siddhasāra (P.V. Sharma, 1976a: 100). The Siddhasāranighaṇṭu is ascribed to Viṣriugupta, the brother of Ravigupta, by A. Rahman (STMI 257 and 716); the Sārottaranighaṇṭu is listed by this author as a separate work (200 and 697). Compare on the Siddhasāranighantu: DGV IV. 271.
- 671 It counts 193 lines in śloka metre.
- 672 Only two among the six MSS of the Siddhasāra contain the Nighantu, each has both versions of the text.
- 673 R.E Emmerick (1971b): 365.
- 674 These two types of nighantu were first distinguished by P.V. Sharma (Intr. to his edition of the Astānganighantu, 18–19; AVI 372).

- 675 R.E. Emmerick (1971b: 364) observed on the origin of the nighantus: "It may be that these vocabularies, called in Sanskrit nighantu- or nighantaka-, are earlier than the commentaries and that the latter merely represent the application of the nighantus to particular passages or it may be that the nighantus are merely late summaries of the material scattered through the commentaries. The matter has not yet been investigated. Nighantu-type lists occur already in the Kalpasthāna of Caraka, e.g. 3.3-4". P. V. Sharma, reflecting on the origin of the nighantus, remarked that it may be that the old samhitās had a nighantu appended to them as a supplement (AVI 372-373).
- 676 R.E. Emmerick (1971b): 365.
- 677 See P.V. Sharma (1973). The word is also found in the Aṣṭāngasaṃgraha ((U.6.51) and Hātītasaṃhitā. See on tulasī, the holy basil: H.A. Ackworth (1890–1892); L.A. Babb (1975): 107–108; *S. - 678 Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 1483. Nāgabalā is sometimes identified as Sida alba Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1483), but its identity is disputed (see T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972).
- 679 Mahāśyāmā is found in the Suśrutasamhitā. It is sometimes regarded as Ichnocarpus frutescens R.Br. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 897), but its identity is disputed (see T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972).
- 680 Khapura is identified as Areca catechu Linn. and theexudation of Boswellia serrata Roxb. ex Colebr. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 152 and 258). Compare T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar (1972).
- 681 Surasī is identified as Naringi crenulata (Roxb.) Nicolson = Hesperethusa crenulata (Roxb.) M. Roem. = Limonia crenulata Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1160). See on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet (1987).
- 682 Triputaka is found in the Suśrutasamhitā (Sū.46.27).
- 683 Murungī is usually a synonym of śigru, vāyasī or kākamācī.
- 684 This may be Ctenolepis cerasiformis Naud., known as aksipīdaka (found in the Caraka-samhitā) and śankhinī. The botanical name is absent from WIRM, but see Hooker II, 630, see for the identification: M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 518.
- 685 Aśvagandhā is frequent in the Carakasamhitā, etc.
- 686 Nandīvrksa is found in the Suśrutasamhitā.
- 687 Dhava is found in the Carakasamhitā, etc.
- 688 Rāsnā is found in the Carakasamhitā, etc.
- 689 Yavatiktā and saptalā are found in the Carakasaṃhitā, etc. The identifications of yavatiktā disagree with those of saptalā.
- 690 It is of course older than the earliest dated MS, that is, anterior to A.D. 1114 (R.E. Emmerick's edition II, 5).

- 695 The author mentions his name in verses 1 and 400.
- 696 NCC VII, 25–26; VIII, 193. The title of the work is mentioned in verses 1, 86, and 400. An alternative title of the Cikitsākalikā is Yogamālā (NCC VIII, 193); compare Cikitsākalikā 1, together with Candraţa's comments on it; R.P. Bhatnagar (1992: 271) adds Amrtayogamālā, Tīsaṭasūtra and Yogasamuccaya as alternative titles. A medical work, called Tantra, by Tīsaṭa, is recorded in the NCC (VIII, 87; see also VII, 26); this entry probably refers to the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 956), which mentions a Tīḥsaṭācāryakṛtatantra.

- a J. Jolly, Zur Quellenkunde der indischen Medizin. 4. Die Cikitsäkalikä des Tīsaṭācārya, ZDMG 60, 1906, 413–468. This is an edition and German translation of the first forty-seven verses of the Cikitsäkalikä, together with extracts from Candraṭa's commentary, based on five MSS described by J. Jolly; three of these MSS also contain the commentary, in two different versions, the one being much longer than the other. Jolly gives extracts from both versions; his translation of the conumentary is a condensed rendering that summarizes both versions.
- b Chikitsā-kalika: or Essentials of treatment by Tisatacharya, with the commentary of Chandrata, edited and revised by Kaviraj Narendra Nath Mitra and translated into Hindi by Jayadeva Vidyalankara Ayurvedacharya, Hindi Press, Lahore 1926/27. The text of the commentary is based on three MSS about which the editor gives no information (see C.G. Kashikar's review of ed. c in ABORI 30, 1950, 359).
- c Chikitsa Kalika of Tisatacharya, edited by Vayaskara N.S. Mooss, with a preface by Prof. P.K. Gode; prastāvanā by Śańkaraśarman (i.e., N.S. This edition is based on five MSS, whichare described in theeditor's sūcīpattra. The text is that of MS ka, belonging to the editor; the variants from the other MSS are given in footnotes. The Lahore ed. was not accessible to N.S. Mooss.
- d Cikitsākalikā of Tīsaṭācārya, containing Sanskrit commentary of his son Candraṭa, edited with English commentary (i.e., translation) and explanatory notes by Prof. P.V. Sharma, The Chaukhamba Ayurvijnan Granthamala 21, 1st ed., Varanasi 1987. The text of this edition is that of b; it contains three Appendices: I, additional verses found in the other edition (i.e., ed. b) and in MSS; II, plants and drugs used in the text (with Latin or English names); III, units of weight; an index of verses is found at the end. The explanatory notes, incorporating the gist of Candraṭa's commentary, are very valuable.

Some MSS have 412 or even 425 verses (*Ra jasthan Oriental Institute, Udaipur, MSS Nrs. 492–493; see P.V. Sharma's Intr. to ed. d, 9). Tīsaṭa himself states (verse 400) that his work counts 400 stanzas. The 401 verses of editions b and d are commented upon by Candraṭa. Some formulae found in later works and said to derive from the Cikitsākalikā are absent from the text of editions b and d the third type of māṣataila of the Cakradatta (vātavyādhi 162–164), taken from the Cikitsākalikā according to Niścalakara, is only found in ed. c (verses 311–323; compare Appendix I of ed. d, verses 28–30); some verses of Candraṭa's Yogaratnasamuccaya, quoted from the Cikitsākalikā, namely the verse classifying haemorrhoids and the formula of harītakīcūrna, are found in ed. c (see D.Ch. Bhattacharyya, 1947b: 151–152; P.V. Sharma, Intr. to ed. d, 9).

Sharma to the second half of the tenth century (AVI 271) or the ninth century (A.D. 875-900; see Intr, to ed. d, 3), J. Filliozat to the eleventh century (IC II, 160), and Winternitz (III, 551) to about A.D. 1300. Atrideva is of the opinion that he lived in the same age as Vāgbhaṭa or somewhat later (ABI 251). R.P. Bhatnagar (1992: 270), who regards Tīsaṭa as the son of Vāgbhaṭa, places him in the first half of the fifth century (R.P. Bhatnagar assigns Vāgbhaṭa to the latter half of the fourth century).

Editions: (a) The Kalyāṇa-karākam of Ugrādityacharya, edited with introduction, translation, notes, indexes and dictionary by Vardhaman Parshwanath Shastri, Sakharam Nemchand Granthamala No. 129, Sholapur 1940 (introduction) in Hindī, translation into Hindī; indexes are absent; the 'dictionary' is a list of Sanskrit plant names with equivalents in Hindī, Marāṭhī and Kannaḍa; the edition is based on 4 MSS). *(b) edition with Telugu translation, published in instalments in the journal Dhanvantari (20, 1, 1956—; see BDHM 2, 4, 1964, 208). An English translation of chapters 1–4 appeared in BDHM 2, 4, 1964, 209–212 and 3, 1, 1965, 11–22. References are to ed. a. The title of the treatise is mentioned by the author twice (1.11 and at the end of the hitā-hita chapter). A commentary on the Kalyāṇakāraka is recorded in the Check-list (Nr. 374: it is called Cintāmaṇi) and in Cat. Mysore XIII (Nr. 41471). The Kalyāṇakāraka is called Kalyāṇasiddhi by G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 459).

- 747 NCC II, 284; *Jaina Siddhānta Bhāskara 4, 2, 117-118 is referred to. Compare Rājkumār Jain (1981): 89. Nothing is known about this series of four works.
- 748 The whole of chapter four, except for the last two verses, has been written in $\tilde{a}rd\tilde{u}lavikrī-dita metre.
- 749 The last chapter is in prose, interspersed with quotations in verse.
- 750 Some chapters (7, 8, 19) are called both pariccheda and adhikāra.

- 752 This Hindu deity has been adopted by the Jains.
- 753 Twelve rulers called cakravartin appear in each half of the wheel of time according to Jain doctrine. See H. von Glasenapp (1964): 255–258.
- 754 See H. von Glasenapp (1964): 267-269.
- 755 The Jains divide time into an ascending (utsarpin ) half, each subdivided into six stages (see H. von Glasenapp, 1964: 244–246; O. Lacombe in L. Renou and J. Filliozat, 1953: 650; W. Schubring, 1962: 225–227).

) and a descending (avasarpin

- 756 Twenty-four Tirthankaras appear in each half of the wheel of time. See H. von Glasenapp (1964): 247–255.
- 757 The Jains distinguish eleven gaṇadharas, the leaders of groups of monks and sages; the first of them was Gautama Indrabhūti. See H. von Glasenapp (1964): 32–33.
- 758 The Jains distinguish a number of holy men, called śrutakevalin, who still knew all the twelve angas of the Jaina canon; their successors were no longer acquainted with the twelfth anga, the Dṛṣṭivāda. See H. von Glasenapp (1964): 33, 305; H.H. Wilson, 1862: I, 336–337.

- 765 Honey is replaced by sugar (guda and śarkarā).
- 766 See, e.g., 18.68 (grahas infest human beings who consume meat, honey and alcohol) and 19.26–27 (alcoholic drinks are prohibited).
- 767 The Jain version of āyurveda is therefore called puṣpāyurveda (Intr. to ed. a, 37–38). A number of articles of food of vegetable origin are also forbidden to Jainas (see P.S. Jaini, 1980: 224, n.16; S. Stevenson, 1970: 138, 213; R. Williams, 1963: 110–116).
- 768 See on the interest of the Jains in alchemy: N. Balbir (1990), (1992).
- 769 The therapy of the eye diseases is arranged according to the three doşas and blood as causative factors (15.255–273). Blood is regarded as both a doşa and a dhātu (3.61). Cf. 3.67, where blood is described as a doşa. In many instances, however, blood is said to be corrupted by the doşas (e.g., 9.15 and 35).
- 770 In some respects he is indebted to Suśruta, as appears from the sections on marmans (20. 49-83) and leeches (21.35-46).
- 771 See: Samantabhadra. Samantabhadra is also mentioned at 15.291.
- 772 This work formed part of the lost twelfth and last anga, the Ditthivāya (Sanskrit Dṛṣṭivāda), of the Jain canon, and formed the twelfth pūrva of its pūrvagata section (H. von Glasenapp, 1964: 95). See on the Pṛāṇāvāya also JAI 10–19.
- 773 See: Pūjyapāda.
- Pātrasvāmin, also called Pātrakesarin, was the author of the Trilakṣaṇakadarthana (NCC VIII, 259; XII, 25-26: author's name Pātrakesarin), written in refutation of the trilakṣaṇa theory of Dignāga; he lived about A.D. 575-625. See on Pātrakesarin: A.K. Chatterjee (1978): 331; JAI 51-52; Jyoti Prasad Jain (1950): 133, and (1964): 167-168; K.B. Pathak (1931-32).
- 3775 Siddhasena is also mentioned at 15.290. This Siddhasena is, according to Jyoti Prasad Jain (1950: 133), either the Digambara guru who lived in the early centuries of the Christian era (Siddhasena I), or the Siddhasena Diväkara (Siddhasena II) who belonged to about the sixth century. See on three Jain authors called Siddhasena, and a fourth one, called Siddhasenagaṇi: Jyoti Prasad Jain (1964): 150–151, 164–166, 183–184, 184. Siddhasenagaṇi is by some regarded as identical with Siddhasena I (see A.K. Chatterjee, 1978: 327). See on Siddhasena Diväkara, the author of the Nyāyāvatāra (about A.D. 480–550), and Siddhasenagaṇi, the author of a commentary on Umāsvāti's Tattvārthādhigamasūtra (A.D. 600): J.N. Farquhar (1967); S.Ch. Vidyabhusana (1971): 173–181 and 182. See also on Siddhasena Diväkara: A.K. Chatterjee (1978); 327; H. von Glasenapp (1964): 106–107; Ph. Granoff (1988): 63–64, (1989), (1990); *Ch. Krause (1948); O. Lacombe in L. Renou and J. Filliozat (1953): 663–664; Winternitz II, 340–341. H. von Glasenapp (1964: 106–107) remarks that the Nyāyāvatāra presupposes knowledge of Dharmakīrti's Nyāyabindu, which implies that it cannot be earlier than the seventh century.
- 776 See JAI 52–53. Daśarathaguru was a senior colleague of Jinasena, the disciple of Virasena (see A.K. Chatterjee, 1978: 294–295) and the spiritual preceptor of Amoghavarşa I Nṛ-patunga (Jyoti Prasad Jain, 1950: 133; 1964: 203–204).
- 777 Some leaves of a MS, called Vaidya, by Siṛṇhanāda, have been preserved (*Jaina Siddhānta Bhavan, Ārā, MS Nr. 77); a Divyāmṛta (NCC: not recorded) is also attributed to him (see V.P.P. Śāstrī, 1984: 389).
- 778 Mentioned in a verse on the treatment of eye diseases. See on Jaṭācārya, also called Jaṭila, who is assigned to the seventh century: A.K. Chatter jee (1978): 301–302; Jyoti Prasad Jain (1964): 181 and 211; L. Renou in L. Renou and J. Filliozat (1953): 618.

- 779 Quoted on the preparation of a kvātha (decoction). Kumāranandin, the guru of Vīrasena's guru Elācārya, lived about A.D. 700 (Jyoti Prasad Jain, 1950: 133).
- 780 See NCCIV, 221; Intr. to ed. a, 30; A.K. Chatterjee (1978): 305, 306, 331: mentioned in the Harivaṃśa (*1.38) of Jinasena II (A.▶. 783); J.P. Jain (1964): 160 and 199. Kumārasena may belong to the middle of the ninth century (A.K. Chatterjee, 1978: 206).
- 78I Quoted on the preparation of a kvātha (decoction). An astronomer called Śrutakīrti is quoted in Bhaṭṭotpala's commentary on the Bṛhaṭjātaka (CC I, 675).
- 782 Quoted on the preparation of a kvātha (decoction); he disagrees with Kumāranandin and Śrutakīrti. Vīrasena is also referred to in Akalanka's Vidyāvinoda (NCC I, 7). Vīrasena wrote his part of the Dhavalā, the earliest commentary on the Karmaprābhṛta of the Digambara canon, in A.D. 780 (Jyoti Prasad Jain, 1950: 133) or 816, during the reign of Amoghavarṣa I (A.K. Chatterjee, 1978: 294). See on Vīrasena: A.K. Chatterjee (1978): 106, 165, 206, 294-296, 298; J.P. Jain (1964): 142, 185-189, 203.

- 785 See Vettam Mani on persons called Śibi.
- 786 This king is called Pṛṣadhra in the Carakasamhitā (Ci.9.4). Compare H.H. Wilson (1972): 280.
- 787 The Vīrasimhāvaloka (117) quotes Kalyāṇakāraka 17.119. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 52) assumes that the Kalyāṇasiddhi, quoted by Niścalakara, is identical with Ugrāditya's Kalyāṇakāraka.
- 788 CC I, 745. See R. Schmidt (1904).
- 789 The Mādhavanidāna (61.3-4; source unknown) has four types, by kapha, pitta, vāta and samnipāta.
- 790 Also mentioned by Suśruta (Ni.5.5: rakasā, parisarpa and visarpa).
- 791 Not mentioned elsewhere.
- 792 Not mentioned in other texts.
- 793 Not mentioned elsewhere.
- 794 See Su.Ni.13.14 = Mādhavanidāna 55.12.
- 795 Their number is sixty-five in the Suśrutasamhitā (Ni.16.3) and Mādhavanidāna (56).
- 796 Not mentioned as a disease in other texts; it is usually regarded as a symptom and called asyavairasya.
- 797 The Suśrutasaṃhitā (U.53.6ab) = Mādhavanidāna (13.4ab) has no raktaja type, but a ksaya ja type instead.
- 798 The vidvighāta type is found in the Carakasaṃhitā (Si.9.42cd-43) and Vāgbhaṭa's works (A.h.Ni.9.33cd-34, with which Mādhavanidāna 31.19cd-20 partially agrees; A.s.Ni.9.7) and the bastikuṇḍala type in the Carakasaṃhitā (Si.9.44-49ab) and Mādhavanidāna (31. 21-23cd).
- 799 It is described in the Mādhavanidāna (30.8).
- Mādhava regards visphoţa and masūrikā as two distinct diseases (Nidāna 53 and 54), while his description of masūrikā differs considerably from that by Ugrāditya and is much more developed. The term sphoṭamasūrikā is not found elsewhere. Ugrāditya mentions separately an epidemic (upasargaja) type of masūrikā (18.62–64).
- 801 Compare on special features of the Kalyāṇakāraka: R.G. Ghatnekar and B.P. Nanal (1979); JAI 185–208.
- 802 Kinnaras are celestial musicians in Hindu mythology. They are one of the eight orders of Vyantaras in Jain mythology.

- 803 Kimpuruşas are attendants of Kubera in Hindu mythology. They belong to the Vyantaras in Jain doctrine.
- 804 These groups of beings, devas and asuras excepted, belong to the Vyantaras (see H. von Glasenapp, 1964: 235–237) in Jain doctrine.

- 847 A synonym of dhāmārgava (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 848 The same as vişapattrikā (Hindī commentary).
- 849 A synonym of āragvadha (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 850 He is also called Ugrācārya (NCC II, 284) or Ugrasena (Vrddhatrayī 51, 52).
- 851 Śrīnandin is said to be the author of a Yogasārasamgraha (CC: not recorded), on which work Pūrnānanda wrote a commentary (V.P.P. Śāstrī, 1984: 387). See on Śrīnandin also Jyoti Prasad Jain (1950): 133.
- 852 Rāmagiri may be identical with Rāmatīrtha hill in the Vishakhapatnam district of Āndhra Pradesh (Jyoti Prasad Jain, 1950: 132–133, and 1964: 204–206; see also JAI 56–58). The identification of Rāmagiri (mentioned in Kālidāsa's Meghadūta) with Rāmtek, proposed by K. Bhu jabali, and accepted by many scholars (N.N. Bhattacharyya, 1991: 258; N. Dey, 1979: 165–166), is rejected by Jyoti Prasad Jain (1950: 130). See on Rāmagiri: M.A. Mehendale (1975); H.T. Bakker (1997; with references); H.H. Wilson (1984): II, 315–316. See on Rāmtek: H.T. Chapter 2 Authors and works from the period A.D. 1000–1500

- 1 NCC I, 295. Check-list Nr. 2. The title Abhidhānaratnamālā is found at the end of one MS (Cat. Madras Nr. 13257, according to P.V. Sharma in the Intr. to ed. d, 6) and in the colophons of ed. d. Cat. Madras describes six MSS (Nrs. 13257–13262) with the title Abhidhānaratnamālā. Cat. Mysore XIII records nine MSS (Nrs. 41235–43) with the same title; the text is that of the Sadrasanighantu.
- 2 NCC I, 295. This title is given to the work by the scribe of MS Nr. 13258 of Cat. Madras. Cat. Mysore XIII. Nr. 42867 is also called Sadrasanighantu.
- 3 Editions:
 - *a Madras 1881 (NCC I, 295: in Telugu script).
 - *b Madras 1928.
 - *c Şadrasanighanţu (Abhidhānaratnamālā), publ. by Chennapuri Vavilla Rama Swamy Sastrulu and Sons, Madras 1939.

- 17 The author is also called Caturagraja (NCC VI, 305; Filliozat, Liste Nr. 176) and Caturaā-graja (NCCI, 295). STMI (213–214 and 705) ascribes the work to Śrīnivāsārya, the author of the Cikitsātilaka.
- 18 The author was a resident of Āndhra according to B. Rama Rao (1978): 11. Three of the Madras MSS (Nrs. 13259–13261) are accompanied by a Telugu commentary (āndhratīkā).
- 19 NCC I, 7 and 348; IX, 228. AVI 425. NCC I, 7 refers to *JRAS, NS 15, 312. Compare on Amrtanandin and his nighantu: Kalyānakāraka. Amrtanandin's work is called Nighantukośa (NCC: not recorded) by R. Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 178–179), who adds that the work is available up to sa and was probably not completed by the author; Amrtanandin's nighantucontains 22,000 words; the names of many medicinal plants in it betray the Jain origin of the work. See also V.P.P. Śāstrī (1984: 386), who refers for a description of the work to *Jain sāhitya kā bṛhat itihās V, 231. Amrtanandin's Vaidyanighantu was written in Kannada according to Pārśvanāth Śāstrī's Introduction (39) to his edition of Ugrāditya's Kalyānakāraka.
- 20 NCC I, 414; III, 106: also credited with the Śṛṅgārajīvanabhāṇa. G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 472) and Krishnamachariar (1989: 702) ascribe a Śṛṅgāramañ jarī to him.
- 21 Tundīra- or Tondamandala was a part of Drāvida, with Kāncīpura as its capital; it is mentioned in the Mallikāmāruta, by Patañjali, and in the Manimēkalai (N.N. Bhattacharyya, 1991: 291–292; N. Dey, 1979: 205).

 - b ed. by V.S. Venkaţasubrahmanyaśāstrī and C. Rājarājeśvaraśarmā, CCRIMH, Pub. 32, New Delhi 1977; this ed. is based on eight South Indian MSS (Cat. Tanjore Nrs. 11086–89, one of the Madras MSS, and three other ones) and is provided with notes and various readings.

References are to b.

- 43 The name of the treatise is mentioned in the first and last verses, as well as in the colophon. The title of the work is Bheşajakalpasthāna in some of the MSS (see B. Rama Rao, 1984: 14-18). An anonymous Bṛhadbheṣajakalpa is recorded in the Check-list (Nr. 163) and STMI (41). Compare Bheṣajakalpasangraha, -sāra, and -sārasangraha.
- 44 The text of ed. b begins with the statement that it is expounded by Bhāradvāja. Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 42154 ascribes the treatise to Bharadvāja, Nrs. 41357 and 42158 ascribe it to Bhāradvāja.
- 45 NCC II, 154. The colophon says that the Bheşajakalpa forms the seventh chapter of the Āyurvedasudhānidhi. See also Cat. Mysore XIII, Nrs. 41357–59. P. Cordierregarded the Bheşajakalpa as forming part of a Bhāradvājasanhitā, which was a comprehensive work on medicine, to judge from Venkaṭeśa's commentary on the Bheṣajakalpa (P. Cordier, 1903b: 323–324).

- 88 Their number ranges from 136 to 495 (see B. Rama Rao's Intr. to ed. d, XI; see also B. Rājapurohit, 1990: 18 and 120-121). B. Rama Rao collected all the verses from three MSS and two previous editions (a and b), reaching thus a total of 785. The original text may have been rather short, for Appana's Telugu rendering, dating from the thirteenth or fourteenth century (B. Rājapurohit, 1990: 17, places Appana in the thirteenth century; B. Rama Rao assigns him to the thirteenth or fourteenth century in the Intr. to ed. d; P. Hymavathi, 1993: 53 and 55, mentions the first half of the fourteenth century, adding that the earliest Telugu work quoting a verse from Appana's Cārucaryā, is the Sakalanītisammatamu, which belongs to about A.D. 1400), has only seventy-six verses. This Telugu translation has been edited twice, by *Veţurī Prabhākara Śāstrī, Muktyāla 1922, *reprinted by the Ārṣa Rasāyanaśālā Muktyāla 1967, and in *ed. a of the Cārucaryā. See on Appana: P. Ganguly (1989a): 66–67. Tales about Bhoja are told in Merutunga's Prabandhacintāmaņi and Ballālasena's Bhojaprabandha. B. Rama Rao (1978: 9) has suggested that the Cārucaryā may have been composed in Āndhra; his arguments are firstly that the work has been very popular there until recent times, secondly that most of the MSS are found there in Telugu script, and thirdly that it was translated into Telugu by Appana. P. Hymavathi (1993: 51–55) agrees largely with B. Rama Rao.

The title is mentioned in one of the introductory verses (1.2). Edition: kāyastha caṇḍakṛto jvaratimirabhāskaraḥ,... śrīnānakacandra vaidya śāstriņii śabdārtha bodhinī bhāṣā ṭīkayā samalankṛtaḥ, Motīlāl Banārsīdās, Lavapura 1936/37.
- 145 The printed text contains interpolated verses on the pulse (7-10) and some prose on the subject of auscultation (27-31), both containing views derived from western medicine.
- 146 Compare on these fevers: Bhāvaprakāśa, cikitsā 1.473–491; Kāśyapasamhitā, viśeṣaka-lpādhyaya; Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 2.18–23 (see the long quotation from the Bhālukitantra); Nārāyaṇa's Jvaranirṇaya 4.58–101; Parahitasamhitā 1.622–636; Vallabhabhatta's commentary ad Śārngadhara's Triśatī 69; Vangasena, jvara 353–391; Yogaratnākara 612. See also G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 165–172.
- 147 Cāmunda considers the fevers called hataujas and samnyāsa to be varieties of abhinyāsa. See on abhinyāsa: G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 164–165.
- 148 Compare on this series of fevers: Bhāvaprakāśa, cikitsā 1.492-505; Nārāyaṇa's Jvaranirṇaya 4.119-138; Śārngadhara's Triśatī 70-171; Yogaratnākara 160-162. See also G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 166-172.
- 149 Compare on these fevers: Bhāvaprakāśa, cikitsā 1.510-522; Nārāyaṇa's Jvaranirṇaya 4.102-115; Śārngadhara's Triśatī 172-188. The verses of these texts describing this series are almost identical with those of the Jvaratimirabhāskara. See also G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 166-172. No studies trying to identify all the fevers mentioned are known to me; apart from types of malaria, one should take into consideration, for example, kala-azar, dengue, sand-fly fever, relapsing fever, forms of typhus, typhoid, etc. (see J. Megaw, 1946).
- 150 The larger part of the verses on sughoraka appear to have been added, since their numbering is wrong (a series of numbers occurs twice in this chapter).
- 151 These two fevers are also mentioned in Sodhala's Gadanigraha and Śrīkantha's Hitopade-
- 152 These verses are also found in Dalhana's comment ad Su.U.39.42.
- 153 Taken from Su.U.39.43-45ab.
- 154 Verses 46cd-48ab are taken from A.s.Ni.2.98cd-100ab.
- 155 Kālajvara arises at the time of death.
- 156 This kāla jvara is different from that mentioned in the preceding chapter. Fevers called after the four varnas are also described in the Hārītasamhitā.
- 157 Thirst (trsā) is said to be its wife, respiratory disorders and cough its sons, etc.
- 158 The rasayogas from the Jvaratimirabhāskara are not found in Cāmuṇ�a's Rasasaṇ-ketakalikā, śītabhañjīrasa excepted (5.30–34ab = Rasasaṇ-ketakalikā 4.2–7).
- 159 See, e.g., 3.22–26; 7.306–307 and 341–342; 8.11–12ab and 12cd-15; 9.40–42, 43–48, 49–50, 72–73, 74–78, and 79–83; 10.19–21, 22, 52cd-55ab; 13.71–75 and 76–81ab; 14.90–91 and 97cd-98; 15.26cd-30. Verses 9.79–83 contain a Hanumatstotra against trtīyaka fever.
- 160 1.74 (Garga); 7.290 (Caraka); 7.64 (Suśruta); 9.37 (Vṛddhasuśruta). Some more sources are indicated in the headings of groups of verses (taken from the manuscripts or added

- by the editor?): Bhāluki (9.14–15), Hārīta (9.57cd-59), Lakṣmaṇotsava (11.14–15), Yo-garatnākara (7.207–208), granthāntara (7.317–318ab and 333–347ab). According to the NCC (VII, 378) the Jvaraparājaya is quoted; this cannot be correct since this work (by Jayaratna) dates from the beginning of the seventeenth century.
- 161 E.g., 7.221–222 = Triśatī 103–104; 7.227 = 107; 7.232 = 111; 7.238–239 = 123; 7.272–276cd = 167–170; 7.293 = 152; 9.40–48 = 240–248; 9.72–73 = 252–253; 9.79–80 = 259–260.
- 162 Cat. Bikaner Nr. 1380.
- 163 More references to the procedure are found elsewhere in the work: e.g., 5.5-6, 37-39ab, 77-79: 6.3-5. 24-26ab. 43-45.
- 164 Cāmunda is one of the earliest authors to refer to aṣṭasthānaparīkṣā, a set of eight diagnostic procedures also mentioned in the Bāhaṭagrantha.
- 165 Compare, e.g., 7.193–194 and 195 (antaka); 201–202 and 203 (rugdāha); 216–217ab and 217c-f, 242–243ab and 243c-f (śītānga); 247–249ab and 249c-e (tandrika); 253–254 and 255 (pralāpaka); 258–259 and 260 (raktaṣṭhīvin); 264 and 265 (bhugnanetra); 269–270ab and 270c-f (jihvaka).
- 166 The second, more elaborate, description is said to have been taken from some other treatise and is neither found in the Trisatī nor in the Jvaranirnaya.
- 167 Hāridraka forms an exception in this respect; the other members of the third series of samnipāta fevers are regarded as incurable by medical means; verses on the therapy of hāridraka do not occur in the Trisatī.
- 168 The Hindī translator states that Gayadāsa subscribed to this view
- 169 These verses (90cd excepted, which is almost identical with A.s.Ni.2.95cd) do not occur elsewhere.
- 170 Some verses added to those on śītalā (14.88–93ab) declare that adoration of Śiva and Gaurī, as well as the recitation of the Vainateyasamhitā (i.e., the Garuḍasaṃhitā), is recommended in vātaroga and other diseases. See on a Garuḍasaṃhitā and Gāruḍasaṃhitā: Tāntrika Sāhitya 173 and 182.
- 171 A synonym of elavāluka (Indu ad A.s.Ci. 1.71).
- 172 See on this plant: Śivadāsasena ad Cakradatta, strīroga 39.
- 173 A synonym of kākajanghā (Aṣṭāiganighaṇṭu 283; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1006). Dāsī is also identified as Barleria cristata Linn., B. prionitis Linn., and B. strigosa Willd. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 208, 212, 213; Abdul Kareem has B. strigosa Wall.; compare WIRM II, rev. ed., 48).

- 183 Jvaratimirabhāskara 1.1 and 16.41; Varņanighanta 1 (see P.K. Gode, 1940b.). P.V. Sharma calls him a son of Krsna (AVI 317).
- 184 Jvaratimirabhāskara 1.1.
- 185 CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 86. At the end of the Jvaratimirabhāskara the author states that he wrote the work in Medapāṭa (CBORI XVI, 1, Nrs. 86 and 88; the printed text has Medapāṭta), i.e., Mewār (see N.N. Bhattacharyya, 1991: 220; N. Dey, 1979: 129; P.K. Gode, 1940b).
- 186 He calls himself a karanāgraņī in the second verse of the Varņanighanţa (P.K. Gode, 1940b; the MS reads karunāgranī).
- 187 Jvaratimirabhāskara 16.41. P.K. Gode (1940b) refrained from identifying it, but P.V. Sharma (AVI 317) regards it as the present-day Jāwar, near Udaypur; R.P. Bhaṭnāgar (1974a) claims that Yoginīpura was situated at a distance of eighteen kilometers from Udaypur.
- 188 Rasamketakalikā 5.41. N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991: 316) identifies Yoginīpura as Delhi.
- 189 Rasasamketakalikā 5.41.
- 190 Jvaratimirabhāskara 16.41.
- 191 An additional verse of one of the BORI MSS (Nr. 218, dating from A.D. 1482/83) indicates A.D. 1474 as the year of completion. Compare P.K. Gode (1940c). The Rasasamketakalikā was completed in 1531 according to Cat. BHU Nr. 60. D. Jośī (1986: 3) places the work in the fourteenth century.
- 192 As indicated at the end of the work (see P.K. Gode, 1940b). It was composed in 1538 according to Cat. BHU Nr. 60.
- 193 See Cat. BHU Nr. 60. Atrideva (1978): 35.
- 194 P.K. Gode (1931).
- 195 According to D. Wujastyk (personal communication). S.R. Sharma (1977: 157) places the Jvaratimirabhāskara in A.D. 1623, during the reign of Jahāngīr.
- 196 See the last verse of the Varnanighanța and Jvaratimirabhāskara 15.41; the Rasasamketakalikā is silent on this point.
- 197 Kumbha was assassinated, probably in 1469, by his son Udaya, whose younger brother Rājamalla succeeded to the throne (R.C. Majumdar, 1948: 387). Rājamalla reigned from 1474 to 1509 according to PK. Gode (1931: 296).

See on this work also: G.J. Meulenbeld (1983). There is only one edition of the text, based on two MSS (Government Oriental Manuscripts Library, Madras, R No.3b, according to Preface 12 to the ed., by T. Chandrasekharan; the other MS is not specified by S. Visvanatha Sarma in his Introduction, 17): Ārogya Cintāmaņi of Dāmodara Bhaṭṭācārya, edited with introduction by S. Viswanatha Sarma, Madras Government Oriental Series No. LXXV, Madras 1951. The work is called Ārogyacintāmaņi in the first verse and Ārogyacintāmaṇisaṃhitā in the colophons.
- 200 NCC II, 153 and 165; IX, 16. See: Susena.
- 201 The same as Suśruta's yauvanapidakāh, i.e., acne.
- 202 Vāluki is identical with the authority usually called Bhāluki.
- 203 According to S. Viswanatha Sarma (Intr. to the ed., 17), the two MSS on which the edition

- has been based are incomplete, as is indicated by the absence of a mangala at the end. The Tanjore MS ends with chapter thirty, said to conclude the sixth sthāna, called Uttarasthāna.
- 204 Kriyākalpa 69 = A.s.Sū.29.10; kriyākalpa 78 = A.s.Sū.29.9.
- 205 Intr. to the ed., 16.
- 206 Examples are: kaṣāyapariśiṣṭa 205-206 = A.h.Sū.15.24-25; 243-244 = A.h.Sū. 15.43-44; 245 = A.h.Sū.15.21-22.
- 207 The Vīrasiṃhāvaloka (47) quotes Ārogyacintāmaṇi 11.16, but a particular formula, the agnimukhacūrṇa (Vīrasiṃhāvaloka 47-48), said to agree with Dāmodara's views, cannot be traced (Ārogyacintāmaṇi 11.10-11 has a different formula of the agnimukhacūrṇa). The Ārogycintāmaṇi quoted by Vīrasiṃha is regarded as different from Dāmodara's work in the NCC (II, 165).
- 208 Ārog vacintāmani 3.28, 19-20, 15, and 36 = Todara I: 30.44-48.
- 209 Dāmodara follows Vāgbhaṭa, who includes these disorders among the śirorogas (A.h.U. 24; A.s.U.28), whereas they are described among the kṣudrarogas by Mādhava.
- 210 This disorder is also mentioned in the Hārītasamhitā (III.38) and the Rājanighanţu (varga 20). Compare Kālidāsa's Vaidyamanoramā.
- 211 The parisista chapter on kasāyas gives formulae to be used in antravrddhi (249-254).
- 212 The same chapter has formulae for cases of visarpa (361-363).
- 213 This disease is also mentioned in Kālidāsa's Vaidyamanorama.
- 214 Bheşajakalpa 40, pratyauşadhapariśista 7. See Kālidasa's Vaidyamanoramā.
- 215 Kasāyapariśista 371.

- 217 Pratyausadhapariśista 9.
- 218 Kriyākalpa 83. It is also mentioned in the Śārngadharasamhitā (II.9.201); according to Ādhamalla it is a synonym of sallakī; this agrees with the Bhāvaprakāśanighantu (vaṭā-divarga 22) and with the Ārogyacintāmaņi itself, which gives synoyms of sallakī (kriyā-kalpa 83ab).
- 219 A.C. Burnell (1880): 65-66 (Nr. 5,436): father's name Bhatta Vişnu; P.P.S. Sastri (1933): Nr. 11040: idem. Compare NCC IX, 16. S. Viswanatha Sarma (Intr. to the ed., 16) argued that the fact that many of the fruits familiar in North India are nowhere mentioned, makes it likely that the author was not a resident of that part of the country. The subject needs further study.
- 220 A.C. Burnell (1880: 65-66, Nr. 5,436) suggested that Dāmodara was perhaps the father of the author of the Śārnigadharasainhitā, see: Śārnigadharasainhitā.
- 221 S. Viswanatha Sarma, Intr. to the ed., 16.
- 222 One of the MSS (Bodleian d.711) was completed in 1482; see D. Wujastyk (1990): 92.
- 223 P. Hymavathi (1993: 60-62) regards Dāmodara's father as identical with Sarvajñaviṣṇu, the guru of the Mādhava who wrote the Sarvadarśanasamgraha.

- 249 Quotations are introduced by the frequently occurring anyac ca (e.g., 1.103 and 119; 5.2, 30 and 70; 6.119) and by the less frequent granthantare (e.g., 6.43 and 51) or pathantare (4.79).
- 250 See varga 6(rasāh).27.
- 251 E.g., 1.153ab = Aṣṭāṅganighaṇṭu 255cd; 1.159ab = 264ab. See on the relationship between the two works: P.V. Sharma's Intr. to his ed. of the Aṣṭāṅganighaṇṭu.
- 252 Twoverses (6.1 and 5) are also found in the Rasaratnasamuccaya, acc. to P.V. Sharma (AVI 376), but these may as well derive from some other rasasāstra text on account of the compilatory character of the Rasaratnasamuccaya. According to Atrideva (ABI 424), a number of verses on the properties of medicinal substances are taken from the Caraka- and Su-śrutasamhitā.
- 253 It was translated into Tibetan under the title Sman-min sgra-sbyor nes-pa or Bheşajanā-manighantu by Ñi-ma rgyal-méhan in the late thirteenth or early fourteenth century, as recorded in Bu-ston's Chos-hbyun, it was, however, not included in the Tibetan canon and does not appear to have been transmitted (C. Vogel, IL 374). Umeśacandragupta (VŚS, Preface 8) says that the Dhanvantarinighantu is looked upon as the highest authority by the Benares school.
- 254 Ganadravyāvali, varga 1-5 = Sodhalanighantu, Nāmasangraha 9-65.
- 255 The verses common to both works are found in Sodhala's Nāmasamgraha, not in the Gunasamgraha; e.g., Dhanvantarīyanighaniu, gudūcyādi 22 = Nāmasamgraha 107; 23 = 112; 25 = 114; 29 = 118; 61 = 137; 80 = 152; 90 = 157; 95 = 159, etc. Generally speaking, the Sodhalanighaniu enumerates a larger number of synonyms, but distinguishes less varieties than the Dhanvantarīyanighaniu.
- 256 Compare the quotations from the Dravyāvalī.
- 257 Ad A.h.Sū.6.97cd-98ab (= gudūcyādi 274 and 276; quoted as Nighantu); Sū.6.135cd-136ab (= ānmādi 38; quoted as Nighantu); Sū.6.158 (= gudūcyādi 212; a quotation from Dhanvantari).
- 258 Ad Āyurvedābdhisāra 183.
- 259 NCC IX, 228-229.
- 260 Quoted as Dhanvantariin his commentary ad A.h.Sū.6.158cd; quoted as Nighaṇṭu ad A.h. Sū.6.97cd–98ab and 136ab.
- 261 Ad Abhidhānacintāmaṇi 638cd-639ab = miśrakādivarga 45 (quoted as Dhanvantari).
- 262 Ad A.h.Sū.6.129 (= ārnrādi 7; the source is not mentioned).
- 263 See P.V. Sharma (1970): 366. Compare: Indu.
- 264 Dhanvantarīyanighanţu 1.278 is quoted (without naming the source) ad Śabdabhedaprakāśa 3.44; 2.1 ad 4.26 (quoted as Nighanţu); 2.11 ad 4.39 (quoted as Nighanţu), etc. (see: Auguste Kümmel, 1940.) See on Jñānavimalagani: NCC VII, 337.

- Kṣīrasvāmin quotes profusely from the Dhanvantarīyanighantu, without naming his source, citing it as Dhanvantari or Nighantu: ad vanauṣadhivarga 20 (= introductory verse 8, source: Dhanvantari); 21 (= āmrādi 78, source: Dhanvantari; = śatapuṣpādi 102); 23 (= candanādi 80); 24 (= gudūcyādi 221; = āmrādi 14); 26 (= gudūcyādi 29); 27 (= āmrādi 12); 29 (= āmrādi 60); 32 (= gudūcyādi 106), etc.
- 266 C. Vogel, IL 342.
- 267 See A.A. Ramanathan (1971).
- 268 Mallinātha quotes the Dhanvantarīyanighaṇṭu sometimes as Dhanvantari (ad vanauşadhivarga 129-130ab = candanādi 3.43cd; ad 153cd-155ab = gudūcyādi 52cd) or Dravyāvalī (ad 145 = gudūcyādi 66 and 72ab), but more often as Vaidyaka (e.g., ad 117 = gudūcyādi 284; ad 118 = karavīrādi 25; ad 140 = āmrādi 5.36). His quotations from Dravyāvalī and Vaidyaka are sometimes taken from other works.
- 269 C. Vogel, IL 334; referred to as the dhanvantarinirmita nighantu.
- 270 Ad A.h.U.18.21cd-22 (from guḍūcyādi 90); ad 22.71cd-72ab (not found in the Dhanvantarīyanighaṇṭu); ad 22.84–86 (from āmrādi 133); ad 22.93–97 (from candanādi 6); quoted as Dhanvantarinighaṇtu.
- 271 Quoted as Nighantu ad A.h.Sū.6.96 (gudūcyādi 274 and 276 are quoted).
- 272 Quoted profusely without naming the source (see the fifth parisista of the ed. of the Nighantusesa).

- 276 Identified as Jateorrhiza palmata (Lam.) Miers = J. columba Miers = Menispermum columba Roxb. by D.K. Kamat.
- 277 Sodhala does not describe morata. See P.V. Sharma's Intr. to ed. d, 17.
- 278 Identified as Schweinfurthia papilionacea (Linn.) Boiss. = S. sphaerocarpa A.Br. by D.K. Kamat. See on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet (1987). See on this plant WIRM IX, 255–256 and DWH III, 5. Omitted by Sodhala.
- 279 Not identified by D.K. Kamat, nor by P.V. Sharma in ed. d. The same as kaivartamusta (Cyperus platystylis Br.; absent from WIRM; see Hooker VI, 598) according to P.V. Sharma (1997). Also identified as Cyperus amabilis Vahl (absent from WIRM; see Hooker VI, 598) (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 557).
- 280 Identified by D.K. Kamat as Trichosanthes dioica Roxb. and T. anguina Linn. Paţolī has not been identified by P.V. Sharma in ed. d. This plant is also regarded as Stereospermum colais (Dillw.) Mabberley = S. personatum (Hassk.) D. Chatterjee = S.tetragonum A. DC. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1536; Chopra's Glossary; Vanauşadhicandrodaya VI, 40).
- 281 Not identified by D.K. Kamat, nor by P.V. Sharma. Gandhapalāśa is mentioned at A.h.Ci. 10.46 and 14.14 (the same as gandhapattra according to Aruņa), gandhapalāśaka at A.h. Ci.17.24. Gandhapalāśsī (= śaṭī) is identified as Hedychium spicatum Buch.-Ham. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 847).
- 282 Identified as Costus speciosus (Koenig) Sm. (MW); regarded as a synonym of bhārngī (see P.V. Sharma, 1997); omitted by Soḍhala.
- 283 Not identified; different from Sodhala's kapāṭa (Nāmasamgraha 151) according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 284 See D.K. Kamat I, 23.

- 285 See M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 1630; Nadkarni I, Nr. 2484; kāsaghnī = vṛścikālī: Tragia involucrata Linn. Kāsaghnī is also identified as Clerodendrum serratum (Linn.) Moon and Solanum surattense Burm.f. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 444 and 1516).
- 286 See G.J. Meulenbeld (1984c): 50-53.
- 287 I.e., Cannabis sativa Linn.; omitted by Sodhala.
- 288 See T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar (1972). D.K. Kamat regards Taverniera cuneifolia (Roth) Am. = T. nummularia sensu Baker as the sthalaja variety. P.V. Sharma has not identified these plants; they are omitted by Sodhala.
- 289 Identified as Mucuna capitata Wight et Arn. = Carpopogon capitatum Roxb. by D.K. Kamat; see WIRM VI, 443 on this plant. Not identified by P.V. Sharma; omitted by Sodhala.
- 290 It may be Cucumis melo Linn. var. momordica Duthie et Fuller = C. momordica Roxb. according to D.K. Kamat; P.V. Sharma has not identified it. Dangarī is also identified as Cucurbita maxima Duchesne (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 529). A devadangarī is mentioned in Sodhala's Gadanigraha (kāya 30.88) and Śrīkantha's Hitopadeśa (6.64 and 68).
- 291 See D.K. Kamat, 49-53; P.V. Sharma's Intr. to ed. d, 19.
- 292 Identified as Jatropha multifida Linn. by D.K. Kamat. Other identifications are: Clero-dendrum multiflorum Baker (absent from Hooker and WIRM), C. phlomidis Linn.f., and Premna serratif olia Linn. (absent from WIRM; see Hooker IV, 574: a synonym of P. integrifolia Linn.; compare the synonymy of S.S.R. Bennet) (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 439, 443, 1339). Not identified by P.V. Sharına (whose reading is varanı).
- 293 Croton tiglium Linn. according to D.K. Kamat and P.V. Sharma.
- 294 Euphorbia thomsoniana Boiss. according to D.K. Kamat.
- 295 Identified as Argemone mexicana Linn. by D.K. Kamat.
- 296 Unidentified.
- 297 Mrgāksī has been identified as Cucumis pubescens Willd. (Vanausadhicandrodaya II, 10).
- 298 See D.K. Kamat I, 73-76 for their botanical identities. The Dhanvantarī ya and Rā janighantu are the only texts distinguishing five types of balā. See on the group of plants called balā: G.J. Meulenbeld (1984c): 56.
- 299 Addedafter thegudücyādivarga. Identified as Ipomoea obscura (Linn.) Ker-Gawl. by D.K. Kamat.
- 300 A species of Iris according to D.K. Kamat. Also identified as Aconitum heterophyllum Wall. ex Royle and Paris polyphylla Sm. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 37 and 1234). Not identified by P.V. Sharma. See on this plant Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982): 317–320.
- 301 Identified as Gardenia gummifera Linn.f. by D.K. Kamat and many others (see, for example, M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 788, DWH II, 207, and WIRM IV, 109); also identified as G. resinifera Roth = G. lucida Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 791).
- 302 See D.K. Kamat II, 26-30 on the various types of vaméarocanā.
- 303 Identified as Trachyspermum ammi (Linn.) Sprague, Artemisia maritima Linn. and Hyoscyamus niger Linn. by M. Abdul Kareem (1997), D.K. Kamat, and P.V. Sharma.
- 304 Identified as Adenanthera pavonina Linn., Caesalpinia sappan Linn., and Pterocarpus santalinus Linn.f. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 41, 285, 1363).
- 305 Identified as Coscinium fenestratum Colebr. and Crocus sativus Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 498 and 508). Compare AVI 342 on kalambā.
- 306 Identifed as Selinum candollei DC. = S. tenuifiolium Wall. ex DC. by P.V. Sharma.
- 307 Unidentified by P.V. Sharma.

- 308 Damana is identified as Aeschynomene aspera Linn., non Muehl. ex Willd., nec sensu Wall., Artemisia nilagirica (C.B. Clarke) Pamp., A. sieversiana Ehrh. ex Willd., and Jasminum multiflorum (Burm.f.) Andrews (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 50, 168, 171, 956).
- 309 Uccață is usually distinct from guñjă (see T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972). Uccață is identified as Blepharis persica (Burm.f.) Kuntze = B. edulis Pers., B. linariaefolia Pers. (absent from Hooker and WIRM), Phyllanthus fraternus Webster = Ph. niruri sensu Hook.f., and Ph. urinaria Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 243, 244, 1273, 1276). Compare on uccață: Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982): 169–171; T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar (1972).
- 310 See on cāṇakyamūlaka: G. Pandey (1977): 119; P.V. Sharma (1979a): 152.
- 311 Unidentified by P.V. Sharma. Identified as Pogostemon cablin (Blanco) Benth. = P. patchouli Hook.f. by others (Bhāvaprakāśanighantu, karpūrādivarga 127-128, ed. m).
- 312 Identified as Soymida febrifuga A. Juss. by P.V. Sharma and others (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1519).
- 313 Unidentified by P.V. Sharma. Identified as Lobelia pyramidalis Wall. by N.P. Manandhar (1980), as L. nicotianaefolia Heyne (see WIRM VI, 161) in the Śāligrāmanighantu. The former is a synonym of L. nicotianaefolia Roth ex R. et S. according to S.S.R. Bennet (1987).
- 314 Nīladūrvā is regarded as the same as dūrvā (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 554).
- 315 Added to varga 4; omitted in ed. e. Identical with nāgadamanī, Pupalia lappacea (Linn.) Juss., according to the Bhāvaprakāśanighantu (gudūcyādi 299, ed. m.). Balāmotā is also identified as Sesbania sesban (Linn.) Merrill subsp. sesban var. sesban and as S. sesban (Linn.) Merrill var. picta (Cav.) Santapau (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1473 and 1475); compare S.S.R. Bennet (1987).
- 316 Identified as Citrus maxima (Burm.) Merrill = C. decumana Linn. by P.V. Sharma.
- 317 Identified as Diploknema butyracea H.J. Lam. = Madhuca butyracea Macbride by P.V. Sharma (1979a: 49). Jalamadhūka is also identified as Madhuca longifolia (Koenig) Macbride (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1055).
- 318 Unidentified by P.V. Sharma.; identified as Caryota urens Linn. by others (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 338; WIRM II, 90).
- 319 See T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar (1972).
- 320 Added to varga five; omitted in ed. d. Various species of Pandanus are regarded as ketakī (see V.V. Sivarajan and I. Balachandran, 1994: 242–244).
- 321 Added to varga five; omitted in ed. d.
- 322 Sorghum or greatmillet; also identified as Thysanolaena maxima (Roxb.) Kuntze and Th. procera Mez. (absent from Hooker and Wirm) (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1618 and 1619). Unidentified by P.V. Sharma. See P.K. Gode (1944f); U.P. Thapliyal (1979): 94
- 323 Identified as Trigonella foenum-graecum Linn. by P.V. Sharma.
- 324 Unidentified by P.V. Sharma; identified by others (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1084; Chopra's Glossary; Nadkarni I, Nrs. 1577 and 2514) as Melilotus indica All. = M. parvifiora Desf.

- 331 CBORI XVI, I, Nr. 105; the author is called Mahendra, son of Vaidya Kṛṣṛa, in MS Nr. 107; the name of the Gaṇadravyāvali is Dravyaguṇaratnamālikā in MS Nr. 106. A Jodhpur MS (Cat. Rajasthan Oriental Research Institute, Jodhpur Collection, Nr. 4775 E = 9510; see P.M. Jinavijaya, 1965: II B, 224-225), completed in A.D. 1652/53, contains a Dravyāvalīsamuccaya by Mahendra Jaina, son of Kṛṣṇa Vaidya (JAI 89). A Dravyāvalīnighaṇṭu in 900 verses by Munimahendra is also recorded (V.P. P. Śāstrī, 1984: 289).
- 332 Compare NCC IX, 184: anonymous Dravyāvalī(nighanṭu); Check-list Nrs. 274–278; STMI 666; Cat. BHU Nr. 75. The author refers to his work as Dravyāvali several times in the introductory verses. P.V. Sharma (Intr. to ed. d, 7) claims that the Dravyāvali continued to exist in its original form. He located two MSS of this version; K. Raghunathan and S.D. Dube (1992: 395 and 397) mention even three MSS. The Chandra Shum Shere collection of the Bodleian library at Oxford contains a MS, shelved at d.713(3), of a Dravyāvalī that describes 373 drugs (see D. Wujastyk 1990: 95).
- 333 The chief exponent of this view is P.V. Sharma (see P.V. Sharma, 1970; AVI 375–378; P.V. Sharma, 1976a: 101–107; P.V. Sharma's Intr. to D.K. Kamat, 1979; P.V. Sharma's Intr. to ed. d). Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982: 614–615) regarded the Dhanvantarī yanighanţu as a mixture of a Dravyāvalī and some other work that may have been the original Dhanvantarinighantu.
- 334 See P.V. Sharma's Intr. to ed. d, 8-9.
- 335 This is especially striking when the Sodhalanighantu is compared with the Dhanvantarīyanighantu.
- 336 These quotations are not from the Dhanvantarīyanighaṇṭu or a text resembling it, but from a therapeutic treatise.

- 341 C. Vogel, IL 314. P.V. Sharma assigns it to the eleventh century (Intr. to ed. d, 8).
- 342 P.V. Sharma, Intr. to ed. d, 8-9.
- 343 The seventh varga, however, contains later material. Vargas 1-6 are followed by a kind of supplement (vargetarāṇi).
- 344 P.V. Sharma dates the Dravyāvali to the tenth, and the Dhanvantarīyanighanṭu to the thirteenth century. The Dhanvantarīyanighantu is assigned to the fourth or fifth century

- by G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 453), the twelfth century by Atrideva (ABI 424), the twelfth-thirteenth century by V. Śukla (I, 217), and the thirteenth century at the earliest by BāpālāI Vaidya (1982: 615).

- 349 The NCC distinguishes three jyotişa authors of this name: (a) author of the Arghakāṇṭa and the Saṇvatsaraphala (NCC I, 377–378; IX, 75); (b) author of the Riṣṭasamuccaya (NCC IX, 75; (c) author of the Kālajñāna (NCC IV, 19; IX, 75). The Durgadeva who wrote the Kālajñāna may be identical with the author of the Riṣṭasamuccaya, because some MSS of the latter work are recorded under the title of Kālajñāna (see Gopani's Introduction to the ed. of the Riṣṭasamuccaya, 1). According to D. Pingree (CESS A 3, 113–114) the author of the Saṇvatsaraphala is different from the Durgadeva who wrote the Riṣṭasamuccaya and Arghakāṇḍa.
- 350 H.V. Velankar (1944): 332. The Ristasamuccaya was critically edited, with an exhaustive introduction, English translation, Sanskrit chāyā, notes, appendix, indices, etc., by A.S. Gopani, Singhi Jain Series 21, Bombay 1945; reviewed in ABORI 27, 1946 and PO 11, 1946, 72.

(see also P.K. Gode, 1945d), Kālikāpurāṇa, Someśvara's Mānasollāsa, Govindadāsa's Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī, Nāgarasarvasva, Mādhava's Āyurvedaprakāśa, Amarakoṣa, and Nityanātha's Rasaratnākara. See also Vyas's Introduction, 32–35, on perfumery in the Śārngadharapaddhati; A.M. Shastri (1969): 237–244; Satyaprakāś (1960): 802–822. Gandhayukti is moreover a subject dealt with in the Haramekhalā and in the chapters on vātavyādhi of a number of texts, for example Toḍara's Āyurvedasaukhya.

The Gandhasāra was studied by P.K. Gode, who published a number of articles on this text and on the history of Indian cosmetics and perfumery in general: P.K. Gode (1943f); (1945a); (1945b); (1945c); (1945d); (1946h); (1946k); (1947d); (1949b); (1950c); (1951c); (1952b).

The title of the treatise is mentioned at 1.3 and 51.120.

References are to page numbers, followed by the number of the verse.

- 362 As mentioned by the author himself (51.119), who refers to earlier works (granthāntara; 7.77 and 9.12) and authorities on the subject (1.3; 8.87; 41.4).

- 374 See on bodha and vedha: A.M. Shastri (1991): 213–215. The Agnipurāna enumerates eight basic processes: śauca, ācamana, virecana, bhāvana, pāka, bodhana, dhūpana, and vāsana (P.K. Gode, 1945d: 69). The Viṣṇudharmottarapurāṇa (2.64) also has a number of eight: śodhana, vāsana, virecana, bhāvanā, pāka, bodhana, dhūpana, and vāsana again according to P.K. Gode (1946k: 74–75), while J.J. Meyer (1937: I, 24–25) enumerates them as follows: śodhana, vamana, virecana, bhāvanā, pāka, bodhana, vāsana, and vāsanā. Compare the gandhayukti of the Śivatattvaratnākara.
- 375 See on these techniques R.T. Vyas's Intr., 68-69.
- 376 Some of the names employed in the Gandhasāra are also found in the corresponding parts of the Haramekhalā, a text that escaped the attention of the editor of the Gandhasāra.
- 377 The botanical equivalents and interpretations given by the editor should be used with much caution. The interpretation of indumadārka (3.23) as meaning the essence (arka) of camphor is very doubtful; the meaning may as well be: indu, mada, and arka.
- 378 Identified as Ocimum americanum Linn. Compare Dalharia ad Su.Ci.17.14: ajā = ajagandhā.
- 379 Identified by the editor as Eulophia campestris Wall. Compare MW; PW.
- 380 Identified as Phyllanthus rhamnoides, which is absent from WIRM. See Hooker V, 330: Breynia rhamnoides Muell.-Arg. = Phyllanthus rhamnoides Willd.; V, 335: Sauropus quadrangularis Muell.-Arg. = Phyllanthus rhamnoides Roxb. Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 270 (and Nr. 1450): ārunī is identified as Breynia vitis-idaea (Burm.f.)

- Fischer, which is now the valid name of the plant formerly called B. rhamnoides (Willd.) Muell.-Arg. (see S.S.R. Bennet, 1987).
- 381 Not identified by the editor.
- 382 Identified as Pentapetes phoenicea Linn.
- 383 Identified as myrrh, a substance derived from Commiphora myrrha (Nees) Engl. var. mollis Engl. (see D. Martinetz, K. Lohs and J. Janzen, 1989; WIRM II, 313). Barbara is found at A.h.U.3.59. Compare DWH III, 85-86; WIRM VII, 81.
- 384 Identified as Santalum album Linn.
- 385 Identified as Eclipta prostrata, which is absent from WIRM, but identical with E. alba (Linn.) Hassk. (see S.S.R. Bennet, 1987; Chopra's Glossary).
- 386 Identified as Glycine max Merrill = Dolichos so ja Linn.
- 387 Identified as Michelia champaca Linn, Cala is also identified as Altingia excelsa Noronha (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 102). 388 Identified as Angelica glauca Edgew.
- 389 Identified as Gaultheria fragrantissima Wall. Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 795 (carmapattra).
- 390 Unidentified.
- 391 Identified as Vateria indica Linn.
- 392 Unidentified. The same as murā (commentary ad Haramekhalā 5.80).
- 393 Probably the same as danava, Unidentified.
- 394 Unidentified.
- 395 Unidentified. Compare Śivadāsasena ad Cakradatta, ksudraroga 4: dhūnaka = sarja.
- 396 Unidentified.
- 397 Unidentified
- 398 Identified as Borassus flabellifer Linn. Also identified as Murraya paniculata (Linn.) Jack (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1141).
- 399 Unidentified.
- 400 Unidentified.
- 401 The name guru is applied to Ficus religiosa Linn, and Mucuna prurita Hook. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 753 and 1138).
- 402 Identified as Clerodendrum infortunatum Linn (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 442) and regarded as a synonym of haridrā and dūrvā (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 536 and 554).
- 403 Unidentified.
- 404 Identified as Rubia cordifolia Linn.
- 405 Identified as Jasminum auriculatum Vahl (compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 941).
- 406 Identified as Pentatropis capensis (Linn.f.) Bullock (compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1249) and P. spiralis Decne. = P. cynanchoides R.Br. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1250; compare S.S.R. Bennet, 1987 and WIRM VII, 308 on the nomenclature).
- 407 Identified as Meconopsis aculeata Royle, but variously identified by others.
- 408 Identified as Agave americana Linn.
- 409 Identified as Colocasia esculenta (Linn.) Schott.
- 410 Identified as Momordica cochinchinensis (Spreng.) = Muricia cochinchinensis (Spreng.) Lour.
- 411 Unidentified.
- 412 Identified as Piper wallichii Hand.-Mazz. = P. aurantiacum Wall, ex DC. Kauntī is also identified as Corchorus trilocularis Linn. and Vitex agnus-castus Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 490 and 1710).

- 413 Unidentified
- 414 A substitute for kastūrī. Unidentified.
- 415 Identified as Punica granatum Linn.
- 416 Identified as Kydia calycina Roxb.
- 417 Possibly the same as kola, identified as Solanum surattense Burm.f. = S. xanthocarpum Schrad, et Wendl.
- 418 Identified as Elettaria cardamomum Maton.
- 419 Identified as Commelina benghalensis Linn.
- 420 Identified as Taxus baccata Linn.
- 421 Unidentified. It may be Pavonia odorata Willd. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1243).
- 422 The same as kauntī.
- 423 Unidentified. A synonym of vrddhi (Indu ad A.s.Ci.19.10).
- 424 Unidentified.
- 425 Identified as Syzygium aromaticum (Linn.) Merrill et Perry; the same as lavanga.
- 426 The same as lava.
- 427 Identified as Cicca acida (Linn.) Merrill.
- 428 Identified as Vigna mungo (Linn.) Hepper = Phaseolus mungo Linn. Mada may also be an abbreviation of mrgamada.
- 429 I.e., musk.
- 430 The same as mrgamada.
- 431 Probably an abbreviation of mrganābhi.
- 432 Identified as Medicago sativa Linn.
- 433 Unidentified by the editor. Identified by others as Lobelia nicotianaefolia Roth ex Schult. and Onosma hispidum Wall. ex D. Don (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1033 and 1197; see WIRM VII, 95–96 on the nomenclature of Onosma).
- 434 Unidentified.
- 435 Unidentified.
- 436 Unidentified. Also mentioned in the Haramekhalā (1.5; 5.271).
- 437 Unidentified.
- 438 Unidentified by the editor. Identified by others as Anisomeles malabarica R.Br. ex Sims (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 137).
- 439 Unidentified.
- 440 Identified as Jasminum sambac (Linn.) Ait. Also identified as J. angustifolium (Linn.) Willd. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 939; compare on the nomenclature: WIRM V, 280).
- 441 Unidentified. Rāma is one of the names of aśoka and kuṣṭha (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1445 and 1453). Rāma is also found in the Āyurvedasaukhya (Ţodara V: 11.906).
- 442 Unidentified. The same as usīra according to the commentary on the Haramekhalā (2.101).
- 443 Identified as Polianthes tuberosa Linn.
- 444 Identified as Ficus religiosa Linn. Ravi is also one of the synonyms of arka.
- 445 Unidentified.
- 446 Identified as Prosopis cineraria Druce.
- 447 Identified as Oryza sativa Linn., but it also one of the names of civet.
- 448 Unidentified.

- 449 Unidentified.
- 450 Unidentified by the editor. Regarded as Echinops echinatus Roxb. by others (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 652).
- 451 Unidentified.
- 452 Possibly the same as barbaraka.
- 453 Identified as Taxus baccata Linn.
- 454 Unidentified.

Kashikar, 1977: 165), Kaiideva (Cat. IO Nr. 2748), and Kaideva (Bodleian d.713(2); see D. Wujastyk, 1990: 103).
- 565 NCC V, 42-43; X, 47. The Nāmaratnākara, which has not been preserved, was probably a synonymic lexicon. It was written before the Pathyāpathyavibodhaka, which appears to be an expanded version of it, adding the qualities and actions to the names of the medicinal substances. See the introductory verses of the Kaiyadevanighantu. Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982: 620-621) claimed, erroneously, that Nāmaratnākara was another name of Kaiyadeva, and Nāmasāgara the name of his earlier lexicon.
- 566 The title of the work is Pathyāpathyavibodhaka (see the introductory verses). A Nāmasāgara by Keyadeva (NCC X, 49), as well as a Pathyāpathyanighantu by Devapandita (NCC IX, 112; XI, 95), may be identical with the Kaiyadevanighantu. The MS of a Sannipātakalikā by Kaideva (NCC: not recorded), forming part of the Chandra Shum Shere collection of the Bodleian library at Oxford, begins in exactly the same way as the Kaiyadevanighantu; this MS is shelved at d.713(2): see D. Wujastyk (1990): 103.

- 575 According to Aufrecht (CC I, 319; see also NCC XI, 95, and C. Vogel, IL 331), a Pathyā-pathyanighantu by Devapandita (probably Keyadeva Pandita) is quoted by Jñānavimalagani, pupil of Bhānumeru, who wrote the Sabdabhedaprakāśatīkā, a commentary on Maheśwara's Sabdabhedaprakāśa, in 1598 (NCC VII, 337; C. Vogel, IL 331). Jñānavimalagani refers to an unidentified Pathyāpathyābhidhasannighantu as one of his chief authorities in one of the introductory verses, but does not quote the work (see Maheśvara's Śabdabhedaprakāśa with the commentary of Jñānavimalagani, ed. by Auguste Kümmel, Leipzig 1940).

- 591 Ammannia baccifera Linn. (DGV V, 341). Mentioned at A.h.U.1.44.
- 592 Unidentified.
- 593 Unidentified.
- 594 Of uncertain identity; an orange according to MW. Mentioned in the Madanapālanighanţu (6.65).

- 595 Leea macrophylla Roxb.; P.V. Sharma calls it L. macrophylla Horn. Also identified as Alocasia macrorrhiza (Linn.) G. Don (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 85).
- 596 Prunus mahaleb Linn. (AVI 349); compare Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982): 112. Mentioned at Ca. Sū.25.40; T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar (1972) regard it as identical with priyangu, in agreement with Cakra's comment.
- 597 See *B.N. Singh (1985); L.B. Singh, B.N. Singh, B.K. Mishra (1991).
- 598 Identified as Dioscorea hispida Dennst. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 616). Mentioned at Su.Sū.46.298; a large type of kāsthāluka (see Dalhana).
- 599 Identified as Aristolochia indica Linn. (P.V. Sharma; compare M. Abdul Kareem 1997, Nr. 161; see also V.V. Sivarajan and I. Balachandran, 1994: 185-187) and Diplocyclos palmatus (Linn.) Jaffrey (absent from WIRM) (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 629).
- 600 A species of Amaranthus (P.V. Sharma).
- 601 Identified as Desmotrichum fimbriatum Blume (see WIRM III, 43-44) by P.C. Pant et al. (1990). The valid name of this plant is probably Flickingeria fimbriata (Blume) Hawkes (see S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) or F. nodosa (Dalz.) Seiden f. (see V.V. Sivarajan and I. Balachandran, 1994: 196).
- 602 Unidentified.
- 603 Cunavalia gladiata (Jacq.) DC. (P.V. Sharma). Compare T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar (1972). Kākāndolā is already found in the Carakasamhitā.
- 604 Caesalpinia crista Linn. (P.V. Sharma). Also identified as C. bonduc (Linn.) Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 281).
- 605 Hesperethusa crenulata (Roxb.) M. Roem. = Limonia crenulata Roxb. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 606 Pergularia daemia (Forsk.) Chiov. = P. extensa N.E.Br. (P.V. Sharma).
- 607 Ocimum kilimandscharicum Guerke (C.R. Karnick, 1977).
- 608 A species of Dioscorea (P.V. Sharma). Identified as Dioscorea alata Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 611).
- 609 Probably a species of Randia; Tamilnadia uliginosa (Retz.) Tirvengandum ex Sastre = Randia uliginosa DC. is one of the plants regarded as pindīta (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1378 and p.244). Mentioned at Ca.Ci.26.272.
- 610 Different from pāṭhā according to Kaiyadeva; kucelā is a variety of pāṭhā in the Caraka-saṃhitā (Sū.27.95).
- 611 Cassia absus Linn. (P.V. Sharma; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 343). Mentioned at Su.Ci.16.26, where Dalhana regards it as a synonym of cakşuşyā (= Cassia absus Linn.).
- 612 A Corchorus species (P.V. Sharma). Mentioned in the Astāngahrdayasamhitā.
- 613 Identified as Dalbergia sissoides Grah. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 571).
- 614 Sometimes identified as Digera muricata (Linn.) Mart. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 605; P.V. Sharma, 1979a: 107; T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972, s.v. kathiñjara). Mentioned at Su.Sū.46.274(see Dalhana'sremarks) and A.h.Sū.6.93 (the same as tāmramūlaka according to Aruna).
- 615 Carthamus tinctorius Linn. (P.V. Sharma). Mentioned at A.h.Sū.6.93, where Aruna and Hemādri regard it as identical with gugguluśāka.
- 616 Identified as Luvunga scandens (Roxb.) Buch.-Ham. ex Wight, Cicca acida (Linn.) Merrill, Annona reticulata Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 138, 396, 1049; AVI 362; Chopra's Glossary; U.Ch. Dutt, 1922; P.V. Sharma, 1979a: 42–48; WIRM II, 153).
- 617 Citrus maxima (Burm.) Merrill = C. decumana Linn. (P.V. Sharma).

- 618 Amaranthus caudatus Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 619 Unidentified. Mahāpin, ∮ī is identified as Gardenia turgida Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 792).
- 620 Unidentified.
- 621 A Luffa species (P.V. Sharma) or Cassia alata Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Also identified as Cassia senna Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 351).
- 622 Pterospermum acerifolium Willd. (P.V. Sharma). Mentioned in the Suśrutasamhitā.
- 623 Eleusine coracana Gaertn. (P.V. Sharma; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 667).
- 624 Identified as Morus australis Poir. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1136). The same as vidārī (Aṣṭāṅganighaṇṭu 4). Suṣavī is mentioned, for example, at Su.Sū.38.6 (see Dalhaṇa's remarks); it is identified as Carum carvi Linn., Momordica charantia Linn., and Nigella sativa Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 336, 1119, 1168).
- 625 Unidentified.
- 626 Unidentified.
- 627 Identified as Fumaria indica Pugsley (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 776; compare S.S.R. Bennet, 1987 and WIRM IV, 68) and Ixora paniculata (Vanauşadhicandrodaya VI, 44; see on this name Hooker III, 149). Compare V.V. Sivarajan and I. Balachandran (1994: 354–357; parpataka).
- 628 Adina cordifolia (Roxb.) Hook.f. ex Brandis (P.V. Sharına). Also identified as Berberis asiatica Roxb. ex DC., non Griff., Cedrus deodara (Roxb. ex Lamb.) G. Don, Coscinium fenestratum Colebr., and Pinus roxburghii Sarg. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 230, 362, 498, 1287; compare WIRM II, rev. ed., 117, III, 400).
- 629 Cascabela thevetia (Linn.) Lippold = Thevetia peruviana (Pers.) Merrill = Th. neriifolia Juss. ex Steud. (P.V. Sharına). See on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet (1987); compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 339.
- 630 Unidentified.
- 631 Dolichos lablab Linn. (P.V. Sharma).
- 632 Lagenaria siceraria (Mol.) Standl. = L. vulgaris Ser. (P.V. Sharma).
- 633 Unidentified.
- 634 A species of Dioscorea (P.V. Sharma). Identified as Dioscorea alata Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 611).
- 635 Identified as Alangium salviifolium (Linn.f.) Wang. and several species of Ferula (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 65, 726–729, 732).
- 636 A Dioscorea species (P.V. Sharma). Identified as Dioscorea belophylla Voigt ex Haines (see M. Abdul Kareem, Nr. 612; compare S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) and Pachyrrhizus erosus (Linn.) Urban = P. angulatus Rich. ex DC. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1219; compare WIRM VII, 208). Mentioned at Su.Sū.46.298.
- 637 Unidentified.
- 638 Often identified as Ophiorrhiza mungos Linn. (Chopra's Glossary; Nadkarni I, Nr. 1760; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Mentioned at Su.Ka.6.22 (see Dalhana's remark).
- 639 Identified as Bixa orellana Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 242; P.V. Sharma) and Euonymus tingens Wall. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 697).
- 640 Identified as Dalbergia volubilis Roxb. and Trichodesma zeylanicum R.Br. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 573 and 1638).
- 641 Unidentified.
- 642 A Dioscorea species (P.V. Sharına).

- 643 Unidentified.
- 644 Țailka, mentioned in Caraka- and Suśrutasaṃhitā, is often identified as Pyrus communis Linn. (AVI 360; P.V. Sharma, 1979a: 70).
- 645 Hydnocarpus laurifolia (Dennst.) Sleumer = H. wightiana Blume (P.V. Sharma). Mentioned at Su.Sū.45.122.
- 646 Identified as Prunus armeniaca Linn., the apricot (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1345; P.V. Sharma, 1979a: 76-77).
- 647 Variously identified: Amerphophallus paeoniif olius (Dennst.) Nicolson = A. campanulatus Blume ex Decne. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 119; compare S.S.R. Bennet, 1987), A. sylvaticus (Roxb.) Kunth = Synantherias sylvatica Schott (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 120a; Chopra's Glossary; DWH III, 547; Nadkarni I, Nr. 2421), Crinum defixum Ker-Gawl. (L.S. Bhatnagar et al., 1973: 80), Sauromatum venosum (Ait.) Kunth (G. Pandey, 1994: 81-84), Urginea indica Kunth (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 642 and p.244; P.V. Sharma, 1979a: 134-135).
- 648 Unidentified.
- 649 Unidentified.
- 650 Pistia stratiotes Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1306; P.V. Sharma).
- 651 Unidentified. Compare on special features: AVI 391-392.
- 652 Undoubtedly the same as yauvanapidakā, i.e., acne vulgaris.
- 653 A variant of this name is Śārnga (AVI 390; bhūmikā to ed. d, 6). P.V. Sharma is of the opinion that this Śāranga is identical with the person of the same name who wrote the Virasimhāvaloka for king Vīrasimha (bhūmikā to ed. d, 6).
- 654 The Bhāradvājagotra had a relatively low status according to R. Thapar (1984: 85, n.78).
- 655 AVI 391 and DGV IV, 290: P.V. Sharma bases his statement that Kaiyadeva was a resident of Gujarāt on the use of the term andolikā (vihāravarga 344), i.e., a swing, especially popular in that region, and the mention of medicinal plants like tilaparnī (1.653-655), vellantara (1.851cd-853ab), etc. According to Surendra Mohan (the editor of *ed. b), some of the local names of plants given by Kaiyadeva come very near to their Gujarātī names (see Bāpālāl Vaidya, 1982: 621).
- 656 Compare DGV IV, 289-290.
- 657 *Sarasvatībhavan, Vārānasī, Nr. 1/157/87063 (bhūmikā to ed. d, 8).
- 658 BHU Nr. B 2092 = Cat. BHU Nr. 87 (AVI 392, n. 1; bhūmikā to ed. d, 5).
- 659 Usually identified as Thevetia peruviana (Pers.) Schum. = Th. neriifolia Juss. (Chopra's Glossary); Thevetia peruviana (Pers.) Merrill = Th. neriifolia Juss. ex. Steud. (WIRM X, 225). The plant is a native of America and the West Indies (Watt VI, 47), but is widely cultivated in India for ornament. Its provenance indicates that Thevetia peruviana cannot be the pītakaravīra of the Kaiyadeva- and Rājanighaṇṭu.

- 684 Identified as Ocimum americanum Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1184). MW: Ocimum adscendens; see Hooker IV, 609 and 614 on O. adscendens Willd. and O. adscendens Wight.
- 685 Unidentified.
- 686 Variously identified. See: M. Abdul Kareem (1997); Bāpālāl (1982): 226 and 311–315; Chopra's Glossary; DWHII, 244 and 308; R.K. Issar (1974); G. Pandey (1994): 90–98; PV. Sharma (1985a): 352, (1997).
- 687 Unidentified.
- 688 Usually identified as Acalypha indica Linn. (DWH III, 291; G. Pandey, 1994: 115–132; P.V. Sharma. 1997; WIRM I. 20).
- 689 Identified as Hesperethusa crenulata (Roxb.) M.Roem. = Limonia crenulata Roxb. by P.V. Sharma (1979a: 95 and 101), (1997). It is also mentioned in the Kalyāṇakāraka (4.32).
- 690 The same as Suśruta's karavī (Su.Sū.46.230) according to P.V. Sharma (1979a: 157) or identical with hingupattrī (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Also identified as Gynandropsis gynandra (Linn.) Bria. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 835).
- 691 Identified as Strychnos nux-vomica Linn, by P.V. Sharma (DGV V, 319-320), (1997).
- 692 Coleus amboinicus Lour. = C. aromaticus Benth. (V.V. Sivara jan and Indu Balachandran, 1986: 250). The same as sārivā (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 693 Unidentified.
- 694 Unidentified.
- 695 According to Sukhadeva it is called pāvuṭṭa in Malayāṭam; see M. Gundert, 1970: II, 653: pāvaṭṭa, PavettaindicaLinn. See S.S.R. Bennet (1987) and WIRM VII, 282 on the nomenclature of this plant.
- 696 Unidentified.
- 697 Unidentified.
- 698 Identified as Morinda pubescens Sm. = M. coreia Buch.-Ham. = M. tinctoria Roxb. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1131; P.V. Sharma, 1997; see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987), as several species of Pavetta, and as Tarenna alpestris (Wight) Balakr. = Stylocoryne lucens (Hook.f.) Gamble (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1240–1242 and 1589a).
- 699 Unidentified.
- 700 Rhododendron arboreum Sm. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 701 Allium ascalonicum Linn. (MW) or A. sativum Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 82).
- 702 A variety of garlic.
- 703 Unidentified.
- 704 It is called samudrapaccā in Malayāļam acc. to Sukhadeva (of uncertain identity acc. to M. Gundert, 1970: II, 1039).
- 705 Sukhadeva says that it is called cīra in Malayāļam; this is the name of a series of different plants (M. Gundert, 1970: I, 369).
- 706 The same as pippalī according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 707 Tribulus terrestris Linn. = T. lanuginosus Linn. or a similar plant (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1636; MW; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 708 A kind of white basil, a species of Ocimum, according to MW.
- 709 Unidentified.
- 710 Cassia sophera Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 352).

- 711 Unidentified.
- 712 Called ekanāyaka in Malayāļam acc. to Sukhadeva (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1425; Suranad Kunjan Pillai, 1970: II, 1132: Salacia reticulata Wight). WIRM IX, 169: the Sanskrit name of S. reticulata is also ekanāyaka. Vairī is the same as mehāri according to P.V. Sharına (1997).
- 713 Called vātankollī in Malayāļam acc. to Sukhadeva (see M. Gundert, 1970: II, 931: Justicia gendarussa Burm.f. = Gendarussa vulgaris Nees).
- 714 The names yakṣadṛś, yakṣākṣī, yakṣalocana, and yakṣametra may be synonyms of kuberā-kṣī (Kubera is the lord of the yakṣas), identified as Caesalpinia bonduc (Linn.) Roxb. and Stereospermum chelonoides (Linn.f.) DC. = S. suaveolens (Roxb.) DC. (see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 281 and 1535).
- 715 See also AVI 301 on some special features of Kālidāsa's therapy.
- 716 NCC IV, 70; IX, 298. The title of this work is found in the colophon, but the name of the author is nowhere mentioned. See for the editions those of the Vaidyamanoramā. A Dhārākalpa by an anonymous author has been *edited, with a Hindī translation, by Pan•it Jagannātha Prasāda Śukla, Sudhānidhi Granthāvali 1, Prayāg 1924/25.
- 717 See on dhārākalpa: H.Ś. Kasture (1970): 648-653; N.S. M●oss (1983): 106-114; R.H. Singh (1992): 137-144.
- 718 Its identity is unknown. Dolāphala is a synonym of madhūka, identified as Madhuca indica J.F. GmeI. and M. longifolia (Koenig) Mach. (see WIRM VI, 207 on the nomenclature) (Aştānganighantu 26; Şadrasanighantu 1.23).
- 719 Some are of the opinion that the medical author Kālidāsa is the same as the famous poet of the same name (see, e.g., J. Indu, 1981). See about apocryphal works attributed to the poet Kālidāsa: S.C. Banerji (1975).
- 720 P.V. Sharma (AVI 301) assigns him to the thirteenth century or somewhat later on account of the presence of diseases like somaroga and śayyāmūtra, drugs like opium and kāraskara, and the Tantric elements in the therapy.
- 721 NCC: an author called Kalyāṇadāsa is not recorded; the NCC ascribes the Śabdaratnadīpa (III, 256), as well as a Bālacikitsī (III, 256), to Kalyāṇamalla; compare Kalyāṇa's Bālatantra. CC I, 106 and 491: Ratnapradīpanighaṇṭu by Kāśīrāma, son of Mathurādāsa; II, 194 and 228: Śabdaratnapradīpa by Kāśīrāma, son of Mathurādāsa. C. Vogel, IL 375–376:
 the work is often, but wrongly, claimed as written by Kāśīrāma at the instance of Kalyāṇadāsa. Compare Kāśīrāma, the author of a commentary on the Śārngadharasaṃlnitā.
- 722 NCC III, 342; IX, 76.
- 723 NCC: not recorded. ABI 317: *published by the Venkaţeśvar Press. Vrddhatrayī 466: Kedārabhatṭa also wrote the Vṛttaratnākara and lived in the twelfth or thirteenth century. Compare Krishnamachariar (1989): 908: Kedārabhatṭa, author of the Vṛttaratnākara, is earlier than the fifteenth century.

P.V. Sharma used three MSS and the quotations from the Hrdayadīpaka in the Śivakoṣa (see Intr. to the Hrdayadīpaka, 13-14) in establishing his text of the Hrdayadīpaka, and four MSS (CBORI XVI, 1, Nr 312, Cat. Madras Nr. 13379, Cat. BHU Nr. 250, *MS Nr. 44941 of Sarasvatī Bhavan, Vārāṇasī), as well as ed. a, in constituting his text of the Siddhamantra together with its commentary (see Intr. to his ed. of the Siddhamantra, 5). This ed. is accompanied by valuable introductions and has moreover an Index of the drugs of the Hrdayadīpaka, an Index of synonyms in the Hrdayadīpaka, an Index of drugs in the Siddhamantra, and three Appendices: I, A classified index of vegetable drugs according to their effect on doṣaṣ; II, Vegetable drugs described in the commentary; III, Food and drinks mentioned in the text and described in the commentary.

Bhattacharyya, 1991: 118, N. Dey, 1979: 55), but it is preferable to keep the reading Vedapura since it is probably identical with Vedapada where Vopadeva, Keśava's son, resided (see: Vopadeva).

- 840 See Cat. BHU Nrs. 104 and 122; P.V. Sharma's Foreword to Bhagwan Dash (1994).
- 841 Reconstructed from a number of MSS in Cat. IO Nr. 2745. The printed texthas a shorter, incomplete version. The genealogy is also found in the introduction of the Smṛtikaumudī, said to be composed by Madanapāla (CC I, 425 and 746; II, 97 and 179; III, 154; Kane I.2, 798; H.A. Mehendale and A.D. Pusalker, 1980: 478). Compare Kane I.2, 200, n.1215.
- 842 Omitted by Aufrecht in his CC (I, 425), where Madanapāla is said to be a son of Hariścandra; the same omission is found in a MS of the Tithinirṇayasāra, ascribed to Madanapāla (see P.K. Gode, 1944–45). The name of Madanapāla's father is Sahāraṇa, a Prakrit equivalent of Sādhāraṇa, in the Sūryasiddhāntaviveka, attributed to Madanapāla (CC: not recorded; see Kane I.2, 801 and STMI 328). Compare on Madanapāla's genealogy the introductory verses of the Mahārṇava and Madanapārijāta.
- 843 Bharanapāla in the printed text and in AVI (389); he is called Laharapāla in the Mahānaava. Bhagwan Dash (1994: Preface VII), for some unknown reason, refers to him as Dharmapāla.
- 844 See: Śiśuraksāratna.
- 845 See: Mahārņava.

- 846 Cat. IO Nr. 2720.
- 847 P.K. Gode (1944-45). Compare P.V. Sharma's Foreword to Bhagwan Dash (1994), where Ratnapāla is called Ratnapati.
- 848 The name is spelt in different ways: Ţāka (Kane I.2, 800; C. Vogel, IL 376), Ţāka or Ṭākā (Cat. IO Nr. 2745), Ṭākā (P.K. Gode, 1944–45), Ṭīka or Ṭīkā (printed text), Ṭīkā (AVI 389).
- 849 The printed text has Kāchā, with a variant Kāthā.
- 850 According to introductory verse 5 of the Madanapārijāta (P.K. Gode, 1944–45). C. Vogel, IL 376: the modern Kathah in the Meerut District. V. Śukla I, 219: Kāṭhgodām in U.P. See on other identifications: Bhagwan Dash (1994): Preface VII.
- 851 He is called thus in the stanza at the end of each varga. The colophon of the MS of the Śiśurakṣāratna by his son Pṛthvīmalla (Cat. IO Nr. 2720) describes him as śrīpaṇḍitapārijātakattāramalletyādiviruda.
- 852 C. Vogel, IL 376. Compare ABI 427; CESS A 3, 350-351; Kane I.2, 802-804; R. Roth (1876). Bhagwan Dash (1994) gives the year 1374.
- 853 See on this work: DGV IV, 282-283; P.V. Sharma (1971c): 99-106, and his edition of the work: Mādhavadravyagunah (Bhāvasvabhāvavādah); sampādakah Dr. Priyavrataśarmā, Vidyābhavan Āyurveda Granthamālā 72, Vārānasī 1972. This ed. is based on three MSS; variants are recorded in footnotes and at the end of the work. P.V. Sharma, to whom it was unknown that four MSS of the Bhāvasvabhāva had already been described (see G.J. Meulenbeld, 1974: 14-15, and A. Rosu, 1977: 184), discovered two new MSS (Bharatendu Collection of the Bhārat Kalā Bhavan Library of BHU, Vārāṇasī, S1, Nr. 5895, Accretion Nr. B 3773 = Cat. BHU Nr. 66; *Sarasvatī Bhavan Library of BHU, Vārāṇasī, Nr. 1/143-85627) and also made use of a MS of Todarānanda's Āyurvedasaukhya (from the collection of the late Pandit Rām Prasād Śarmā, Rā javaidya of Patiālā), which contains the whole text without mentioning its author (see P.V. Sharma's Intr. to his ed., 5-8). Compare also Check-list Nr. 142, where two MSS are recorded (*Library of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Nr. 178; *Oriental Institute of Baroda, Nr. 645). A MS of a work called Dravyagunaratnamālā by an author whose name is Mādhava (NCC IX, 179; Cat. Skt. MSS N.-W.P. 1, Nr. 28) is said to contain rules for preparing different medicines and their benefits. If this statement concerning the contents of the work is correct, it is not identical with the Mādhavadrav vaguna and must be a different work.
- 854 CC I, 449 (Mādhavadeva's Bhāvasvabhāva); III, 89 (idem). Bodleian d.723(11); see D. Wujastyk (1990): 95. The title of the work is Bhāvasvabhāvavāda according to one of the introductory verses. The colophons call it Śridravyaguṇa or Śrīmādhavābhidhānadravyaguṇa (depending on the MS). The author, who calls himself Mādhavakavi in the last verse of his work, is called Mādhavakāra by Vopadeva and Hemādri, Mādhava or Mādhavakara by Śivadāsasena, Mādhavakara by Niścalakara, Mādhavakara or Mādhavakāra by Krsnadatta (see the authors quoting the work).
- 855 The number of verses varies in the MSS.
- 856 MS Nr. 1/143-85627 of the Sarasvatī Bhavan Library of Vārāņasī (see P.V. Sharma's ed., Intr. 7).
- 857 The Paris MS has nineteen vargas (A. Rosu, 1977: 184), but may be incomplete.
- 858 This śreṣṭhavarga, a short list of eight verses enumerating which item is the best of a series with a common quality, was certainly inspired by Ca.Sū.25.40, the well-known long list of items wich are śrestha in a particular respect.

- 887 P.V. Sharma was acquainted with only one of Niścala's quotations from the Mādhavadra-vyaguņa at the time he edited the work; he regarded this quotation as unreliable, being found in only one of the three MSS (Intr. to his ed., 13). Later, in the Introduction (20) to his edition of Niścala's Ratnaprabhā, P.V. Sharma changed his opinion on the reliability of the quotations, which did not influence his dating.

- 958 One of the mantras (taptalohadivyastambhanamantra) gives protection against the red-hot iron used in a fire ordeal. See on this and other types of ordeal: D. George (1991): 130. Compare Manusmṛti 8.114-115; Viṣṇusmṛti 9-14.
- 959 It is quoted as Kakṣāpuṭi: Toḍara IX: 2.228-256 (the preparation of a bhasman of mercury; in combination with a powder, made from several drugs, it constitutes an excellent medicine and cures many diseases, if used in keeping with the rules) and 317-318 (description of cinnabar); 3.246 (on ayaskṛti); 4.14 (disorders caused by unpurified mākṣika) and 511 (bhangā, ahiphena and dhuttūra constitute a group called malina; taken together, these drugs cure śīta jvara and are helpful in the purification of mercury).
- 960 Referred to, together with the Haramekhalā (ad Sū.3.19-22), on the subject of gandhayukti, i.e., perfumery.
- 961 See NCC III, 111-112.
- 962 The edition used calls it even Mantrakhan (1.11). The Kakṣapuṇa has many verses in common with the Kāmaratna (see T. Goudriaan, 1978: 257).
- 963 The work is usually ascribed to Siddha Nāgārjuna, but sometimes to Siddha Nityanātha (see NCC III, 110-112).
- 964 See: authorities associated with the Suśrutasamhitā.
- 965 S.K. Śarmā (1992: I, 18) assigns the Kakṣapuṭa to the eighth century.
- 966 This is the title according to the author himself (verse 2).
- 967 Called thus by the author at the end of his work (140). Other titles are Ascaryayoga(ratna)mālā, Yogamālā, Kautukatantra, and Mahākautuka (Intr. to ed. b, 6). See NCC II, 211 and X, 18; Check-list Nrs. 1055–1057; Tāntrika Sāhitya 55; Cat. Berlin Nr. 1746; CBORI

- XVI, I, Nrs. 170–175; H.D. Velankar (1944): 322. The NCC (II, 18) records a Mahā-kautukīya as a work that probably forms part of the Yogaratnamālā. A Yogaratnāvalī with a vivṛti by Śvetāmbara (Check-list Nrs. 1010 and 1060) is evidently the same work; P. Peterson (1887: 313) reproduces part of the text of a MS of Nāgārjuna's Yogaratnamālā that calls it Yogaratnāvalī in the colophon. Th. Aufrecht stated (in his catalogue of the Bodleian MSS) that the Yogaratnamālā seems to be an epitome of a much larger work, which tradition ascribes to Nāgārjuna (see P. Peterson, 1887: 17).
- 968 The commentator Gunākara ascribes the work to Nāgārjuna in his introductory verse. The NCC (X, 18-19) does not record it among the works of Nāgārjuna. Editions:
 - a Āścaryayogamālātantra by Siddhanāgārjuna, ed., with a Hindî commentary, by Pandita Baladevaprasādamiśra, Śrīvenkateśvara Steam Press, Bombay 1914 [IO.San. B.1003(i)].

- 969 Compare on the contents: JAI 79-83.
- 970 This number varies somewhat in the MSS (Intr. to ed. b, 8; Tāntrika Sāhitya 55: two MSS are recorded as having 400, respectively 450 verses).
- 971 P.V. Sharma (1993c; 37) observes that the verses from Nāgārjuna's Lauhaśāstra in the Cakradatta are in the same metre.
- 972 The work consists of fifty-seven short paragraphs.

- 982 Compare CC I, 410: Bhāskara, guru of Nāgārjuna; P. Peterson, 1887: 17-18.
- 983 Compare on this point: Sodhala.
- 984 R. Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 72–87) made the improbable claim that the Nāgār juna who wrote the Yogaratnamālā was a Jain ācārya who lived in the third century and was a pupil of Pādaliptasūri. See on the identity and date of the author of the Yogaratnamālā also D.G. White (1996: 114, 131, 165–166), who places the work in the twelfth to thirteenth century; D.G. White speculates that the Nāgārjuna who wrote it may have come from Gujarāt to Śrīśaila, where he became the guru of the Nāgārjuna to whom we owe the Rasendramangala.
- 985 Intr. to ed. b, 9-12. P.V. Sharma's contention that it is not improbable that this Bhāskara is the Siddha of that name, mentioned, together with Nāgārijuna and others, in the Rasaratnasamuccaya (1.2), and who is also regarded as the author of the Rasendrabhāskara, is no more than a guess. Compare: Bhāskara. See also: D.G. White (1996; see index s.v. Bhā-

- skara). See JAI 73-87; other medical works ascribed to this Nāgārjuna by R. Bhaṭnāgar are a Lauhaśāstra and a Nāgārjunīkalpa. See: Nāgārjuna.
- 986 CBORIXVI, I, Nrs. 170-175. It is also called Laghuvṛtti (Cat. Bikaner Nr. 1377; P. Peterson, 1887: 313) and Laghuvivṛti (Cat. BHU Nrs. 140-141; JAI 94). A MS with a commentary in Gujarātī on Nāgārjuna's Yogaratnamālā, called Amṛtaratnāvalīṭītkā, and written by Gunākara, forms part of the BORI collection (CBORI XVI, I, Nr. 174); see on this commentary JAI 95-96.

- 1064 See Āḍhamalla's comments ad I.6.9; Āḍhamalla explains that two stages of the colouring process are referred to; see also Kāśīrāma's remarks. Āḍhamalla quotes a statement from an unspecified source, describing the gradual changes of colour during the transformation of rasa into blood, a process that takes seven days; the seven colours on these days are, successively: śveta (white), kapota (dove-grey), harita (yellowish green), hāridra (yellow), coloured like a padma, coloured like a kimśuka flower, and coloured like ālaktaka (lac).
- 1065 Āḍhamalla interprets it as having a Tantric meaning. Compare C. Dwarkanath (1991: 195–203) and P.V. Sharma (1984c: 129–131).
- 1066 Cf. Su.Sū.21.17.
- 1067 Niścala (ad grahanī 77-85) claims that sanigrahagrahanī as a disorder brought about by āmavāta is described by Vāgbhaṭa. The verses quoted by Niścala in support are not found in the chapters on grahanī of Vāgbhaṭa's works; the stanzas on the nidāna ofsamgrahagrahanī, at the end of the chapter on grahanī of the Mādhavanidāna, are from Vāgbhaṭa according to Niścala's Ratnaprabhā. See on the disorder also Todara V: 2.22.
- 1068 The Vyākhyākusumāvalī (ad Siddhayoga 3.17) quotes some verses by Kāśyapa which describe dandālasaka as an incurable and fatal variety of alasaka; Dalhana (ad Su.U.56.9) and Vācaspati (ad Mādhavanidāna 6.21) regard it as identical wtith vilambikā.
- 1069 Some of the parasites mentioned in āyurvedic treatises are undoubtedly imaginary. See on imaginary parasites in general and their role in the history of medicine: R. Hoeppli (1959): 59-89.
- 1070 Bhasmaka was known to Cakrapāṇidatta (ad Su.Sū.35.24 and 40.10), Dalhaṇa (ad Su.Sū. 35.24), Soḍhala (Gadanigraha, kāya 5.30-32), Vijayarakṣita (ad Mādhavanidāna 6.2-4), and Vṛnda (Siddhayoga 5.57 and 6.6).
- 1071 These twenty varieties are attributed to beings called deva, dānava, gandharva, kinnara, yakṣa, pitar, guru, preta, guhyaka, vrddha, siddha, bhūta, piśāca, jalādhidevatāḥ, nāga, brahmarākṣasa, rākṣasa, kūṣmāṇḍa, kṛtyā, and vetāla. - 1072 Described in a verse added to Mādhavanidāna 26. The term jaratpitta is found in Cakrapānidatta's Cikitsāsanngraha (parināmasūlacikitsā 62 and 77) and explained as a synonym of amlapitta by Śivadāsasena; Āḍhamalla (ad Śārngadharasamhitā I.7.44) is also of the opinion that it is the same as amlapitta.
- 1073 This disease is mentioned in the Kāśyapasaṃhitā (Khilasthāna 18.22) and described by Vaṅgasena (urograhādhikāra 1-3). Kāśīrāma claims (ad Śāṁgadharasaṃhitā I.7.50a) that Vāgbhata was acquainted with it.
- 1074 Āḍhamalla remarks (ad Śārngadharasamhitā I.7.63c) that some authorities regard mūtrātisāra as a variety of somaroga.
- 1075 Identical with kuranda and bradhnaroga, according to Ādhamalla and Kāšīrāma ad Śārngadhara III.11.104; identical with kurandaka according to Ādhamalla ad Śārngadharasanhitā I.7.67c. Some authors regard vrddhi and kuranda as synonyms (Śrīkanthadatta ad Mādhavanidāna 37.1-3ab; Śivadāsasena ad Cakradatta, vrddhicikitsā 1), others as separate entities (Todara VI: 14.11).

- 1076 Apacī is described as a separate disease in the Suśrutasamhitā (Ni.11.10-12) and Mā-dhavanidāna (38.9cd-10); Vāgbhaṭa considers ganḍamālā and apacī to be synonymous (A.h.U.29.25; A.s.U.34.24-26).
- 1077 Compare on this subject: Su.Ci.2.50-66ab.
- 1078 Described by Mādhava in the chapter on śītapitta (50.6).
- 1079 Ādhamalla regards rājikā as a type of masūrikā that is also called kodrava.
- 1080 Rakasā is one of the types of kustha in the Suśrutasamhitā (Ni.5.15).

- 1086 Also mentioned by Suśruta (Śā.10.44).
- 1087 Also described by Vangasena (bālaroga 126-128).
- 1088 Mentioned in the Kāśyapasamhitā (revatīkalpa 6) and Vangasena's Cikitsāsārasangraha (bālaroga 215).
- 1089 Identical with Skandāpasmāra in the Suśrutasamhitā (U.37.7).
- 1090 Compare the Śvagraha of A.h.U.3.2. See for references to a Śvagraha in several Grhyasūtras: H. Falk (1986): 19, 109.
- 1091 Compare Su.Sū.11.26; 12.38–39; 26.10. Śārṅgadhara omits dhūmopahata, mentioned in the Suśrutasamhitā (Sū.12.29cd–32).
- 1092 Mucuna pruriens (Linn.) DC.
- 1093 Usually identified as a species of Amorphophallus.
- 1094 Semecarpus anacardium Linn.f.; the pericarp of the fruit abounds in a highly vesicant juice (see WIRM IX, 271–272).
- 1095 Areca catechu Linn.
- 1096 Cannabis sativa Linn.
- 1097 Terminalia bellirica (Gaertn.) Roxb.; the kernels of the fruits possess narcotic properties (see WIRM X, 167).
- 1098 Paspalum scrobiculatum Linn.; the grains are poisonous (see WIRM VII, 272).
- 1099 Some of these deviations are: ajīrņa is dealt with before arśas, kāsa before kṣaya, śvāsa before hikkā, agnivikāra between hikkā and arocaka, arocaka before chardi and svarabheda, hṛdroga before udara, udara before gulma, mūtrāghāta before mūtrakṛcchra, kṣudraroga before visarpa, visarpa before sītapitta, vātarakta after amlapitta, vātavyādhi after vātarakta, siroroga before netraroga.
- 1100 P.V. Sharma (1997) regards elīyaka as a species of Aloe, in conformity with Āḍhamalla who describes it as an exudation of kumārī.
- 1101 Identified as Melothria heterophylla (Lour.) Cogn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Adhamalla remarks (ad II.11.45) that the plant is called tipānī in the vernacular.
- 1102 The same as jayantī, and called khasinī in the vernacular, according to Āḍhamalla (ad II.11. 14 and 12.42), who distinguishes four varieties of the plant.
- 1103 Identified as Cocculus hirsutus (Linn.) Diels (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 451; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Adhamalla gives chirahanta as a synonym.
- 1104 P.V. Sharma (1997) and others (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 320 and 504) give two identifications: Cressa cretica Linn. and Capparis moonii Wight.
- 1105 Compare P.V. Sharma (1979c). P.V. Sharma erroneously mentions as new drugs introduced

- by Śārṅgadhara: aileya (II.12.56; already prescribed by Vāgbhaṭa: A.h.U.11.24 and 16. 24), babbūla (II.12.282; already found in Soḍhala and Madanapāla), mahānimba (II.2.140; 5.6; 9.201; 12.181 and 206; already occurring in Suśruta, Sū.38.22), and suvarṇapuṣpī-(III.11.40; prescribed in the Bower MS). - 1113 G. Hāldār's statements about Śārngadhara are contradictory; at one place (Vrddhatrayī 467) he ascribes to Śārngadhara I, assigned to the thirteenth century, three medical works (Śārngadharasaṃhitā, Paryāyamañjarī, and Dhātumāraṇa), whereas elsewhere (Vrddhatrayī 468) he regards the Śārngadharasaṃhitā and Jvaratriśatī as written by Śārngadhara II, who lived in the thirteenth-fourteenth century. C. Dwarkanath (1991: 104) ascribes eight works on very diverse subjects to the author of the Śārngadharasamhitā.

- 1143 ABI 318. AVI 180-182. J. Jolly (1901): 4. R.C. Majumdar (1971): 263. Winternitz III, 551. The Śārngadharasamhitā is said to date from the fourteenth century by those who assume that the Śārngadharapaddhati was written by the same author: P. Rāy (1956): 161; S. Dasgupta (1975): II, 435. According to J. Filliozat (L. Renou and J. Filliozat, 1953: 160) it may date from the eleventh century. G.A. Grierson placed the work in about A.D. 1500 on internal grounds (see STMI 196 for references).

- 1144 C. Dwarkanath (1991: 96) claims that a Nepalese MS of the Śārngadharasamhitā was completed in A.D. 1303. P. Hymavathi (1993: 63-64) places Śārngadhara in the second half of the fourteenth century, arguing that his father, Dāmodara, was the author of the Ārogyacintāmani, and his grandfather, Viṣnubhaṭṭa, the same as the guru of Mādhava Vidyāranya. A.C. Burnell (1880: 65-66) was the first to suggest, without arguments in favour, that the author of the Ārogyacintāmani was perhaps the father of the author of the Śārngadharasamhitā.
- 1145 Cat. BHU (Nrs. 243 and 244) records an anonymous commentary.
- 1146 NCC II, 42; IX, 230: Dhamalla or Dhamalla, author of a commentary, called Prakāša, on the Śārngadharasamhitā; the same as Āḍhamalla? STMI 13-14.
- 1147 According to Paraśurāma Śāstrī (bhūmikā to ed. cc, 7), some are of the opinion that this indicates that Āḍhamalla was a vaiśya.
- 1148 Paraśurāma Śāstrī (bhūmikā to ed. cc) identifies him with the well-known Cakrapāṇidatta, which is untenable, because the latter belonged to the Lodhravalī branch of the Datta family.
- 1149 A medical author of the same name wrote the Vyādhividhvainsinī (AVI 315-316: *MS Jodhpur Nr. 2933); the Check-list (Nr. 1025) calls the author of this work Bhāvaśarman.
- 1150 Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982: 559) identified it as Hathakānta in the Āgrā district.
- 1151 I.e., the river Cambal in eastern Rājasthān. See on this river: ABI 302; AVI 218; N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 105; N. Dey (1979): 48; Vettam Mani 178.
- 1152 It has been suggested that Adhamalla belonged to the same region as Dalhana, since the vernacular names of medicinal plants used by these authors are closely related (see Bāpālāl Vaidya, 1982: 371–372).
- 1153 C. Dwarkanath (1991: 96–97 and 196) assumes that Adhamalla was a pupil of Śārngadhara himself.

- 1168 Ad Śārngadharasamhitā II.12.4cd–13ab.
- 1169 The quotation from the Mādhavadravyaguņa is of no avail in establishing Āḍhamalla's date, because that text may date from about A.D. 1100.

- 1170 AVI 218-219. P.V. Sharma regards the use of the term jasada for the metal zinc (ad III.11.1 and 25-27ab) as supporting this date, because it became current in the fourteenth century; Srikanta Murthy (Intr. to his ed. and transl. of the Śārngadharasamhitā) also places him in the fourteenth century. Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982: 560) mentions A.D. I277 as Āḍhamalla's date.
- 1171 See: Niścalakara.
- 1172 The text of the rasādiśodhanamāraņa chapter has been taken from Śārngadharasaṃhitā II.11 and 12, that on sirāvyadha from III.12.

- 1174 NCC IV, 139; VI, 96. This commentary is sometimes referred to as Gūḍhāntadī pikā (CC I, 643).
- 1175 The NCC (IV, 139) erroneously records that Kāśīrāma wrote his commentary on the Cikitsāsthana only.
- 1176 Paraśurāma's bhūmikā to ed. cc, 8. Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982): 560. V. Śukla I, 140. Srikanta Murthy (edition and translation of the Śārngadharasamhitā) adds that Kāśīrāma lived at Salimabad and belonged to the Bhāradvā ja Sārasvata sect.
- 1177 Bhāvaprakāśanighantu, dhātvādivarga 20, is quoted ad II.11.23cd-24.
- 1178 AVI 220-221; Atrideva also expressed the view that Jahāngīr must be intended (ABI 302).
- 1179 I.e., the Madanapālanighantu.
- 1180 P.V. Sharma places this work, without identifying it, in the fifteenth century (AVI 220); he probably regards it as the Kaiyadevanighantu. Kāśīrāma's reference agrees with Kaiyadeva. dhātuvarga 20.
- 1181 Compare Vopadeva.
- 1182 Ad III.3.I. Kāśīrāma quotes Cikitsākalikā 68.
- 1183 Compare Sataslokī.
- 1184 Kāśīrāma may also quote (ad Śārigadhara I.3.6-9ab), without naming his source, from Rāvana's Nādipariksā (verse 32) or Kanāda's Nādīvi jñāna (verse 50).
- 1185 Kāśīrāma's notes on the identity of drugs have been collected by Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982: 560-569.
- 1186 Kāśīrama, author of the Gūḍhārthadī pikā, is sometimes (NCC IV, 139) identified with Kāśīrāma of Mathurā, son of Mathurādāsa and grandson of Gurudāsa from the city of Argalā. This Kāśīrāma, who was a Sārasvata brāhmaṇa of the Bhāradvā ja gotra and a renowned physician, was the teacher of Kalyāṇadāsa, son of Nāmadeva and grandson of Lakṣmīdhara, who resided at Bahādurapura during the reign of Yādava Tulasīdāsa, son of Gopāla. Kalyāṇadāsa wrote, on the suggestion of Kāśīrāma, the Śabdaratnapradīpa or Ratnapradīpanighaṇṭu, a homonymic lexicon that is often (as in the NCC) claimed as a work by Kāśīrama, written at the instance of Kalyāṇadāsa (C. Vogel, IL 375–376).
 - Since the Śabdaratnapradīpa may have been composed towards the end of the thirteenth century (C. Vogel, IL 375-376), the Kāsīrāma who was the teacher of Kalyāṇadāsa lived considerably earlier than the author of the commentary on the Śārngadharasaṇnhitā.
- 1187 See: Kāśīnātha. CC I, 104. STMI 96-97. ABI 319. Vrddhatrayī 468: the commentator Kāśīrāma is called Kāśīnātha Dvivedin and credited with the Ajīrņamañ jarī, Cikitsākramakalpavallī, Kāśīnāthī, and Rasakalpalatā.

A Vibudhapriya by Śārngadhara (CC: not recorded) on the therapy of fevers, recorded in the Check-list (Nr. 991), is probably the same as the Triśatī. STMI (199) also mentions a Vibudhapriyā or Jvaracikitsā by Śārngadhara.

- 1208 The same as ākarakara according to the commentator.
- 1209 The same as candaśūra according to the commentator (compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1014); candaśūra is without any doubt identical with candraśūra, Lepidium sativum Linn., a plant only described in the Bhāvaprakāśanighanţu (harītakyādivarga 96–97) according to P.V. Sharma (AVI 344) and D.K.S. Chauhan and R.N. Singh (1981: 19). See on candraśūra: G.J. Meulenbeld (1985).
- 1210 One of the words for grape. Hārahūrā is also found in the Bhāvaprakāśa (Ci. 1.647), Jvaratimirabhāskara (5.62; 7.114 and 156) and Vaidyavinoda (1.101; 4.79); lexica mentioning the word are Halāyudha's Abhidhānaratnamālā (2.38) and Hemacandra's Abhidhānacintāmaṇi (4.222); the Arthaśāstra (2.25.25) refers to hārahūraka. - 1211 Of uncertain identity according to the commentator. The same as kāravī (variously identified) according to P.V. Sharma (1997).

- 1212 The same as polī (of unknown identity) according to the commentator. Rājīphala is identical with patola (Dhanvantarinighaņtu 1.49–50; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1642, and 1643).
- 1213 The same as ākārakarabha (128), ākulakarā or akarakarā (153), ākalakara or akarakara (164), according to the commentator. Tīvra is also identified as Hyoscyamus niger Linn. and Ocimum tenuiflorum Linn. = O. sanctum Linn. (see on the valid name: V.V. Sivara jan and I. Balachandran. 1994: 485) (see M. - 1214 The same as gopīsārivā according to the commentator. Gopīsārivā is a synonym of sārivā.
- 1215 It is called visabhrrigara (161) and ahiphena (164).
- 1216 He is sometimes called Rātulaśārngadhara (R. Mitra's Notices IX, Nr. 3059) or Śārngadhara Rātula (Collection Punyavijayaji Nr. 57).

- 1221 The author and his work are called thus in the colophon of the printed text and of MS Nr. 93 of CBORI. The Check-list (Nr. 860) records the name of the commentator as Vallabhadatta. A Jammu MS (*Nr. 3257) calls the author Meghabhatta, son of Kṛṣṇa (AVI 317, n.3; cf. CC I, 613 and II, 146, where a commentary on the Triśatī by Meghabhatta is mentioned). See also Cat. Bikaner Nr. 1446: Vaidyavallabhatīkā by Meghabhatta on Śārngadhara's book about fevers (this commentary on the Triśatī appears to differ from Vallabhabhatta's work). The colophon of Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 42701 calls the author Vaidyavallabhabhatta Śrīmegha. The commentary is called Vaidyavallabhā or Dīpikā in Cat. BHU (Nrs. 63–65).
- 1222 It is called thus in the last colophon of MS Nr. 94 of CBORI XVI, 1. Aufrecht (CC II, 146) calls it Siddhāntacikitsā; the NCC (X, 83) refers to it as a Vivṛti (Siddhāntacandrikā). The Punyavijayaji collection (Nr. 58) contains a MS of the Triśatī with a Vṛtti.
- 1223 Sometimes referred to as Nārāyaṇabudha (Check-list Nr. 858). He was the brother of the author of the Nidānapradīpa, Nāganātha, who was the eldest son of Kṛṣṇabhaṭṭa. Nārāyaṇa also wrote the Jvaranirṇaya. G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 469) calls him Nārāyaṇadāsa Kavirāja, places him in the fourteenth-fifteenth century, and credits him with the Cikitsāor Vaidyaparibhāsā.
- 1224 NCC: not recorded. Check-list Nr. 859. This may be the same as Nārāyaṇa's commentary, because this author is sometimes referred to as Nārāyaṇadāsa (NCC X, 82).
- 1225 This may well be the Vīrasimhāvaloka, used by Śārngadhara according to Vallabhabhatta.

- 1230 NCC: not recorded. See JAI 104-105; V.P.P Śāstrī (1984): 389. The last two leaves of a MS of the work, containing verses 1099-1123, have been preserved; Sinha mentions that his father; Dhanarāja Śreşthin, of Poravārjāti, was a minister of the 'Alā-ud-Dīn Khaljī who ruled at Ranthambhor. Sinha's reference to 'Alā-ud-Dīn Khaljī throws doubt on Sinha's date, since 'Alā-ud-Dīn captured Ranthambhor in 1301. R. Bhatnāgar (JAI 104-105)

- conjectured that the 'Alā-ud-Dīn Khaljī mentioned by Sinha was some Muslim ruler of Mālwā who descended from 'Alā-ud-Dīn.
- Siṃha's father, Dhanarāja, and his two sons, Siṃha and Śrīpati, are eulogized in the Prabodhamājā of Jayasiṃha Sūri, an ācārya of the Kṛṣṇarṣigaccha (JAI 105).

- 1264 Identified as Echinops echinatus Roxb. by Bapalal G. Vaidya and P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1265 Identified as Leea macrophylla Roxb. ex Horn. by P.V. Sharma (1997). Bapalal G. Vaidya regards it as Leea macrophylla Roxb. ex Horn. or L. indica (Burm.f.) Merrill. See on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet (1987).
- 1266 Identified as Ruta graveolens Linn, by Bapalal G. Vaidya.
- 1267 Identified as Centipeda minima (Linn.) A.Br. et Aschers. = C. orbicularis Lour. by Bapalal G. Vaidya.
- 1268 A creeper smaller than, but resembling Mucuna pruriens (Linn.) DC. = M. prurita Hook. (see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) according to Bapalal G. Vaidya.
- 1269 The same as bandhūka according to P.V. Sharma (1997). Compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1247: identified as Pentapetes phoenicea Linn.
- 1270 Identified as Spilanthes oleracea Murr. by P.V. Sharma (1997). WIRM (X, 11) agrees with this name, but other sources (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997; S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) have S. oleracea Linn.
- 1271 Identified as Smilax ovalifolia Roxb. (see on the nomenclature: WIRM IX, 367) (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1497).
- 1272 The same as babbūla according to P.V. Sharına (1997); compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 20.

- 1273 The same as māyāphala according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1274 One of its synonyms is laghudugdhikā. Identified as Euphorbia hirta Linn. = E. pilulifera auct. non Linn. (according to WIRM III, 225; = E. pilulifera Linn. according to S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) by Bapalal G. Vaidya, as E. thymifolia Linn. by others (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 712).
- 1275 A species of Indigofera according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1276 Identified as Picrasma quassioides Bennet by P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1277 Identified as Butea superba Roxb. by Bapalal G. Vaidya and P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1278 Identified as Physalis minimaLinn. by Bapalal G. Vaidya and P.V. Sharma (1997). Also identified as Zanonia indica Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1737).
- 1279 Identified as Lagerstroemia indica Linn. by P.V. Sharma (1997), but as Delonix elata (Linn.) Gamble = Poinciana elata Linn. by Bapalal G. Vaidya, as Caesalpinia pulcherrima Sweet by others (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 284).
- 1280 Calligonum polygonoides Linn. according to P.V. Sharma (1997), but Mentha longifolia (Linn.) Huds. = M. sylvestris Linn. var. incana (Willd.) Hook.f. (see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987) according to Bapalal G. Vaidya.
- 1281 Identified as Pentatropis capensis (Linn.f.) Bullock = P. microphylla Wight et Arn. by Bapalal G. Vaidya.
- 1282 Ventilago madras patana Gaertn. according to Bapalal G. Vaidya (compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1680). Also identified as Phyllanthus urinaria Linn. and Rubia cordifolia Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1276 and 1406).
- 1283 Glinus lotoides Linn. = Mollugo hirta Thunb. according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1284 Identified as Aerva persica (Burm.f.) Merrill = A. javanica (Burm.f.) Juss. ex Schult. by Bapalal G. Vaidya.
- 1285 Trianthema portulacastrum Linn. according to P.V. Sharma (1997); see for a study of the diuretic effect of this plant, usually called svetapunarnavā, but also known as vaisākha: A.R. Murthy, S.D. Dubey and K. Tripathi (1999). Some of these names from the laksmaṇādivarga are found in the Dhanvantarīyanighaṇu (for example, jīvantī, mahārāṣṭrī, mākṣika, palāsinī), but their meaning may differ in that treatise.
- 1286 A kind of nimba according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1287 Identified as Symplocos racemosa Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1559).
- 1288 Identified as Alectra parasitica A. Rich. var. chitrakutensis M.A. Rau by P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1289 Stereospermum colais (Dillw.) Mabberley = S. personatum (Hassk.) Chatterjee = S. tetragonum DC. (P.V. Sharma, 1997; see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet, 1987).
- 1290 A species of Pentatropis according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1291 The same as samangā according to P.V. Sharma (1997). Also identified as Adiantum philippense Linn. = A. lunulatum Burm. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 46; compare WIRM I, rev. ed., 81).
- 1292 The same as jhin jhir Ita (Triumfetta rhomboidea Jacq.) according to P.V. Sharma (1997). Identified as T. rotundifolia Lam. by Bapalal G. Vaidya.
- 1293 The same as samangā according to P.V. Sharma (1997). Probably Delonix regia Rafin. according to Bapalal G. Vaidya.
- 1294 The same as parṇayavānī (Coleus amboinicus Lour. = C. aromaticus Benth.) according to Bapalal G. Vaidya and P.V. Sharma (1997).

- 1295 P.V. Sharma (1997) reads rājaśelu, regarded as identical with śleşmātaka. Bapalal G. Vaidya identifies rājaśelu as Cordia dichotoma Forst. = C. myxa sensu C.B. Clarke; see on the nomenclature: S.S.R. Bennet (1987).
- 1296 Compare Hindī gonid.
- 1297 It designates the plant Saponaria vaccaria Linn. according to P.V. Sharma (DGV V, 351).
- 1298 Compare on special features of the Sodhalanighantu: ABI 427; AVI 383; P.V. Sharma's Preface to his ed.
- 1299 Some rare passages are in prose, e.g., cūrna 52.
- 1300 See on kumāryāsava (1-15ab and 15cd-19): R.R. Desāī (1980): 342-343.
- 1301 AVI 289.
- 1302 Prayogakhanda, guţikādhikāra 7-11ab (kānkāyanavaṭaka) = Siddhayoga 5.41-44 (kānkā-yanamodaka); guţikā 338-348ab = Siddhayoga 23.34-42.
- 1303 Prayogakhanda, gutikādhikāra 11cd-18ab (kānkāyanagutikā) = Cakradatta, gulma 50-56.
- 1304 Prayogakhanda, cürnādhikāra 27-31 = Vangasena, āmavāta 66-68; cürnādhikāra 363-367ab = Vangasena, rājayaksman 81-84.
- 1305 Prayogakharıda, cürna 151-154 (sārasvatacūrna).
- 1306 The same as brāhmī (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1307 Thesameas māṃsarohiṇī (Hindī commentary; identified as Soymida febrifuga A. Juss. by P.V. Sharma, 1997) or śaṭī (P.V. Sharma, 1997; identified as Hedychium spicatum Buch.-Ham.).
- 1308 Dhattūra fruits (Hindī commentary); the same as bhangā (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1309 See Nāmasamgraha 677.
- 1310 A synonym of indravāruņī (Hindī commentary).
- 1311 The same as phañ jikā (Hindī commentary) or jīvantī (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Phañ jī is found in the Carakasamhitā; jīvanī cannot be identical with jīvantī, because the latter is separately mentioned in the same verse as jīvanī.
- 1312 The same as langalī (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1313 The same as kaśeruka (Hindī commentary; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1314 Identified as Bombax insigne Wall. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997: 23) and Ceibapentandra (Linn.) Gaertn. = Eriodendron anfractuosum DC. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1315 Unidentified.
- 1316 The same as brhatī (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1317 The same as gudūcī (Hindī commentary).
- 1318 Purified jayapāla (Hindī commentary).
- 1319 The flowers of arka (Hindī commentary).
- 1320 The same as karpūra (Hindī commentary).
- 1321 The same as ajamodā (Hindī commentary).
- 1322 The same as samudraphala (Hindī commentary; P.V. Sharma, 1997), identified as Barringtonia acutangula Gaerin. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1323 The same as māiņsarohiņī (Hindī commentary) or kaṭphala (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1324 The same as brhadelā (Hindī commentary; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1325 The same as eranda (Hindī commentary; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1326 Compare AVI 290. The fact that Soehala, in the Gadanigraha, prescribes drugs which are absent from his Nighantu makes P.V. Sharma suppose that the latter work is earlier than the former (AVI 384; Preface to his ed. of the Nighantu, 7).
- 1327 See AVI 338-339.

- 1328 The same as babbūla according to P.V. Sharma (1997), but Mimosa hamata Willd. according to Bapalal G. Vaidya. Babbūla is identified as Acacia nilotica Delile subsp. indica (Benth.) Brenan (see on this tree: Akhtar Husain et al., 1992: 5; WIRM I, rev. ed., 37–41).
- 1329 The same as dhanvayāsa (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1330 A large type of ślesmātaka according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1331 The same as upakuñcikā according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1332 Probably the same as kuliñ ja(ka).
- 1333 Kāyaphala is not a new drug, but the vernacular name for katphala.
- 1334 See AVI 350-351.
- 1335 Identified as Jasminum arborescens Roxb. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1336 Regarded as pūtikarañ ja (Hindī commentary).
- 1337 Identified as Blepharis persica (Burm.f.) Kuntze = B. edulis Pers. by P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1338 It may be a synonym of bhangā here. See AVI 353-354; G.J. Meulenbeld (1989): 64.
- 1339 See AVI 343.

1341 AVI 290.

- 1340 See AVI 290; G.J. Meulenbeld (1981c): 116 and 118. Compare on the term arka: Arkaprakāśa.
- 1342 Tightening the vagina.
- 1343 Making the female genitals devoid of hair.
- 1344 E.g., 2.300–307 (tuvarakakalpa) = A.s.U.49.78–85; 2.313–316 and 317 (somarā jīkalpa) = A.s.U.49.137–140 and 143–144.
- 1345 Ouoted as Sodhala.
- 1346 See, e.g., kāya 2.26-28; 9.35-36; 10.19-21; 14.18-20; 23.26-28.
- 1347 This syndrome differs from the sannipāta fever called hāridraka, described in the Bhā-vaprakāśa (cikitsā 1.517). Compare G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 172.
- 1348 This children's disease, described in the works attributed to Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.U.2.20-23ab; A.s.U.2.17) and usually regarded as milk-tympany, is identified as infantile cirrhosis by the Hindī commentator. Kṣīrālasaka may be due to lactose malabsorption; see the publications by J. Dupuis and F.J. Simoons on this subject.
- 1349 These two types belong to the irregular fevers (viṣamajvara) and appear, as their names indicate, on each fifth, respectively sixth day.
- 1350 The diseases called vardhma (or bradhna) and snāyuka were described for the first time by Vrnda, whereas somaroga was described for the first time by Vangasena.
- 1351 Sodhala's verse was probably incorporated later in the text of the Mādhavanidāna.
- 1352 The term sītalikā is employed by Dalhana (ad Su.Ni.5.34) and Śrīkanthadatta (ad Siddhayoga 73.17).
- 1353 See AVI 354 on this plant.
- 1354 See AVI 352.
- 1355 Identified as Tricholepis glaberrima DC. by P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1356 Drieddates (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1357 The same as amlikā (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Regarded as apāmārga in the Hindī commentary.
- 1358 Identical with manjistha (Hindi commentary; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1359 Dangarī is a kind of trapusa according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1360 The same as musta (Hindī commentary; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1361 Mentioned in the Carakasamhitā.
- 1362 A synonym of ghrtakumārī (Hindī commentary).

- 1363 Mentioned in the Suśrutasamhitā.
- 1364 Identified as Melothria maderaspatana (Linn.) Cogn. by P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 1365 The same as ābhābabūlaka according to P.V. Sharma (1997). Regarded as the tree called barbara in the Hindī commentary.
- 1366 The same as svarnaksīrī (P.V. Sharına, 1997).
- 1367 An aquatic grass (Hindī commentary).
- 1368 A dark type of bhargī according to the Hindī commentary.
- 1369 The same as guñjā (P. V. Sharma, 1997). A kind of kākamācī according to the Hindī commentary.
- 1370 A variety of the vegetable called poī (Hindī commentary).
- 1371 See AVI 351.
- 1372 Dried můlaka (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1373 A synonym of vāsā (l-lindī commentary).
- 1374 The same as kaivartamusta (Hindī commentary) or kākamācī (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1375 The pollen of a lotus flower (Hindī commentary).
- 1376 A synonym of nīvāra (Hindī commentary).
- 1377 A synonym of vāsā (Hindī commentary).
- 1378 The same as vīrataru (P.V. Sharma, 1997).1379 The same as śvetakustha (Hindī commentary).
- 1380 Unidentified.
- 1381 Compare on special features of the Gadani graha: ABI 280-281; AVI 289-290.
- 1282 Gunasamgraha 1255-1256 and 1261.
- 1383 The Rāyakavāla (Rayekwad) brāhmaņas are found in Gujarāt only, especially in Zālāvād and Gohilvād of Saurāstra (Bāpālāl Vaidya, 1982: 625–626).
- 1384 Guṇasangraha 1261. Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982: 626) mentions a MS of an astrological work by Sodhala, the Siddhāntasāra (not recorded in the CC).
- 1385 See AVI 291 on the various readings and interpretations of Gunasangraha 1255. In the preface (2) to his ed. of the Sodhalanighantu, P.V. Sharma takes Svaccha as the name of Sodhala's father, whereas Atrideva (ABI 279) is of the opinion that the father was called Nandana. The name of Sodhala's father is Nandana in a prasasti found in one of the MSS of the Gadanigraha (Bāpālāl Vaidya, 1982: 626).
- 1386 This view, expressed by Atrideva (ABI 279), depends on a variant reading.

Two parts of this treatise have been edited: *(a) śrīnāthapandita pranīta parahita samhitā, sādhārana kānda, publ. by Vavilla Ramaswamy Sastrulu and Son's, Madras 1952; this edition is based on a single MS (it may be the only one known that contains the complete text) in the possession of the publishers; each verse, printed in Telugu script, is followed by meanings in Telugu and a paraphrase along with explanations. See on this edition D.V. Subba Reddy (1972): 200-201; Subba Reddy's Intr. (6-7) to ed. b. Selected verses from the sadharanakanda were translated into English by B. Rama Rao, BIHM 2,4, 1972, 207-213. (b) śrīnāthapanditaviracitā parahitasamhitā, śālākvatantram tathā śalvatantram; Parahita Samhita (A Medical Treatise of Parahita Family), Salakya Tantra and Salya Tantra from "Astangakanda" by Srinatha Pandita, published by Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati 1972; Preface and Introduction by D.V. Subba Reddy, This edition is based on MS Nr. 13346 of GOML, Madras, which contains the astangakanda (the last page of the first adhikara and the damaged and incomplete text of the remaining adhikāras). Reviewed by P.V. Sharma (BIHM 3, 3, 1973, 162-163) and R.C. Choudhury (JRIM 10, 1, 1975, 99-100). The printed text is full of mistakes, but a large part of these can be corrected by comparing them with the text of Vagbhata's works. References are to b.

- 1454 See D.V. Subba Reddy (1972): 202, and his Intr. to ed. b, 4-5. As pointed out by Subba Reddy, the description of the Madras MS in the Madras Cat. is inadequate.
- 1455 Apart from Vāgbhaṭa's works, Śrīnāthapandita also quotes copiously from the Suśrutasamhitā (see P.V. Sharma's review of ed. b in BIHM 3, 3, 1973, 163).
- 1456 The usual name of this fever is antaka.

- 1462 P. Hymavathi (1993: 112) mentions the Vaidyacintāmani and Basavarājīya as additional sources; these treatises are, however, later than the Parahitasamhitā.
- 1463 Though P.V. Sharma notes (BIHM 3, 3, 1973, 163) that the description of harītakī tallies with that of the Bhāvaprakītšanighantu (harītakyādivarga 1–35), there are nevertheless considerable differences between the two texts.

Subba Reddy refers to studies on the subject by Somasekhara Sarma, without giving more details. M. Somasekhara Sarma (1945: 111–112) reproduces the Sanskrit text of the grant of a village in the Śaka year 1345 to Parahitācārya, son of Kālanāthabhaṭṭa, by Anitalli, married to king Vīrabhadra Reḍdi. Detailed information is also given by P. Hymavathi (1993: 83–89 and 111–113). The name Śrīnātha was not uncommon in Āndhra in the fourteenth-fifteenth centuries; some authors of this name are known in Telugu literature. - 1484 CCI, 548. Compare CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 78: the MS should be called Cikitsāsārasaṃgraha and not Vangadattavaid yaka.
- 1485 The ganapāṭhādhikāra and samiśodhanasamiśamanarasadravyādīnām vargādhikāra are in prose.
- 1486 This was already noticed by H.T. Colebrooke (Cat. IO Nrs. 2698 and 2699) and P. Cordier (1899a: 6). Compare J. Jolly (1901: 6; C.G. Kashikar 7). Vangasena may have become an underestimated author, to judge by the claims that he copied the whole of the Mādhayanidāna without indicating his source.
- 1487 Vangasena's readings are sometimes better than those of Mādhava, according to J. Jolly (1901: 6; C.G. Kashikar 7).
- 1488 The order of the diseases in the chapters on kṣudraroga and bālaroga deviates considerably from Mādhava.
- 1489 Many quotations can, however, be found in Hemādri's Ayurvedarasāyana.
- 1490 J. Jolly (1901: 6) already noticed that many prescriptions can be traced in the Bower MS, Vṛnda's Siddhayoga, and the Cakradatta. Atrideva (ABI 277) and P.V. Sharma mention Vṛnda and the Cakradatta as Vangasena's main sources. A number of recipes may also have been taken from Ravigupta's Siddhasāra (see R.E. Emmerick's footnotes to his edition of the Sanskrit text of the Siddhasāra).
- 1491 AVI 275. The names of compound medicines are given in edition d.
- 1492 This chapter is based on the Sodhalanighantu according to P.V. Sharma (AVI 276), who regards Vangasena as posterior to Sodhala. A comparison of Vangasena's verses with those of the Sodhalanighantu learns, however, that it is out of the question that the latter was Vangasena's source.
- 1493 Vangasena's chapter closely agrees with chapter two (dravyagana) of Ravigupta's Siddhasāra (see the references in R.E. Emmerick's edition of the Sanskrit text of the Siddhasāra), and is not directly based on Suśruta (Sū.28), as asserted by V. Śukla (I, 142).
- 1494 According to V. Śukla I, 142. The relationships with Caraka (Vi.8) are, however, not very obvious.
- 1495 These definitions are repeated in later works, for example the Śārngadharasaṃhitā.

- 1531 CC I, 548 and 612. P.V. Sharma records a Vaidyanātha as the author of a medical treatise called Nirnayanighantu (AVI 427).
- 1532 AVI 274. P.V. Sharma calls attention to a passage in Kāsīrāma's (not Āshamalla's, as he mistakenly says) commentary on the Śāringadharasanhitā (II.11.60), stating that Vangasena and others declared abhraka to be of three types, which has been explained by Trivikrama. It is open to much doubt, however, whether Kāsīrāma had a commentary by Trivikrama on Vangasena in mind, or that he referred in this way to Trivikrama's Lauhapradīpa, which quotes Vangasena. D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1948: 322) notes that Trivikrama(deva), author of the Lauhapradīpa and several other works, is quoted eight times by Gopāladāsa in his Cikitsāmṛta, a treatise dating from the late fourteenth century.

- A commentator on Vangasena may be referred to by Kāśīrāma in his commentary on another passage of the Śārngadharasamhitā (II.6.54-57).
- 1533 Compare on special features of Vangasena's treatise: A. Kumar (1994): 68–69, 143, 220, 260, 274.

- 1539 The term bhasmaka is known to Cakrapānidatta (ad Su.Sū.40.10), Dalhana (ad Su.Sū.35. 24) and Vijayarakṣita (ad Madhavanidāna 6.2-4); bhasmaka is identical with Suśruta's atyagni (Sū.35.24). Vangasena's description is related to that of atyagni in the Carakasanhitā (Ci.15.217cd-221ab); his therapy of the disorder is also based on that of Caraka (Ci. 15).
- 1540 Vangasena, bradhnaroga 8: a recipe against vanksanavāta.
- 1541 Kāśīrāma (ad Śārigadhara I.7.50a) quotes Vāgbhaţa's characterization of urograha; Āḍhamalla's commentary contains the same quotation, without naming its source. Vangasena's description is more detailed. Urograha is mentioned in the Kāśyapasamhitā (Khila 18.22).
- 1542 See on these diseases G.J. Meulenbeld (1981b); P. Tivārī (1990): 253-263.

- 1544 See A. Kumar (1994: 260-261 and 312), who regards vicchinna as being either a complication of the cutting of the umbilical cord or of any other wound. The umbilical cord is not mentioned in the description. The disease is said to be caused by corrupted breastmilk; excited pitta brings about a reddish vrana, resembling the belly of a leech, in the region of the anus.

- 1547 Verses of Vangasena on the examination of the urine by means of the tailabindu are found in many later treatises. This procedure has caught the attention of early writers on Indian medicine and the history of medicine in general (see D.V.S. Reddy, 1966a: 20, 23, 79) and was noticed by an English traveller, John Ovington, in 1689 (see D. Wujastyk, 1995: 30 and 37). See on the practice of the method: D.N. Sharma, B.N. Sannd and Keerti Sharma (1975). See on the history of uroscopy in general: E. Desnos in L.J.T. Murphy (1972): 124–151.
- 1548 See AVI 275; P.V. Sharma (1976b): 78. P.V. Sharma claims that Vangasena has taken the prescription from Sodhala's Gadanigraha, which work antedates Vangasena in his opinion.

- 1561 This passage led N.N. Dasgupta (1936/37: 159) to assume that Vangasena was not a son of Gadādhara, overlooking the introductory verse mentioning explicitly Gadādhara as the father.
- 1562 Agasti, agastya and varigasena are also synonyms of a particular medicinal plant (see on it: P.V. Sharma, 1998a).
- 1563 L. Sternbach (1978: 268-269) silently accepted this identity. See L. Sternbach (1974: 16) on Śrīdharadāsa's work. N.N. Dasgupta (1936/37: 159) remained unsure whether Vangasena's father should be identified with the commentator on the Suśrutasamhitā or with the poet quoted by Śrīdharadāsa. D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1947b: 140) rejected the identity with the author of the Vaidyaprasāraka.
- 1564 J. Jolly (1901: 6; C.G. Kashikar 7) concludes this, with caution, from Vangasena's name; he adds that the majority of the MSS point to a northeastern origin. N.N. Dasgupta (1936/37: 159) expressed the same opinion, on account of Vangasena's name, the birthplace of his father, and internal evidence (unspecified by the author). Compare ABI 277.
- 1565 N.N. Dasgupta (1936/37: 159).
- 1566 Ed. h., bhūmikā; the same introduction says that a certain Rāmeśvarānanda assigned Vangasena to the kingdom of Śrīpura in East Bengal.
- 1567 The NCC (II, 10) and N.N. Dasgupta (1936/37: 159) assume that he also wrote the Ākhyātavyākaraņa. Th. Aufrecht (CC I, 548) regarded the author of this grammatical treatise as a distinct person. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 465) claims that Vangasena wrote commentaries on the Caraka- and Suśrutasanhitā.
- 1568 Cambridge Add 1707: Vaidyavallabhasanıgraha by Varigasena, completed in A.D. 1276 (see on this MS: D. Wujastyk, 1990: 114-115; D. Wujastyk says that the relationship of this MS to the usual recensions of Varigasena's Cikitsāsārasangraha is not yet clear; the MS contains, however, a recension of Varigasena's work, as appears from the description). A MS dating from A.D. 1320 is in the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona (CBORI XVI, I, Nr. 78); this MS was already described by R.G. Bhandarkar (1887: 86); see on this MS also P.K. Gode (1956b). Atrideva (1978: 36) claims that the original version of Varigasena's work dates from A.D. 1276 (the year of completion of the Cambridge MS), its revision from A.D. 1320 (the date of one of the Poona MSS).
- 1569 J. Jolly (1901: 6; C.G. Kashikar 7). Lakṣmaṇasena's date is disputed, but Jolly accepted A.D. 1119 as the year of his accession to the throne. Lakṣmaṇasena began his rule in A.D. 1178/79, 1184/85, or 1119 according to R.C. Majumdar (1948: 188), in 1106, 1109, or 1130 according to C. Vogel (IL 331). Compare D.C. Ganguly (1989a): 38-41.
- 1570 P.K. Gode (1936). Atrideva (ABI 277-278) also assigns Vangasena to the twelfth century. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 465) places him in the eleventh or twelfth century. M.A. Mehen-

- dale and A.D. Pusalker (1989: 328) have a preference for the middle of the eleventh century. The NCC (II, 10) regards Vangasena as a thirteenth-century author.

- 1577 G. Hāldār's assertion (Vrddhatrayī 465) that Vangasena's work is some sort of commentary on Cakrapānidatta's Cikitsāsangraha is far from the truth; he also claims that the Atreyasamhitā was Vangasena's model.

- 1580 P.V. Sharma (AVI 277). P.V. Sharma's date of the completion of Vangasena's work is A.D. 1210. Viśvarūpasena was the eldest son and successor of Lakşmanasena.
- 1581 P.V. Sharma maintains his date by placing Niścalakara in the thirteenth century (AVI 217–218). See: Niścalakara.
- 1582 The quotations from Vangadatta in Candrața's Yogaratnasamuccaya cannot be used for chronological purposes, being mentioned only in P.V. Sharma's list of Candrața's sources and not in those compiled by D.Ch. Bhattacharyya and P.K. Gode (see: Candrața). The same applies to the quotation in Śrīkanthadatta's Vyākhyākusumāvalī, as this commentary has been revised by a later author.

Mehendale and A.D. Pusalker, 1980: 485–486). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 470) places him in the fourteenth or fifteenth century, and distinguishes him from another Viśvanātha, a brāhmaṇa from Orissa too, who lived in the thirteenth or fourteenth century and to whom the Sāhityadarpaṇa and Pathyāpathyanighaṇu are attributed (Vrddhatrayī 467).

The title of the work is given as Mahārṇava in the introductory part of the first chapter and in the concluding verse of each taraṅga; it is also referred to as Mahārṇavain an introductory verse of the Smṛtikaumudī, ascribed to Madanapāla (Intr. to the ed., 15). It is quoted as Madanamahārṇava in the Pratāpanārasiṃha of Rudradeva (see CC I, 348 and 530; II, 77–78, 124, 210; III, 74: a work on dharmaśāstra), a work dating from the eighteenth century (Intr. to the ed., 15).

- 1633 In the introductory verses and at the end of each taranga, the prabandha called Mahārṇava is said to be a work of Māndhātar, son of Madanapāla, but it remains a mystery how it became associated with Māndhātar, since it is referred to as one of Madanapāla's works in the introductory verses of the Smṛtikaumudī(Intr. to the ed., 14), and was later called Madanamahārnava. See also P.V. Kane I.2, 794—795.
- 1634 Māndhātar's genealogy is described in the introductory verses, which almost literally agree with Madanapāla's genealogy as given in the introductory verses of his Madanapāri jāta (P.V. Kane, 1.2, 794). Cf. Madanapālanighantu.
- 1635 As stated in the colophon of each chapter.
- 1636 Chapters one to seven are called the paribhāṣākhanḍa (see the colophon of chapter seven), often referred to as paribhāṣā in chapters eight to forty, but M.R. Nambiyar (Intr. to the ed., 22) regards chapters two to four as the paribhāṣāprakaraṇa. The assertion (BDHM 1, 3, 1963, 161) that the Mahārṇava may have been larger than the part preserved, because a paribhāṣāprakarana is referred to by the author, is evidently wrong.
- 1637 Many sources are quoted in the work by name (see the list at the end of the ed.); the most important are the (Caturvarga)cintāmani (by Hemādri), many Purānas, the Karmavipākasangraha, Karmavipākasāra, Karmavipākasamuccaya, and the Śātātapīya(karmavipāka).
- 1638 See on karmavipāka: W.D. O'Flaherty (1980b): 14-15.
- 1639 There is no apparent order in the arrangement of the diseases. A long series is also enumerated in the apāmār janastotra of chapter seven. The Mahārņava recognizes many disorders which are absent from medical treatises, such as dakṣiṇānga- and vāmāngavraṇa, vakranāsatva, nīlalocanatva, kapilākṣatva, pingalekṣaṇatva, karṇakubjatva, vakrakaṇṭharoga, dīrghagalatva, hrasvapānitva, etc.

- 1681 MS Nr. 294 of CBORIcalls it Hrdayaprabodha. Compare upodghāta 3 of the ed. by Mooss, where the Śataślokī itself is called Hrdayaprabodha, and Vopadeva's commentary Candrikā. STMI (214 and 261) records a commentary, called Subodhinī, on Vopadeva's Candrakalā, and a commentary by Krsnadatta (259), called Vaidyavallabha, on the Śataślokī.

- 1690 Vāgbhaṭamaṇḍana 12. Narahari also gives a quotation (6) from Vopadeva's commentary on Vāgbhaṭa, called Āyurvedarasāyana; actually, this quotation is from Hemādri's work of that title.
- 1691 As indicated at the end of his three medical works. G.B. Palsule suggests (Intr. to his ed. of Vopadeva's Kavikalpadruma, 29) that this Dhaneśa, also called Dhaneśvara, may be the same as the Bhatta Dhaneśvara whose son Mādhava, who describes himself as a bhi-sagagranī, composed the praśasti in the Ambe inscription Nr. 3 (dated 1228/29) glorifying Kholeśvara (Singhana's general) and his son Rāma.
- 1692 There has been some confusion on Vopadeva's residence, both among ancient and modern scholars, based on wrong interpretations of the closing lines of the Kavikalpadruma and Candrakalā. Durgādāsa, the commentator on the Kavikalpadruma, did not regard Vedapada as the name of Vopadeva's native place, but as indicating a place of Vedastudy. Modern scholars (see, for example, NCC V, 67-68) considered Sārtha to be the name of Keśava's (and Vopadeva's) residence, though sārthābhidhāna in one of the concluding verses of the Candrakalā only qualifies Vedapada there. Actually, Vopadeva clearly states that he lived in Vedapada (end of the Candrakalā, Siddhamantraprakāśa, Kavikalpadruma and Mugdhabodha). This Vedapada was situated near the river Varadā (the modern Vardhā). It was the capital of king Simharāja (Bāpālāl Vaidya, 1982: 582). The country lying on the banks of this river is now called Berar (the ancient Vidarbha). The village Bedoda, in the Adilabad district of Karnātaka, at a distance of about ten miles to the west of the river Vardhā, may be identical with the ancient Vedapada (G.B. Palsule, 1953).

- 1694 AVI 218. CC I, 768: Hemādri's commentary on the Muktāphala is called Kaivalyadīpikā. H. Parāṣṭkar (1939: 34) mentions the commentary on the Harilīlā as being called Viveka, while G.B. Palsule (Intr. to the ed. of Vopadeva's Kavikalpadruma, 30) adds that this commentary, called Harilīlāviveka, was later revised by Madhusūdana Sarasvatī (see CC I, 427: Madhusūdana Sarasvatī's Harilīlāviveka, a commentary on Vopadeva's Harilīlā, described as an anukramaṇī to the Bhāgavatapurāṇa.). Compare Hemādri.
- 1695 See the verses from the Harilīlā and Muktāphala quoted by G.B. Palsule in the Intr. to his ed. of the Kavikalpadruma (29, n.9). See also Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982: 582).
- 1696 See Palsule's Intr. to his ed. of the Kavikalpadruma, 11.
- 1697 V. Śukla (I, 239) records that he was born in 1260/61. G.B. Palsule (Intr. to the ed. of the Kavikalpadruma, 33) advances some arguments in favour of the view that Vopadeva was born some decades earlier, about 1230-40: since Vopadeva refers to king Rāmacandra (1271-1309) in the introduction to the Muktāphala, he probably wrote that work during the reign of this king; the period of composition of the Muktāphala can be narrowed down to about 1275, because Hemādri wrote his commentary on that work during the early years of Rāmacandra's reign, and refers to Vopadeva's own commentary on it; if it be granted that Vopadeva wrote his works on the Bhāgavatapurāṇa not before he was about forty years old, the period of his birth would be fixed as about 1230-40.

- 8 CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 17.
- 9 P.K. Gode (1953a).
- 10 Raghunātha, son of Jayarāma, wrote a kāvya, called Rasikaramaņa, dating from 1564/65, and containing a biography of Durvāsas, who was probably a contemporary of Pratāparudra (1497–1540), the Gajapati king of Orissa; Durvāsas may have lived between 1500 and 1575 (CC I, 485 and 497; P.K. Gode, 1953a).
- 11 A MS of the Siddhāntamakaranda by Viśvarūpabhāratī, pupil of Nṛṣiṃhabhāratī, dates from 1531/32 (CC II, 138 and 172; P.K. Gode, 1953a).
- 12 CCI, 113, 155, 407, 408; II, 31, 93, 215, 233; III, 25, 89. No particulars are knownabout a Kusuma jananavidhiby Bhāvamiśra (CCI, 113; III, 25; NCCIV, 258). A Sarvauşadhanidāna by Bhāvamiśra has also been recorded (CCII, 215 and 233; STMI 37). A Vaidyanighanu, attributed to Bhāvamiśra by C.G. Kashikar (1977: 155), may be the same as the Bhāvaprakāšanighanuor the Gunaratnamālā; C.G. Kashikar mentions that this work describes 150 drugs more than those found in the Dhanvantarinighantu.
- 13 See: commentaries on the Mādhavanidāna. S.C. Banerji (1988: 125) says that Bhāvami-śra, son of Miśra Laṭakana, is known to have written a book, entitled Tāntrikacikitsā, which is based on the Rasapradīpa and Rasendracintāmaņi (Banerji refers to *G. Haldar's Vaidyaka-vṛttānta, 210).

The ophthalmological chapter (cikitsā 63) of the Bhāvaprakāsa has been translated into German by A.A.M. Esser (1930; reviewed by J. Filliozat, JA 223, 1933, 107–109, and by A. Mieli, Archeion 16, 1934: 246–248), (1932; reviewed by J. Filliozat, JA 223, 1933, 107–109). See also A.A.M. Esser (1931a), (1931b), (1933), (1934; reviewed by A. Mieli, Archeion 16, 1934, 246–248).
- 16 The Laghutrayī consists of the Mādhavanidāna, Śārngadharasamhitā and Bhāvaprakāśa; the Carakasamhitā, Suśrutasamhitā and Aṣṭāngahṛdayasamhitā are collectively known as the Bṛhattrayī.
- 17 The story of the descent of āyurveda is told twice, with Ātreya and Bharadvāja as the protagonists. The assembly of sages is described in the second version (1.35-43ab) and differs somewhat from that in the Carakasanhitā: Garga, Gobhila, Hārīta and Parāśara are added, while Abhijit, Aśmarathya, Badiśa, Bhikṣu Ātreya, and a number of other sages are absent.

- 21 The formula of madanamañ jarīvaţī is ascribed to him. Compare Rasayogasāgara, pakārādi 503.
- 22 Quoted on the nādī called samīraṇā, located in the madanātapatra, a part of the female genitals. The madanātapatra is probably the clitoris (see K. Mylius, 1995: 176–177). Candramauli is mentioned in the Pañcasāyaka (see R. Schmidt, 1911: 50).
- 23 The recipe of kandūrāksasataila, attributed to Hārīta.
- 24 This may be Bhāvamiśra's Gunaratnamālā.
- 25 It is not clear which work is quoted.
- 26 The source of the first quotation is unknown; the second one is from the Bhāvaprakāśanighantu (māmsa 58).
- 27 Compare these lists with the one compiled by P.V. Sharma (1972a): 73–74 (see for the same list, without references, AVI 188–189); additional sources, mentioned by P.V. Sharma, are: Aṣṭāṇgaḥṛdaya, Aṣṭāṇgaṣṇŋgraḥa, Bheda, Cikiṣākalikā, Rājanighaṇtu, Rasahṛdaytantra, Rasaratnasamuccaya, Rasendramaṅgala, Rasendrasārasaṇŋgraha, Rugviniścaya, Triśatī and Varāhamihira (verification proved impossible due to the inexact references). Several references to sources may be due to the editor of ed. m; examples are: Ātreya (cikitsā 1.30), Brahmapurāṇa (5.164), Cakradatta (cikitsā 1.26), Dhanvantari (cikitsā 1.272).
- 28 E.g., Bhāvaprakāśanighaṇṭu, guducyādi 191ab = Dhanvantarīyanighaṇṭu 1.70ab; guducyādi 263 = 2.38ab; āmrādi 83ab = 5.72ab.
- 29 E.g., Bhāvaprakāśanighantu, guducyādi 132ab and ef = Madanapāla 1.320; guducyādi 258-259ab = 1.262; guducyādi 297 = 1.292 a-d; guducyādi 307 = 1.316.
- 30 E.g., Bhāvaprakāśanighantu, dhānya 79ab = Rājanighantu, śālyādi 126ab. It depends on the date of the Rājanighantu whether or not it can have been one of Bhāvamiśra's sources.

- 31 Some pākas and other preparations have been taken from the Rasaratnākara according to P.V. Sharma (1972a: 70).
- 32 The Śārṅgadharasaṇnhitā is the major source of prakaraṇa seven; almost all the definitions of the series beginning with dīpana (6.212–237) are already found in the Śārṅgadharasaṇnhitā (I.4) and in Vaṅgasena (dīpanapācanadrayyalaksanādhikāra).
- 33 See the samnipāta fevers in the section on special features of the Bhāvaprakāśa.
- 34 H.H.M. Schmidt indicates in his edition of the text that Yogaśataka 5, 7, 9, 14 (= cikitsā 37.11), 16 (= cikitsā 35.20), 17 (= cikitsā 29.36), 18 (= cikitsā 68.13), 31 (= cikitsā 6.35), 37 (= cikitsā 54.146), 56 (= cikitsā 66.146), and 76 (= cikitsā 71.152) are incorporated in the Bhāvaprakāśa.
- 35 Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982): 616.
- 36 This Mallinātha, different from the well-known commentator on works of Kālidāsa, etc., cannot be dated exactly, he lived between the beginning of the fourteenth and the seventeenth century (see A.A. Ramanathan, 1971: Intr. XLVI-XLVII). The Bhāvaprakāśa quoted need not be the medical work; several treatises of the same title are known.
- 37 See JAI 157: written in Hindī, completed in A.D. 1761/62.
- 38 This work is said to date from 1500-1510, which cannot be correct if Bhāvamiśra's Bhāvaprakāśa is quoted in it.

- 55 Usually four types are distinguished: asita, pīta, līḍha and khādita (Ca.Sū.28.3).
- 56 Many of these verses are also found, in a different order, in Vangasena's treatise.
- 57 These definitions are also found, in a slightly different order, in the Sārrigadharasanhitā (I.4).
- 58 The sources of the verses on these subjects remain unknown; they have not been borrowed from Vangasena; mukhaparīksā and the tailabindu method of mūtraparīksā are absent.

- 59 The verses on this subject have been taken from monographs on nāḍīparīkṣā. See on the examination of the pulse in the Bhāvaprakāśa: N.P. Rai, S.K. Tiwari, S.D. Upadhya and G.N. Chaturvedi (1979): 114-116; S. Upadhyaya (1986): 55-57.
- 60 The order of Vangasena differs from that adopted by Bhāvamiśra.
- 61 Vangasena has visphoraka, a reading mentioned in a gloss by Bhāvamiśra.
- 62 Vangasena has babhru, a reading mentioned in a gloss by Bhāvamiśra.
- 63 Bhallu corresponds to the fevers called vidhu and phalgu by Vangasena; Bhāvamiśra mentions phalgu as a variant of bhallu.
- 64 Vangasena has karkotaka, a reading mentioned by Bhāvamiśra in a gloss.
- 65 Compare the fevers described in the Bhālukitantra as quoted in the Madhukośa ad Mā-dhavanidāna 2.18-23 (see G.J. Meulenbeld, 1974: 103-105); see G.J. Meulenbeld (1974: 165-169) for a translation of Vangasena's verses and notes on Bhāvamiśra's variants.
- 66 See G.J. Meulenbeld (1974: 169-170) for a translation of these verses.
- 67 One verse only, describing antaka (1.501), is also found in Jvaratriśatī (177), Jvaranirṇaya (4.114) and Jvaratimirabhāskara (7.309). The verses on the therapy of these fevers (1.641–694), however, also occur, at least for the major part, in the Jvaratriśatī.
- 68 See G.J. Meulenbeld (1974: 171-172) for a translation of these verses.
- 69 The references are to the verses of cikitsā 24 where the particular disorder is described.

- 191 The author mentions his name at the beginning of chapter two of the Bhāvaprakāśa. He is also called Miśrabhāva (see the colophons of ed. m and Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 42144). G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 334) calls him Bhavanāthamiśra. The name of the author is Bhavadevamiśra in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 1078). P. Hymavathi (1993: 98) is of the opinion that Bhāvamiśra belonged to a family of Miśraśaivas (see his information on this form of Śaivism).
- 192 See the colophons of ed. m; CC I, 408; Cat. IO MS Nr. 2751. Variants are Laţaka Miśra (VŚS, Preface 9; S.K. Ramachandra Rao, 1985: I, 38), Laṭakana Miśra (V. Śukla I, 227), Laṭhakana (Cat. IO MS Nr. 2657). Bhāvamiśra is quoted as Laṭakanasūnu by Sukhānanda in his commentary on Lolimbarāja's Vaidyajīvana. P. Hymavathi (1993: 98–99) says that the name Laṭaka(na) may point to a physician familiar with venereal diseases and having prostitutes among his patients.
- 193 As indicated by his name ending in -miśra (AVI 188; P.V. Sharma 1972a: 163).
- 194 The author does not refer to his place of birth or residence. It is usually assumed that he lived in Northern India: Uttar Prades (P. Rāy, 1956: 162-163; V. Śukla I, 212), Benares (J. Jolly, 1901: 2, C.G. Kashikar 3; Bhagvat Sinh Jee 38), Kānyakubja (Gaṇanatha Sena, 1924: 57), or Magadha (AVI 188 and 392; DGV IV, 291; P.V. Sharma, 1976a: 126-127). One of the very few authors to adduce arguments for assigning him to a particular region is P.V. Sharma: Bhāvamiśra mentions the famous temple of Visnupada (2.2: śrīpatipada) at Gayā; he uses regional names prevalent in Magadha and describes, e.g., types of banana which are commonly grown in Bihār, Bāpālāl Vaidya states (1982: 616) that some scholars believe that he belonged to Kāśī or Gorakhpur because even today people with names such as Latakana, Gutakana, Matakana, etc., are met with there. Bhagvat Sinh Jee (38) records the tradition that Bhāvamiśra was an inhabitant of Benares where he had no less than four hundred pupils (see also P. Hymavathi, 1993: 100). Dattarāma says in his Brhannighanturatnākara (I, 36) that Bhāvamiśra was born in the country of the Madras and settled later in Vārānasī, where he became a renowned physician with four hundred pupils. P. Hymavathi (1993: 99-102) is convinced that Bhāvamiśra belonged to the South. He argues that arrangements of the seasons which distinguish a pravrs, and do not mention a śiśira, are characteristic of Southern India (see on the seasons: Bhāvaprakāśa I.5.323-326). Other arguments adduced by Hymavathi are: the prescription of rasakarpūra against syphilis (it is said to be mentioned for the first time with this indication in the Rasapradī $pik\bar{a}$); the recommendation to patients suffering from visamajvara to visit the holy places Śrīśaila (gloss ad cikitsā 1.800) and Purușottamakșetra (gloss ad cikitsā 1.800; N.N. Bhattacharyya, 1991, and N. Dey, 1979: Purusottama and Purusottamaksetra designate Purī in Orissa); the use made of works written in the South, such as the Madanapālanighantu and the treatises of Lolimbarā ja; the reference to a place called Mudgal (Nighantu, āmrādi 127;

- said to be situated in the Kṛṣṇā-Tungabhadrā doāb; see the details given by Hymavathi). P.V. Sharma (AVI 189) interpreted the word mudgal as referring to the Mughals. The geographical names which occur in the Bhāvaprakāśa have been collected by P.V. Sharma (1972a: 72–73).

Pingree (CESS A 3, 96) states that Dalapati was the samastakaranādhīśvara of Nijāma Sāha, the ruler of Devagiri, who is probably Burḥān, Nizām Shāh of Ahmadnagar (1510–1533); his floruit is about 1511/12 according to Pingree. - 260 R.K. Jain (1981): 87. VP.P. Śāstrī (1984: 391) mentions two commentaries, called Bā-labodha and Stavaka. The Collection Punyavi jaya ji (Nrs. 100 and 101) contains three MSS of a commentary called Bālāvabodha and three MSS of a Stabaka. Compare STMI 79–80: the author of the Stabaka is Narasinha; some MSS contain a Gujarātī translation of the Yogacintāmani, called Bālabodha and written by a Narasinha. See also JAI 119 on these commentaries: the Bālāvabodha, in Gujarātī, was written by the Jain monk Ratnajaya who was probably called Narasinha when he was still a grhastha; it dates from the second half of the seventeenth century; the Tabbā, i.e., Stavaka, is identical with the Bālāvabodha.

- 272 Prescribed here against vāta diseases, not against phirangaroga as in the Bhāvaprakāśa.
- 273 This may be a synonym of hemasāgara, identified as Kalanchoe laciniata (Linn.) DC. (see WIRM V, 315-316; compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 983 and S.S.R. Bennet, 1987). Identified as nāgaramothā, Cyperus scariosus R.Br., in the Hindī commentary.
- 274 Myristica fragrans Houtt.
- 275 The same as jinginī (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 276 The same as cīnīkabābī (see Hindī commentary).
- 277 Compare kalauñ jī (= upakuñcikā); see P.V. Sharma (1997).

- 278 Kaselikā is a synonym of pūga (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 279 This is the Hindīname of kapikacchū.
- 280 The gum of Acacia catechu Willd.
- 281 A synonym of pārasīkayavānī.
- 282 Kucelā is found at Ca.Sū.27.95.
- 283 This may be Helicteres isora Linn.
- 284 Mentioned for the first time by Harsakīrti and Bhāvamiśra.
- 285 I.e., Indian senna, Cassia angustifolia Vahl, probably mentioned for the first time by Harsakīrti.
- 286 Hindī commentary: the same as ajavāyan (= Sanskrit ajamodā).
- 287 A synonym of sana.
- 288 Hindī equivalent: saphed katerī.
- 289 The author calls himself sūrīśvara śrīharşakīrtivarapāṭhaka and harşakīrtyāhvasūri in the last verses of the Yogacintāmani.
- 290 He is said to be a yativara in most of the colophons of ed. h; the colophon of Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 42584 calls him a gaṇanāyaka. Harṣakīrti praises the Jina and the Tīrthakṛt in the introductory verses.
- 291 C. Vogel, IL 358.
- 292 The colophons of ed. h call him nāgapurīya(yativara). According to R. Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 112-113) he was not a resident of Nāgpur, but belonged to the nāgapurīya śākhā of the Tapāgaccha.
- 293 See the concluding verses of the Yogacintāmani; the introductory verses call him Mānakīrti. See on Candrakīrti: P.K. Gode (1944d): 11-19. Compare STMI 79: Harşakīrti says in his Sārasvatadīpikā that his guru Candrakīrti was highly honoured by Salim Shah, i.e., Jahāngīr.
- 294 He calls himself pravarasimhasiro'vatamsa in the last verses of the Yogacintāmani.
- 295 See V.P.P. Śāstrī (1984): 391.
- 296 C. Vogel, IL 358-359. Compare M.M. Patkar's Intr. to his ed. of Harşakīrti's Śāradī yā-khya-Nāmamālā.
- 297 Harsakīrti wrote the Yogacintāmani while he was an upādhyāya (see JAI 115).
- 298 His title was ganarāja acc. to Cat. BHU 131.
- 299 J. Jolly (1901): 3 (C.G. Kashikar 4). Compare JAI 116. Atrideva (1978: 32) asserts that Harsakīrti wrote his Yogacintāmani in 1666 or 1668.

- 302 The author states that he composed part of the verses himself (11.1 and 14.26).
- 303 Verse 1.4 enumerates disorders by raktapitta, vata, kapha and samnipata, but the verses describing them have a series by pitta, vata, kapha and samnipata.
- 304 These grahas are not specified (1.4), but the verses on the treatment of these disorders (27–29ab) mention a madhyamagraha.
- 305 See 1.4: abhicāra; 1.31: kṛtyā.
- 306 Cf. Su.Śā.2.32 and A.h.Śā.1.41cd-42. See on lakṣmaṇā: Ch.L. Yadav and K.C. Chunekar (1984). The identity of this plant is disputed (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 151, 155, 920, 923, 928, 997, 1064, 1065, 1382, 1506; T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972).
- 307 Drawing a mandala in the form of a lotus flower, nyāsa of deities, etc., have their place in this ritual.
- 308 Their names are Brahmā, the Aśvins, the eleven Rudras, the twelve Ādityas, Vināyaka (= Garieśa), the eight Vasus, Skanda, Durgā, the Devamātaraḥ, Nirrti, Vāsudeva, and Vāsudeva once again.
- 309 Mostly called grahī in the Bālatantra, sometimes designated as pūtanā.
- 310 Compare: Kumāratantra.
- 311 The description of this series of grahas is remotely related to that found in the Tantrasārasamgraha.
- 312 Their names are Nandinī, Sanandanā (v.l. Vasunandanā), Ghantālī, Kaṭakolī (v.l. Kākolī), Hamkārī, Şadvāyī (v.l. Şatkārī), Himsikā, Bhīṣanī, Meṣā, Rodanā. Some of the readings are evidently corrupt.
- 313 Their names are Kumārī, Mukuţā, Gomukhī, Pingalā, Vaḍavā, Padmā, Pūtanā, Arjikā, Kumbhakarnikā, Tāpasī, Sugrahī, Bālikā.
- 314 Their names are Nandinī, Rodanī, Dhanadā, Cañcalā, Nartakī, Yamunā, Nartakī again, Kumārikā, Kalahamsā, Devadūtī, Bālikā, Vāyasī, Yakṣinī, Svacchadā, Kapī, Durjayā.
- 315 The description of this series closely agrees with that found in the Nārāyanī ya Bālatantra of Anantakumāra's Yogaratnasamuccaya, with this difference that in the latter text the series has only twelve members.
- 316 Their names are Nandanī, Sunandanā, Pūtanā, Mandalikā, Vidālikā, Şadvārikā, Kālikā, Kāminī, Madanā, Revatī, Pūtanānvitā, Adbhutā, Bhadrakālī, Tārā, Yoginī, Kumārī.
- 317 Their names are Pūtanā, Mahāpūtanā, Ūrdhvapūtanā, Bālakā, Revatī, Puṣparevatī, Śuṣkarevatī, Śakunī, Śiśumunḍikā.
- 318 A puppet (putrikā), made of a particular substance, figures prominently among these objects.
- 319 The hymn to Śītalā occurring in this chapter (13.91–103) is the same as that found in the Bhāvaprakāśa (cikitsā 60.70–82).
- 320 The Prayogasāra is also mentioned as a source in Pṛthvīmalla's Śiśurakṣāratna.
- 321 See on this commentary JAI 155-156.
- 322 JAI 155.
- 323 Rituals and mantras do not only occur in the chapters on grahas but also elsewhere in the work; see, e.g., 1.30 and 32 (durgāmantra); 4.7-10, 13-14, and 16; chapter five (twelve mantras, one for each month of pregnancy); 6.4-5 and 30.
- 324 See, e.g., many verses of chapter six.

- 325 Probably the same as iksuraka and different from goksuraka.
- 326 Celosia cristata Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 327 Identified as Bryonopsis Iaciniosa (Linn.) Staud = Bryonia Iaciniosa Linn. (Bāpālāl Vaidya, 1968: 657-658).
- 328 A synonym of mūrvā (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Identified as Clematis triloba Heyne ex Roth (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 434; mūrvā).
- 329 The names of these eight disorders are not known from other texts, but they may be found in the unedited Śiśuraksāratna or the Prayogasāra.
- 330 Ahicchattra was identified as Ramnagar, twenty miles west of Bareli in Rohilkhanda by Nando Lal Dey (1979: 2-3), as Ramnagar, near Anola in the Bareilly District by N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991: 51). V. Raghavan (1975: 180-181) reports that Durgashankar Shastri has shown that Kalyāṇa and his father Mahīdhara were Prasnora Nāgara Brahmins who called themselves of Ahicchattra jūāti; their great-grandson Venīdatta composed the Rasataraṅgiṇī in 1661/62 (Th. Aufrecht mentions in his CC only a commentary by Venīdatta on Bhānudatta's Rasataraṅgiṇī). R. Mitra (Notices II, Nr. 818) states that Kalyāna was born at Ahicchattrā.
- 331 See Mantramahodadhi 25,124-125.
- 332 His name was Phannabhatta according to Purusottamalāla Menāriyā (prastāvanā to ed. c, 2–3).
- 333 See Mantramahodadhi 25.123 (Narahari), 128 (Narasimha), 130 (Nṛsimha).
- 334 Mantramahodadhi 25.121-125.
- 335 Mahīdhara's father is called a rāmabhakta (Mantramahodadhi 25.122). Compare CC I, 444.
- 336 See P.K. Gode (1941e); the bhūmikā by Visnudatta Purohita to ed. c of the Bālatantra. Compare NCC III, 249.
- 337 The Mantramahodadhi was composed in 1588/89 (NCC III, 249). R. Mitra (Notices II, Nr. 818) claims that Kalyāna's Bālatantra was completed in Benares in A.D. 720.
- 338 According to G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 472), his real name was Rādhākānta, as appears from the Vaidyakulapañiikā.
- 339 Author of a Ratnāvalī.
- 340 NCC III, 266; XIII, 72. Another work by Kavikanthahāra, also written at the court of Rāmacandra, is the Carkarītarahasya, a grammatical treatise belonging to the Kātantra school (NCC III, 224 and 266; VI, 402).

See for a summary of the contents of the Harivilāsakāvya: B. Tripāṭhī (1977): 75–82, and for an analysis of the Ratnakalācarita, a poem in praise of the author's wife in which several interlocutors appear: B. Tripāṭhī (1977): 83–88. The Ratnakalācarita is called Ratnakalācaritra by Aufrecht (CC I, 489 and 546); he refers to it as a medical work. Other works, sometimes ascribed to Lolimbarāja, are a Lolimbarāja Ākhyāna in Marāṭhī (AVI 320; C.G. Kashikar, 1977: 155), a poem on the same subject as that of the Harivilāsakāvya, called Sundaradāmodara (PK. Gode, 1946i; Krishnamachariar 216), and a commentary in Marāṭhī on the tenth skandha of the Bhāgavatapurāṇa (PK. Gode, 1941a); many songs are also attributed to him (*V.L. Bhāve, Mahārāṣṭra Sārasvata, 2nd ed., Poona 1919, referred to by P.K. Gode, 1941a); Aufrecht (CC I, 546 and 613) adds a medical work called Lolimbarājīya and a Vaidvavilāsa(?).

- 418 This name is also written as Konera-, Koneri-, and Kauneribhatta (see CBORI XVI, 1, Nrs. 260, 265, 267, 268, 271). Rudrabhatta's mother was called Cira jāmbī according to Cat. IO Nr. 2688. Koneribhatta (1557–1630) was a physician of Khankhana and the author of a large number of works (see Cat. BHU Nr. 197).

- 421 Śrīkrsna's father was called Manda (see Cat. BHU Nr. 197).
- 422 Koneribhatta, said to have composed a voluminous work on medicine, was the court physician of 'Abdu'l-Raḥīm Khān-e-Khānān (1557–1630) (NCC V, 94; AVI 321); 'Abdu'l-Raḥīm is described as the very embodiment of erudition and culture during the reigns of Akbar and Jahāngīr (Abdus Subhan, 1984: 622); he was the son of Bairam Khān who was the guardian and protector of the young Akbar (see on Bairam Khān: S. Roy, 1984).
- 423 The Oṃkāragrantha is mentioned in Rudrabhaṭṭa's commentary on the Vaidyajī vana (NCC III.93).
- 424 Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 42652 calls it Gūdhārthadīpikā.

- 460 It is called a laghunighantu (see eds. d and e).
- 461 The number of verses differs in the MSS (see B. Tripāṭhī, 1977: 197, n.3); ed. d has fifty-seven verses; P.V. Sharma (AVI 395) mentions a number of fifty-seven verses, V. Śukla (I, 147) fifty-eight verses; one of the B●RI MSS has 155 verses (see P.K. Gode, 1941a: 91).
- 462 Some verses show complicated poetic devices; the first verse, e.g., has a double meaning and describes both Pārvatī and the drug harītakī (see B. Tripāṭhī, 1977: 128); humorous verses (hāsyavinoda) are also found in it (7cd; 115cd).
- 463 Their number is 166 according to B. Tripāthī (1977: 129-131).
- 464 Some fruits are described in the section on various substances, e.g., panasa (86), madhu-jambīra (98), bījapūra (99), tūda (100–101).

- 479 P.K. Gode (1941a: 91–92) regards the verses on tamākhū (59–65) as an interpolation, because there is no other evidence for the cultivation of tobacco in India from this early period, and because a B●RI MS mentions that these verses have been taken from some other work. B. Tripāṭhī (1977: 200–202) disagrees with P.K. Gode, because in his opinion the tobacco plant is already described in the Rājanighaṇṭu as dhūmrapattrā (this identification is disputed). See on the introduction of the tobacco plant into India and the earliest sources referring to it: P.K. Gode (1955b); (1956a); (1957a); (1958). See also DWH II, 632; Hobson-Jobson (s.v. tobacco); G. - 482 The Sanskrit names of the diseases mentioned have been listed by B. Tripāṭhī (1977): 142-143
- 483 The Padyavenī (CC I, 603; NCC XI, 160: seventeenth century; S.N. Dasgupta and S.K. De, 1947: 415: probably seventeenth century), composed in 1644 (L. Sternbach 1974: 28), quotes seven verses from the Harivilāsakāvya (P.K. Gode, 1946i: 2–6).
- 484 CC: not recorded. This work quotes four verses from the Harivilāsakāvya, it probably dates from the end of the seventeenth century (see L. Sternbach, 1974: 38, note 204).
- 485 CC: not recorded. It is not known which of Lolimbarāja's poems is quoted by Siddhicandra, who lived in the period 1588–1666 (see P.K. Gode, 1946i: 2–6).

- 489 Some MSS call him Lolambarāja (Cat. Mysore XIII, Nrs. 42635, 42640, 42645). P.K. Gode(1941a: 79 and 89) suggested that his real name may have been Tryambakarāja. P.K. Gode's hypothesis (1941a: 79–96) that the Harivilāsakāvya was written by an earlier author of the name Lolimbarāja, different from the medical writer, has convincingly been refuted by B. Tripāṭhī (1977: 5–14).

- 490 See on Divākara: B. Tripāṭhī (1977): 22–23. Divākara is referred to at Camatkāracintāmaņi 1.7, Vaidyajīvana 1.3 and 5.24. He is sometimes called Divākara Bhaṭṭa (ABI 310; AVI 319; C.G. Kashikar, 1977: 155; V. Śukla I, 146), Divākara Jośī (B. Tripāṭhī, 1977: 22), or Dinakarabhatta Jośī (see P.K. Gode, 1941a: 79).
- 491 As stated by Raghunātha in his commentary on the Harivilāsakāvya (see P.K. Gode, 1941a: 85). Junara is mentioned by Lolimbarāja in his Ratnakalācarita (55). See on Junara, Junnar or Jīrņanagara: N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 161; N. Dey (1979): 82; B. Tripāṭhī (1977: 32).
- 492 See Hobson-Jobson (s.v. soubadar).
- 493 He refers to himself as Murāsā's husband at Vaidyajīvana 1.11; Murāsā's name is also found in the Ratnakalācarita (19, 20, 72, 73). Ratnakalā is frequently mentioned in Lolimbarāja's works. See B. Tripāṭhī (1977: 23-24) on the name Murāsā and the Marāṭhī custom of changing a woman's name after she has married. There are insufficient grounds for the assumption that Murāsā was Lolimbarāja's lawful wife and Ratnakalā the name of another beloved woman (B. Tripāṭhī, 1977: 24).

- 498 According to the last verse of each sarga of the Harivilāsakāv ya.
- 499 P. Hymavathi (1993: 71-73) identifies this Hari(hara) as Harihara I of the Vi jayanagardynasty (A.D. 1336-1356 according to N. Venkataramanayya, 1980: 272). Compare on this king and the dates of his reign: R. Sewell (1972): 25-26.

- 502 B. Tripāthī (1977): 10, 17, 49; according to Raghunātha's commentary on the Harivilā-sakāvya he was even an incarnation of this goddess (P.K. Gode, 1941a: 85); Saptaśriga is mentioned at Vaidvaiīvana 1.2.
- 503 See B. Tripāṭhī (1977): 21-22. Saptaśṛṅga is one of the principal hills in the Chāndor range in the centre of Nāsik district; it is not fortified because it is sacred to the goddess Saptaśṛṅgī (J. de Bruyne, 1968: 56).

- See Winternitz III, 73 (with references); S.N. Dasgupta and S.K. De (1947): 332. A.B. Keith (1973: 137) dates the Hariviläsa to 1050; Keith (1973: 511) and Winternitz (III, 552) assign the medical author Lolimbarāja to the seventeenth century. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 472) places him in the sixteenth or seventeenth century; G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 464) mentions an earlier Lolimbarāja, who lived in the eleventh century, who wrote a Bheṣajakalpa and a (non-medical) Vaidyavilāsa. Aufrecht's claim (CC I, 761) that the Harivilāsa is already quoted in Puruşottama's Varŋadeśanā (first half twelfth century) has contributed to this early dating; B. Tripāṭhī (1977: 35–37) proved this assertion to be entirely unfounded.

Recently S. Lienhard (1984: 209) assigned Lolimbarāja, author of the Harivilāsa, and a recognized authority on medicine, to the middle of the eleventh century again, adding that he was a contemporary of king Bho ja of Dhārā.

- 547 These verses, with the exception of 2.54cd, are taken from Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.Ni.2.10-22cd = A.s.Ni.2.5-18).
- 548 Verses 2–14ab are borrowed from the Carakasannhitā (Ci.3.91–102), where they occur in a different order, 6ab has been added to Caraka's description.
- 549 Borrowed from Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.Ni.2.27-33ab = A.s.Ni.3.24-30ab).
- 550 Borrowed from Vāgbhaṭa (A.s.Ni.3.30cd-33, to which 50ab has been added).

- 551 Taken from Caraka (Ci.3.287cd-288ab).
- 552 The verses describing these fevers are, also quoted from the Bhālukitantra, found in Vijayarakṣita's commentary on the Mādhavanidāna (ad 2.18-23), and, without their ascription to Bhāluki, in Vallabhabhaṭṭa's commentary on the Triśatī (ad 69); Vangasena incorporated them in his treatise (jvara 353-391). A series of thirteen samnipāṭa fevers with the same names is found in the Parahitasaṃhitā (I.622-636). The readings present numerous variants which also affect the names of the fevers. Compare G.J. Meulenbeld (1974): 103-105 (together with the notes).
- 553 This series is said to derive from Vṛddhasuśruta. The same verses form part of the Jvara-timirabhāskara (7.308–337) and Bhāvaprakāśa (cikitsā 1.510–522).

- 555 Partly borrowed from the Astāngasaṃgraha (4.143cd-144ab = Astāngasaṃgraha Ni.2.95cd-96ab) or the Mādhavanidāna (4.143cd-144ab = Nidāna 2.41).
- 556 Borrowed from the Astārigasamgraha (Ni.2.96cd-97ab) orthe Mādhavanidāna (2.40).
- 557 4.153cd-155 = Su.U.39.59-61ab = Mādhavanidāna 2.45-47ab; 4.157 = A.s.Ni.2.100cd-101ab = Mādhavanidāna 2.43.
- 558 To be read thus (the reading is corrupt: khāraṣmādi), since 4.37 is a verse ascribed to Kharanāda by Cakrapānidatta (ad Ca.Si.3.74).
- 559 Many of the verses borrowed from these treatises were identified by the editor of the Jvaranirnaya.

- 616 Either the same as canaka or Eragrostis tremula Hochst. (DGV V, 329); a kind of grass (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 617 A Colocasia species (DGV V, 336); some kind of bulb or tuber (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.

- 618 Nicotiana tabacum Linn. (ed. g). This identification is questionable since the earliest references to the tobacco plant in Indian literature date back to the seventeenth century (see P.K. Gode, 1958: 225–232).
- 619 Bridelia retusa Spreng. (Kirtikar and Basu III, 2213–14; P.V. Sharma, 1997); Rheum nobile Hook.f. et Thoms. (DGV V. 314)
- 620 A species of Hyptis (DGV V, 325-326; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 621 Unidentified. A kind of grass according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 622 Euphorbia thymifolia Linn. (DGV V, 328; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Notidentified in ed. g.
- 623 Adansonia digitata Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 40; DGV V, 328; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 624 Unidentified; see DGV V. 328; compare P.V. Sharma (1997): a kind of grass.
- 625 Identified as Leeamacrophylla Roxb. (DGV V, 353; P.V. Sharma, 1997) and Ampelocissus latifolia (Roxb.) Planch. = Vitis latifolia Roxb. (G. Pandey, 1994: 12–17). Not identified in ed. g. Mentioned in the Hārītasamhitā (I.16.35 and 39).
- 626 A Heliotropium species (DGV V, 353); Heliotropium indicum Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 627 Dendrobium macraei Lindl. (DGV V, 353-354); Dregia volubilis (Linn.f.) Benth. ex Hook.f. (ed. g); the same as svarņa jīvantī (P.V. Sharma, 1997). The valid botanical name of the latter plant is Wattakaka volubilis (Linn.f.) Stapf.
- 628 Probably the same as dvīpāntaravacā of the Bhāvaprakāśanighantu (harītakyādivarga 108), i.e., sarsaparilla (a Smilax species) (see AVI 394); the same as kankuṣṭha (P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 629 Allium stracheyi Baker (DGV V, 330; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Notidentified in ed. g. Different from the tree called iambū.
- 630 According to some it is Dipterocarpus alutus Roxb., but it is probably to be identified as Terminalia alata Heyne ex Roth according to P.V. Sharma (DGV V, 330-331); later, regarded as Dipterocarpus turbinatus Gaertn.f. by P.V. Sharma (1997). Also identified as Shorea robusta Gaertn.f. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1481). Not identified in ed. g.
- 631 Tagetes erecta Linn. (AVI 356-357; P.V. Sharma, 1997); Tagetes erecta Linn. and Calendula officinalis Linn. (Vanausadhicandrodaya III, 125). Not identified in ed. g.
- 632 Triumfettarhomboidea Jacq. (Akhtar Husain et al., 1992: 475; DGV V, 331; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 633 Ventilago madraspatana Gaertn. (DGV V, 324; P.V. Sharma, 1997) or Cyperus rotundus Linn. (ed. g).
- 634 Probably Blepharis edulis Pers. (DGV V, 319; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 635 Tephrosia spinosa Pers. or T. uniflora Pers. subsp. petrosa (Blatt. et Halb.) Gill. et Ali (DGV V, 315) = T. petrosa Blatt. et Halb.; T. spinosa Pers. (Akhtar Husain et al., 1992: 455; P.V. Sharma, 1997); T. purpurea Pers. (ed. g.); T. petrosa Blatt. et Halb. (Kirtikar and Basu 1, 726-727).
- 636 It may be Selaginella rupestris Spreng. (DGV V, 316; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 637 Canthium parviflorum Lam. (the variety with thorns) and C. dicoccum (Gaertn.) Teijsm. et Binn. var. umbellatum (Gamble) Sant. et Merch. = C. umbellatum Wight (the variety without thorns) acc. to P.V. Sharma (DGV V, 320); C. parviflorum Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g. See on this plant: V.S. Togunashi, B.S. Venkataram and S.N. Yoganarasimhan (1983): 6-10 (six different identifications are discussed).

- 638 Cardiospermum halicacabum Linn. (Akhtar Husain et al., 1992: 105; DGV V, 317; ed. g; P.V. Sharma, 1997; WIRM II, 75); Cleome icosandra Linn. = C. viscosa Linn. (Nadkarni I, Nr. 615).
- 639 Unidentified; see DGV V, 317.
- 640 Viscum monoicum Roxb. ex DC. (DGV V, 315; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Also identified as Picrorhiza scrofulariaeflora Pennell (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1282).
- 641 This plant has been identified as Hymenodictyon excelsum Wall., but is probably a species of Pandanus (DGV V, 324; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 642 Urgineaindica Kunth (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 642; DGV V, 324; P. V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 643 Panicum psilopodium Trin. var. psilopodium Hook.f. and var. odoratum Hook.f. (DGV V, 323; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nrs. 1228 and 1229. Not identified in ed. g.
- 644 A species of Pentatropis (DGV V, 322). Also identified as Holostemma annulare K. Schum. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 878).
- 645 Gardenia turgida Roxb. (DGV V, 342; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 792. Not identified in ed. g.
- 646 Unidentified. A kind of grass (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 647 Identified as Coleus forskohlii Brig. = C. barbatus Benth. by P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 648 Eulophia nuda Lindl. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 695; P.V. Sharma, 1997; T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972), but it may also be some other plant (DGV V, 343). Compare R.E. Emmerick (1974): 42–43.
- 649 Probably Chloris incompleta Roth (DGV V, 342); a kind of grass (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Also identified as Enteropogon dolichostachyus (Lagas.) Keng ex Lazar (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 677). Not identified in ed. g.
- 650 The galls of Quercus infectoria Olivier; see G.J. Meulenbeld, 1984b: 105.
- 651 Jasminum malabaricum Wight (DGV V, 343; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Also identified as Averrhoa carambola Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 191) and Jasminum sambac (Linn.) Ait. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 959). Not identified in ed. g.
- 652 Lablab vulgaris Linn. (ed. g); not identified by P.V. Sharma (DGV V, 337: a kind of pulse).
- 653 Unidentified. A kind of grass according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 654 Unidentified.
- 655 Pogostemon cablin Benth. (P.V. Sharma, 1997); P. cablin Benth. or P. heyneanus Benth. = P. patchouli Hook.f. non Pelletier (DGV V, 338). See on the issue whether or not a Pogostemon was the source of the malabathron (Sanskrit tamālapattra) of the Graeco-Roman commerce with India: J. André and J. Filliozat (1986): 361–362. Not identified in ed. g.
- 656 A species of Ficus (ed. g). Not identified by P.V. Sharma (DGV V, 337).
- 657 Unidentified. A kind of grass (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 658 Unidentified. A kind of grass (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 659 Zingiber cassumunar Roxb. (DGV V, 339; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 1746: Zingiber pur pureum Roscoe = Z. cassumunar Roxb. Not identified in ed. g.
- 660 Putranjiva roxburghii Wall. (ed. g); a climber resembling Putranjiva roxburghii (DGV V, 339). Also identified as Ipomoea maxima (Linn.f.) G. Don = I. sepiaria Koenig ex Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 928), Mandragora officinalis (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1065; compare WIRM VI, 253), and Momordica dioica Roxb. ex Willd. (see

- M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1123). See on Mandragora, the mandrake: DWH II, 581-584; *M. Eliade (1940-42); B. Laufer (1987e); A.K. Nadkarni (1954): I, 764; G. Watt V, 143-144; WIRM VI, 253.
- 661 Unidentified.
- 662 The same as mācikā, i.e., Hibiscus cannabinus Linn. (DGV V, 351); galls of Tamarix troupii Hole (P.V. Sharına, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 663 Salvia plebeia R.Br. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1432; DGV V, 353); Barringtonia acutangula Gaertn. (ed. g; Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 214; P.V. Sharma, 1997); Barringtonia racemosa (Linn.) Spreng. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 215).
- 664 An Arisaema species (DGV V, 351). Notidentified in ed. g; not identified by P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 665 A Mucuna species (DGV V, 350); some vegetable (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 666 Unidentified. Some kind of grass (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 667 Unidentified.
- 668 The same as vanaharidrā, Curcuma aromatica Salisb. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 535; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Mentioned by Ugrāditya (Kalyāṇakāraka 4.34: śoli).
- 669 Identified as Caryota urens Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 338) and Corypha umbraculifera Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 497). A variety of tāla (P.V. Sharma, 1997). See *R.S. Singh (1987).
- 670 Acacia sinuata (Lour.) Merr. See V.S. Togunashi, B.S. Venkataram and S.N. Yoganarasimhan (1978): 99-103. See on this tree: Akhtar Husain et al. (1992): 6.
- 671 Unidentified in DGV and ed. g. A kind of grass (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Identical with babbūla according to Ādhamalla ad Śārngadharasaṃhitā II.1.12. Mentioned at Tantrasārasaṃgraha 8.32.
- 672 Unidentified.
- 673 Unidentified. The name of various plants (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Compare the śvetanāmā of Ca.Sū. 1.77, identified by Cakra as śvetāparājitā. See also Dhanvantarīyanighaṇṭu 4.84: śvetā = śvetanāmā = śvetā girikarṇikā = kaṭabhī.
- 674 Unidentified, Mentioned by Ugrāditya (Kalvānakāraka 4.29).
- 675 Impatiens balsamina Linn. (DGV V, 333; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 676 Probably Dactyloctenium aegyptium Beauv. (DGV V, 332; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 677 It may be a species of Acacia (DGV V, 332), Not identified (ed. g; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 678 A variety of Fagopyrum tataricum Gaertn. (DGV V, 313; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 679 Blepharis edulis Pers. (P.V. Sharma, 1997); B. edulis Pers. or B. boerhaaviaefolia Pers. (DGV V, 313); Echinops echinatus Roxb. (ed. g).
- 680 A Crinum species (DGV V, 348); Crinum defixum Ker-Gawl. (G. Pandey, 1977: 114-123). Not identified in ed. g and by P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 681 Girardinia heterophylla Decne. (DGV V, 349); Tragia involucrata Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Not identified in ed. g.
- 682 Acacia pennata Willd. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 21).
- 683 A kind of alābū (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Identified as Ceropegia candelabrum Linn. subsp. tuberosa (Roxb.) Huber (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 382).
- 684 Identified as Wattakaka volubilis (Linn.f.) Stapf = Marsdenia volubilis T. Cooke by D.K. Kamat (1972): 30-32. Compare the note on hemā.

- 685 Coleus amboinicus Lour. = C. aromaticus Benth. (ed. g). Also identified as Marsilea minuta Linn. and M. quadrifolia Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1075 and 1076; compare WIRM VI, 306).
- 686 Cucumis pubescens Willd. (ed. g).
- 687 A variety of alābū (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 688 Murraya koenigii (Linn.) Spreng. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1140; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Also identified as Careya arborea Roxb. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 329), Pongamia pinnata Pierre (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 594), Melia azedarach Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1082), M. dubia Cav. (absent from WIRM; see Hooker I, 545) (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1083), and Myrica nagi Thunb. (absent from WIRM; see Hooker V, 597) (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1148).
- 689 Citrullus vulgaris Schrad., the watermelon (ed. g). Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 415 and WIRM III, rev. ed., 599: Citrullus lanatus (Thunb.) Matsumura et Nakai = C. vulgaris Schrad. ex Ecklon et Zeyher.
- 690 Unidentified. The identification of karkaţa as Momordica cochinchinensis Spreng. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1122) does not apply in this case, nor can it be an abbreviation of karkataśrigī.
- 691 Cucumis sativus Linn. (ed. g; Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 527). Also identified as three different varieties of Cucumis melo Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 522–524).
- 692 Unidentified.
- 693 Lagenaria siceraria (Mol.) Standl. = Cucurbita lagenaria Linn. (ed. g).
- 694 Indigofera tinctoria Linn. (ed. g).
- 695 Cucumis pubescens Willd. (ed. g); compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 526: Cucumis pseudo-colocynthis Royle = C. pubescens Wall. (mrgākṣī). Also identified as Citrullus colocynthis (Linn.) Schrad. (see M. Abdul Kareem. 1997, Nr. 414).
- 696 Unidentified. Regarded as identical with punarnavā by some (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 251).
- 697 Unidentified. Regarded as the same as kantakārī by some (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1516).
- 698 Unidentified.
- 699 Unidentified.
- 700 Identified as Acacia pennata Willd. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 21).
- 701 Unidentified.
- 702 Acacia farnesiana Willd. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 17; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Also identified as A. leucophloea Willd. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 19).
- 703 A house lizard with a red tail.
- 704 The synonyms point to a hedgehog.
- 705 This name designates a leech found in the ears.
- 706 Some synonyms are vajradamstrā and kṛśāngī.
- 707 Probably a fox according to MW and PW.
- 708 A bedbug. Bhagvat Sinh Jee (1927: 131) mentions that in Indian medicine the bedbug is alleged to cure quartan fever if swallowed. See on the bedbug in the history of medicine: R. Hoeppli (1959; see index).
- 709 The crab-louse.
- 710 A house lizard, also called jyesthā and kudyamatsyā.
- 711 These ants are called pipīlikā, tailapipīlikā and kṛṣṇapipīlikā.

- 712 The body louse (angavastrottha).
- 713 This is the head louse, because keśakīṭa is one of its synonyms.
- 714 Achyranthes aspera Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 29).
- 715 See prastāvanā 22 and the last verses of the various chapters.
- 716 See 1.39.
- 717 He calls himself a kāśmīra (prastāvanā 22) and a kāśmīravanisatilaka (2.71); see also the last verse of the prabhadrādivarga. Narahari's reference (prastāvanā 18) to the names of drugs in the languages of Karnāia, Mahārāṣṭra and Āndhra has led some authorites to the view that he belonged to the Deccan (Bāpālāl's Intr. to the ed. of the Nighanṭuśeṣa 10, n.6; Bāpālāl, 1982: 608; H.H. Wilson, 1984: III, 236; VŚS, Preface 8-9: supposed by others to have been a brāhmana of the Deccan).
- 718 See the last verse of the ānūpādi-, karavīrādi-, śālyādi-, māṃsādi-, siṇhādi-, rogādi-, and miśrakādivarga, where the author calls himself a ruler (īśvara, īśitar).

- 725 NCC X, 357. See the colophon of CBORI XVI, I, Nr. 231. C. Vogel (IL 376) and P. Hymavathi (1991; 1993: 65–69) regard Narahari as a pupil of Śrīkantha, which is incorrect since he is said to have been a devotee of Śrīkantha, i.e., Śiva. P. Hymavathi identifies Śrīkantha as the author of the Hitopadeśa, also known as Yogaratnāvalī.

- 775 See on the contents of the Todarānanda NCC VIII, 3-5 and the Intr. to Vol. II (9-10) of the ed. of the Äyurvedasaukhya. P.V. Kane (I.2, rev.ed., 909-914) has given a more detailed description of the sections dealing with dharmaśāstra and jyotiṣa. The introductory verses state that the work is in twenty-two sections, but a twenty-third one, called Ägama-or Mantrasaukhya, is also found in part of the MSS. Two sections, those on Rājanīti and Karmavipāka, have not been preserved. The extent of the entire Todarānanda may be about 80,000 verses. Sections 1 (Sargasaukhya) and 2 (Avatārasaukhya) have been edited by Dr. PL. Vaidya, Ganga Oriental Series No. 5, Bikaner 1948 (reviewed in ABORI 29, 1948, 313-314).
- 776 The Āyurvedasaukhya has been edited and translated into English by Bhagwan Dash and Lalitesh Kashyap: (a) Materia Medica of Ayurveda, based on Ayurveda Saukhyam of Todarānanda, Concept Publishing Company, New Delhi 1980; *repr. 1987; (b) Basic Principles of Āyurveda, based on Āyurveda Saukhyam of Todarānanda, Toḍarānanda Āyurveda Saukhyam Series No. 2, New Delhi 1980; (c) Diagnosis and Treatment of Diseases in Āyurveda, based on Āyurveda Saukhyam of Todarānanda, Toḍarānanda Āyurveda Saukhyam Series No. 3, New Delhi 1981; (d) idem, Part two, Toḍarānanda Āyurveda Saukhyam Series No. 4, New Delhi 1982; (e) idem, Part three, Toḍarānanda Āyurveda Saukhyam Series No. 5, New Delhi 1984; (f) idem, Part four, Toḍarānanda

See the Intr. to vol. II (13–18) for the six MSS on which this ed. is based. See for some other MSS: BDHM 3, 3, 1965, 151–153; 3, 4, 1965, 210–211. An English translation of some chapters has appeared in BDHM 3, 1, 1965, 158–160 (part of chapter 20 of vol. I of the ed.); 3, 4, 1965, 212–219 (part of chapter four of vol. IV of the ed.); BIHM 2, 1, 1972, 6–16 (chapters one and two and part of chapter three of vol. III of the ed.).

- 777 The chapters are listed in the Intr. to vol. II (19-29) of the ed.
- 778 The verses dealing with vamana and virecana have been left out (see the Preface to vol. I, 11).
- 779 Compare the Preface (17) to vol. II: "One may hazard the guess that perhaps the work was not finally edited, and that immediately after the compilation of the material further work was discontinued".
- 780 E.g., the groups of drugs called mahat- and laghupañcamūla (2.206-209 and 30.61-63).
- 781 Chapter nineteen gives the properties of various fruits, chapter thirty-six synonyms and properties; many fruits are described twice (e.g., āmra, dāḍima, drākṣā, tinduka), some are found in chapter thirty-six only (e.g., akṣoṭa, amṛta, añjīra, bādāma).
- 782 Some foods are described twice (e.g., lājā, rāgasādava).
- 783 E.g., āhastinī (20.48cd), āluka (20.59cd-60).
- 784 E.g., ārāmašītalā (31.140cd), nākulī (31.108).
- 785 The volume on Materia Medica is the only one of the series edited by Bhagwan Dash and Lalitesh Kashyap that does not contain a list of sources referred to in the text.
- 786 The verses quoted are from Dāmodara's Ārogyacintāmaṇi (3.28, 19-20, 15 and 36).
- 787 This may be Bhāyamiśra's Gunaratnamālā.
- 788 Verses from the Mādhavadravyaguna, indicated as such in the edition, are found in chapters two to six and eight to twenty-eight; not all the verses from this source have been traced by Bhagwan Dash and Lalitesh Kashyap (e.g., 2.32 = Mādhavadravyaguna 1.14; 2.33cd = 1.15ab). P.V. Sharma's claim (see his Intr. to the ed. of the Mādhavadravyaguna, 7-8) that the chapters on materia medica of the Āyurvedasaukhya contain the entire matter of the Mādhavadravyaguna is questionable.
- 789 These verses are indicated in the edition.
- 790 It is unknown which of the two works is the earlier one.
- 791 See P.V. Sharma's Foreword to the edition and the Preface of the editors.
- 792 Indicated as such in the edition.
- 793 I: 20.55cd-56ab = Sodhalanighantu, Gunasanıgraha 255cd-256ab; 20.61cd = Gunasanıgraha 540ab; 20.62cd = Gunasanıgraha 539cd; 20.63 = Gunasanıgraha 538.
- 794 E.g., I: 16.1 = Dravyaguṇa, dhānyavarga 23; 16.6-7ab = dhānyavarga 35; 16.18 = dhānyavarga 27; 16.25cd-26 = dhānyavarga 42-43ab; 17.49 = māṃsavarga 1.3; 20.1 = śākavarga 1.2; 20.2 = śākavarga 1.1; 20.3ab = śākavarga 1.3; 19.2 = phalavarga 2; 19.4cd = phalavarga 4cd; 19.5ab = phalavarga 5cd.
- 795 The quotations from Agniveśa derive either from the Carakasamhitā or could not be traced there.
- 796 Two quotations could be traced: $1.73 = H\bar{a}ritasamhit\bar{a}$ I.1.22–23; $2.205 = Su.Ś\bar{a}.4.79$.
- 797 II: 1.37 and 3.44; 1.37 refers to Hārītasamhitā I.2.16.

- 798 II: 4.56-62 is said to be from Aupadhenava and Cikitsāsārasaingraha (4.56-59 = Ca.Ci. 15.23-26); Aupadhenava is absent from the list of sources of vol. II.
- 799 II: 4.11-14, said to be from Bhāluki, forms part of the Bhelasamhitā (Śā.4.10-15).
- 800 II: 4.293cd-294ab; Bhāradvā ja is absent from the list of sources of vol. II.
- 801 II: 4.147-150 and 267.
- 802 II: 2.175-184 and 206-209; Caksusya is absent from the list of sources of vol. II.
- 803 II: 3.101; this is a passage from Candrata's commentary ad Cikitsākalikā 16; Candrata is absent from the list of sources.
- 804 Part of the quotations could not be traced in the Carakasaṇṇhitā, many quotations are not indicated as such in the text.
- 805 II: 2.76 and 78-81, said to be from the Cikitsākalikā, actually derive from the Yogaśataka.
- 806 This text has not been identified; the verses, being in the form of a dialogue, are not from Vangasena's Cikitsāsārasamgraha.
- 807 II: 2.148-162 are verses quoted by Dalhana ad Su.Sū.15.29-31. Add 2.3 to the list of vol. II; 4.24, 64 and 66 are quotations from Dalhana not indicated as such by the compilers.
- 808 Add 6.50 to the list of vol. II.
- 809 Add 6.101cd-108 to the list of vol. II.
- 810 Add 4.50 to the list of vol. II.
- 811 II: 1.60 is close to Ca. Sū. 30.75; not only 1.60, but 1.60-69 may be quoted from Kharanāda.
- 812 Add 1, 139 to the list of vol. II.
- 813 II: 3.154 (on rtucaryā); absent from the list of vol. II.
- 814 Add 6.29 to the list of vol. II.
- 815 A treatise on śakunaśāstra, written by Narapati in A.D. 1176 (see NCC II, 72 and 149; IX, 354–355; XI, 152, 153; see also CESS A 3, 187).
- 816 II: 2. II 2-II3; 4.174-176 and 233-236; absent from the list of vol. II.
- 817 A work by Nrsimha (CC I, 355-356; II, 79 and 211; III, 75; NCC XIII, 61-62).
- 818 Add 6.134-139 to the list of vol. II.
- 819 II: 5.154; absent from the list of vol. II. CC: not recorded. See T\u00e4ntrika S\u00e4hitya 563. Quoted (5.141-154) on prognostics based on dreams.
- 820 CC: not recorded. Quoted (2.55) on the effects of corrupted vayu.
- 821 CC: notrecorded. See Tāntrika Sāhitya 561. Quoted (6.70–72) on the sixteen types of morbid stools.
- 822 Arunadatta's commentary on the Aṣṭāṅgahṛdayasanhitā; add 4.133–135 to the list of vol. II.
- 823 Add 1.20 and 4.225 to the list of vol. II.
- 824 Quoted (6.58-69) on the examination of the urine by means of a drop of oil (tailabindu).
- 825 CC: not recorded. Absent from the list of vol. II. The quotation (6.155) prescribes that a physician should not disclose a fatal prognosis to a patient or his relatives.
- 826 Many quotations are not indicated as such by the compilers; some of those indicated could not be traced.
- 827 II: 1.9.
- 828 Numerous quotations are not indicated as such.
- 829 Absent from the list of vol. II. The quotation (4.282-283) describes the twenty-four śirās of the human body and their seven hundred branches.
- 830 Quoted (4.124) on svabhāva, which makes more mātulunga fruits appear during the dark than during the bright fortnight.

- 831 Absent from the list of vol. II. A quotation (4.100-101) on the size of the jīva.
- 832 A quotation (4.25-26) on pitta and agni.
- 833 Absent from the list of vol. II. A quotation (2.230) on the ten elements of jīvita.
- 834 Add 4.53-55 (from the Videhasamhitā) to the list of vol. II.
- 835 A quotation (3.194-195) on regimen during the seasons.
- 836 CC I, 581 and III, 123: several works of this title. A quotation (2.8-12) on the five types of vāyu.
- 837 CC I, 477: several works of this title. Quoted (4.128) on the ratios of rajas and sukra leading to the conception of a male or female child. Add 4.15–16 to the list of vol. II; 4.15–16ab, said to be from the Yogapradīpa, is also found in the Bhelasamhitā (Śā.4.16–17ab).
- 838 Quoted (6.140-154) on the forecasting of the date of someone's death by means of the vaikunthīdvādaśāksara; from Śrīkantha's Yogaratnāvalī?
- 839 CC: not recorded. Quoted (4.125-126) on the subject of garbhādhāna.
- 840 II: 3.303-306 = Cārucaryā 185-188.
- 841 II: 6.8-10 = Kanāda 22-24; 14cd-15ab = Kanāda 30; 19 = Kanāda 93 and 104ab, etc.
- 842 II: 6.4ab = Rāvaņa 8ab; 5ab = Rāvaņa 6ab; 7 = Rāvaņa 11; 12 = Rāvaņa 76; 16-17 = Rāvana 75, etc.
- 843 These comments resemble those found in the Madhukośa on the Mādhavanidāna, without being identical.
- 844 Compare the examples in the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 1.8-9.
- 845 III: 1.37-39 = Ca.Ni. 8.20-22 (unidentified by the editors).
- 846 The numbering of the chapters shows some discrepancies in the MSS (see Preface to vol. VI, p.VII).
- 847 Chapter thirteen on emetic and purgative therapies forms part of chapter eight on materia medica of the Āyurvedasaukhya.

- 894 See on mandūra: D. Joshi (1986): 62-66.
- 895 Identified as copper pyrite.
- 896 Chalcopyrite and iron pyrite.
- 897 Identified as a type of chalcopyrite.
- 898 Identified as a variety of copper sulphate. See D. Joshi (1986): 129.
- 899 Identified as stibnite. Galena according to U.Ch. Dutt (1922): 74. See D. Joshi (1986): 159.
- 900 Rasāñjana is usually regarded as the exudate (niryāsa) of pītacandana, which is the same as dāruharidrā (Berberis aristata DC.), or its decoction. See D. Joshi (1986): 160.
- 901 Identified as galena.
- 902 Identified as zinc oxide by some, as antimony oxide by others. See U.Ch. Dutt (1922): 74; D. Joshi (1986): 161.
- 903 Identified as galena (see D. Joshi, 1986: 161) or as antimony. See on the history of antimony: E.O. von Lipmann (1919): 629-646, (1931): 40-42.
- 904 Not mentioned as one of the upadhātus. See on śilā jatu: Ca.Ci.3.48-65.
- 905 Cf. Ca.Ci.3.48-65.
- 906 Identified as calamine in the edition, as zinc ore by D. Joshi (1986: 134), as zinci carbonas by A.K. Nadkarni (1954: II, 131-132).
- 907 Identified as earthworms. See D. Joshi (1986): 179. Not mentioned as an upadhātu.

- 1038 The Āyurvedasaukhya has additional chapters on kṛśaroga (50), snāyu (67) and somaroga (75); the chapter on vṛddhi has been expanded (53: āntravṛddhi-kuraṇḍa-vardhma); a single chapter deals with śophavraṇa-śārīravraṇa-sadyovraṇa-nāsikāsaṇidhāna-vahnidagdha-bhagna; see Intr. to vol. II, 19–29. The chapter on mūtrakṛcchra (VI: 6) also deals with urograha; the chapter on asṛgdara (VIII: 1) discusses somaroga and mūtrātisāra.
- 1039 See especially chapter four (4.823–847) of vol. III, chapters seven and eight of vol. VIII. See also A. Rosu (1986): 243–244.
- 1040 See, e.g., II: 3.195 (explanations concerning names of medicinal substances), 229, 362, 376; 4.35, 45, 50, 65-66, 74; III: 1.6 and 11; 3.173-174; 4.17, 21, 371 (explanations concerning names of plants), etc.; 4.750 has been borrowed from the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 2.37-38; VI: 18.224 and 226 (glosses), 295 (a prescription in old Hindī). Prose passages are also quoted from the Suśrutasarphitā (see, e.g., VI: 8.109, 112, 115, 117-119).
- 1041 These groups (varga) are called udāsīna (neutral), mitra (friendly) and śatru (unfriendly); drugs of the mitravarga are to be added in a quantity equal to that of the medicinal substances in the recipe, those of the udāsīnavarga in half the quantity, and those of the śatruvarga in one-fourth of it.
- 1042 The lists compiled by the editors are incomplete.
- 1043 Add IV, 465.
- 1044 Add V, 163. The quotations from Agnivesa are partly from the Carakasanhitā; not infrequently they remain unidentified. The difference between quotations from Agnivesa and Caraka is not clear.
- 1045 Probably Nāthapaṇḍita's treatise of that name. Quoted on cauterization (dāha; III: 3.259), the treatment of fever (4.818), and bloodletting (III: 4.863).
- 1046 The greater part of the quotations from Ātreya have not been identified by the editors; their source may be a version of the Hārītasaṃhitā in some cases (III: 2.36 is quite close to Hārītasaṃhitā III: 1.26, and 3.7 to III: 2.35); some quotations are from the Suśrutasaṃhitā: III: 3.9 = Su.U.39.11cd-12ab, 3.10 is close to Su.U.39.12cd-13ab.
- 1047 Add IV, 251: a recipe propounded by Bhāskara.
- 1048 V: 11.797; III: 4.970-972 (the formula of arogyaragirasa).
- 1049 Bhāvasvabhāva is an alternative title of the Mādhavadravyaguņa; III: 4.707-709 = Mādhavadravyaguna 27.25-28ab.
- 1050 A mantra to be recited during the digging up of a medicinal plant (V: 11.818-819). Add IV, 466 (9.90-93: the recipe called vyāghrīharītakī).
- 1051 The formula of simhāmṛtaghṛta, propounded by Bodhisattva (IV: 3.172-173).
- 1052 Brahmā enjoyed the effects of Nārada's madanamodaka (IV: 2.179-187); a mantra to be recited during the digging up of a medicinal plant (V: 11.818-819); the other quotations consist of formulae.
- 1053 IV: 2.164–168 (Brahmasuta communicated the formula of kāmeśvaramodaka to Mahendra).
- 1054 On diseases in which boiled water is wholesome (III: 3.112-113); 4.1090-1094 (on the treatment of a fever that has corrupted the sukra).

- 1055 I.e., Visnu.
- 1056 Part of the quotations remain unidentified; in one instance (III: 3.22-26) verses said to be from Saivāgama derive from the Carakasamhitā.
- 1057 Verses from the Cikitsākalikā are not always referred to their source by the compilers; examples are: IV: 3.89-90 = Cikitsākalikā 154; IV: 3.155-157 = Cikitsākalikā 142; IV: 6. 103-118 = Cikitsākalikā 270-278.
- 1058 IV: 6.119–126 has been borrowed from Candrața's comments ad Tīsața's Cikitsākalikā 270.
- 1059 A mantra, to be recited against the swelling at the root of the ear (karnamulagranthi; III: 4.461)
- 1060 See NCC IX, 302. The formula of iīrakādikvātha (III: 4.541-544).
- 1061 This may be Bhāvamiśra's Gunaratnamālā.
- 1062 Add to the list: IV, 224.
- 1063 On the treatment of fever (III: 3.59); the formula of somabāṇarasa (4.946-949); the formula of viṣagarbhataila (V: 11.790-791); the treatment of the vāta disease called pāsurikā (V: 11.799).
- 1064 The quotations could not be identified.
- 1065 A mantra to be recited during the digging up of a medicinal plant (V: 11.818-819).
- 1066 NCC VII, 245: only known from this quotation. A prescription against the swelling at the root of the ear (III: 4.555).
- 1067 On patients with a mrdu- or krūrakostha (III: 4.78-79).
- 1068 Add IV, 223.
- 1069 Add III, 374: a prescription of Kapilamuni, said to be quoted from Caraka.
- 1070 To be added to the list: IV, 196.
- 1071 A recipe (III: 4.407). Compare Kanthadī, mentioned in the commentary on the Rasahr-daya.
- 1072 Add IV. 38, 47.
- 1073 A yoginī to whom prayers should be offered.
- 1074 The formula of yogamandalīguggulu, propounded by Mahābhairavanātha (V: 11.526–548).
- 1075 Add IV, 362.
- 1076 The formula of ratnagarbhapoṭṭalī (III: 4.1144–53) from the Śaivālabhakṣamata was propounded by Mṛṭyuñjaya.
- 1077 Add IV, 208.
- 1078 Probably Mathanasimha's Rasanaksatramālikā.
- 1079 Add III, 142.
- 1080 The formula of madanamodaka was expounded by Nārada (IV: 2.179-187).
- 1081 To be added to the list: IV, 166; Nivāraņa is the name of a yakşa who taught a recipe to Buddhist monks.
- 1082 NCC: not recorded. The wood of eight trees used in medicine (kāṣṭhavarga; V: 11.822); the series of verses that follow (on leaves, fruits, barks, etc.) may be from the same source.
- 1083 Add IV, 66.
- 1084 Probably the Rasarājahamsa.
- 1085 Add III, 126.
- 1086 Add III, 124.
- 1087 Many verses from this work are not indicated as such.

- 1088 On fevers (III: 3.22-26; 3.25-26 = Ca.Ci.3.11-12); 3.83: on water from wells (kūpa).

Śāstrī (1984): 389. Compare NCC XIII, 64: an anonymous (Jagatsundarī)prayogamālā is recorded, said to belong to the thirteenth century.

Chapter 2

Seventeenth-century authors and works

- 1 NCC I, 217. Pingree (CESS A I, 43; A 5, 450) gives 1674–1698 as the period of Anūpasiṃha's reign, J. Tod (1920: 1136–37, 1227) gives 1669–1698. See also: Rāma Bhaṭṭa Hosinga. Anūpasiṃha's wife is said to be the author of the Kāmaprabodha, which closely follows the text of Vātsyāyana's Kāmasūtra (R. Mitra's Notices VIII, Nr. 2554); compare NCC III, 354: Kāmaprabodha by Vyāsa Janārdana, written under the patronage of king Anūpasimha of Bīkāner, and ascribed to the latter.
- 2 See on this author, his works and his date: D.Ch. Bhattacharyya (1942): 168–175; N.N. Dasgupta (1935/36): 266; Vrddhatrayī 473. He is also called Bharatasena (last colophon of ed. a; NCC IX, 210; STMI 628–629; C. Vogel, IL 317). The author calls himself Bharata (ed. a, p.1) and Bharatamallika (D.Ch. Bhattacharyya, 1942: 172). Bharatamallika's title was Yaśaścandrarāya according to G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 473).

- 57 R. Mitra (Notices IX, Nr. 2982) describes a MS which has a text in 294 verses.
- 58 Ed. c comprises 268 verses, the order and readings of which differ at many places from b; verses, absent from b, are added (e.g., 1.25–26; 2.8, 10, 19, 27–28, 34), and a number of those included in b are omitted (e.g., 2.17–18, 20, 26–27, 30–31, 33, 35, 39); chapter nine is absent.
- 59 Hasti (3.25; 4.20 and 21; 7.5 and 22; 8.28); Hastikavi (2.1, 2 and 27; 3.30; 4.4 and 12; 6.4; 7.34); Kavi (2.34; 3.13); Kavihasti (1.10; 2.18 and 23); Suhastikavi (6.24; 7.12); Sukavi (8.20). Kavihasti's Vaidyavallabha, recorded in the NCC (III, 287), is therefore Hastiruci's work. See on the term kavi: A.K. Warder (1989): 202–214.

- 80 NCC VII, 186 and 378. Check-list Nr. 351. STMI 91-92. H.D. Velankar (1944): I, 151 (author's name Jayaratna Pandita). Aufrecht recorded a Jvaraparājayab y Jarara (CC I, 202 and 214). NCC VII, 176: by Jarara? Bhagvat Sinh Jee (1927: 210) and P.V. Sharma (AVI 318) call the author Jayaravi (absent from NCC). He is also called Jayadeva (NCC VII, 176; Kavīndrācāry asūcipatram, Nr. 1014: satīka). V.P.P. Šāstrī (1984: 387) is of the opinion that Jayaravi's Jvaraparājaya differs from Jayaratna's work of the same title.
- 81 V.P.P. Śāstrī (1984): 386-387; his name is Jayaratnagaņi acc. to R. Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 119). The author calls himself Jayaratna (V.P.P. Śāstrī, 1984: 393, n.14).
- 82 Special kinds of fever, described by the author as belonging to specific doşic types, are, e.g., ajīrņajvara, kṣetrajvara, raktajvara, khedajvara, dṛṣṭijvara, ekāntajvara, and kālajvara (JAI 121).

- 89 He belonged to the Pūrņimāgaccha (V.P.P. Śāstrī, 1984: 393, n.14), or -pakṣa (JAI 120).
- 90 V.P.P. Śāstrī (1984): 387 and 393, n.14. JAI 119. The CC and NCC record a work on jyoti-şa, called Jñānaratnāvali or Doṣajñānaratnāvalī, by Jayaratna of the Pūrnimāgaccha, pupil of Bhāvaratna from Gujarāt (CC II, 41, 43, 200, 206; NCC VII, 186 and 334, IX, 174; see also JAI 121: Doṣaratnāvalī). A Bhāvaratna (see *Jinaratnakośa I, 151) wrote a commentary on the Jyotirvidābharaņa attributed to Kālidāsa in 1711/12 (CESS A 2, 33; see also NCC VII, 356); this Bhāvaratna is therefore different from Jayaratna's teacher.
- 91 V.P.P. Śāstrī (1984): 387 and 393, n.14. JAI 120. V.P.P. Śāstrī and R. Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 120) identify this place as Khambhāt in Gujarāt; it is not recorded in N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991) and N. Dey (1979).
- 92 R. Bhatnāgar (JAI 120), V.P.P. Śāstrī (1984: 387) and H.D. Velankar (1944: I, 151) state that the Jvaraparājaya was composed in the year 1662 of the Vikrama era (i.e., A.D. 1605/

- 06), as indicated by the author himself at the end of his work (V.P.P. Śāstrī, 1984: 393, n.15; JAI 120). STMI (91) also dates it to 1605 (on the authority of S.R. Sharma, 1977: 157). The NCC (VII, 186 and 378) assigns the work to the year 1705; it adds that the Jvaraparājaya is quoted in the Jvaratimirabhāskara, which is improbable because the latter work (by Cāmuṇḍa) was completed in A.D. 1490 or 1492; moreover, a quotation from the Jvaraparājaya cannot be traced in the Jvaratimirabhāskara. D. Pingree (CESS A 3, 61) states that the floruit of Jayaratna was about A.D. 1725. Bhagvat Sinh Jee ((1927: 210) and P.V. Sharma (AVI 318) assign Jayaravi's Jvaraparā jaya to the year A.D. 1794.
- 93 NCC I, 87–88 and 350; IV, 128 and 138. The author is called Kāšīnātha (Cat. BHU Nr. 3; CBORI XVI, I, Nrs. 1–3 and 10), Kāšīrāja (Cat. BHU Nr. 1; ed. c, verses 49 and 60), or Kāšīrāma. Compare Check-list Nr. 10; STMĪ 16 and 96; Cat. BHU Nrs. 1–3; Cat. Bikaner Nr. 1375 (Nrs. 1373–74 containthesame work without mention of the name of the author); Cat. Puṇyavijaya ji II, Nrs. 6423–6429; CBORI XVI, I, Nrs. 1–3 and 10; R. Mitra's Notices VIII, Nr. 2683; VOHD II, 7 (Nr. 2898) and 8 (Nr. 3550); Bodleian d.742(6): two MSS of Kāšīrāja's Ajīrṇamaījarī, one of which dates from 1618 (see D. Wujastyk, 1990: 91); Wellcome α273: Kāšīrāja's Amṛtamañjarī. The author himself calls the work Amṛtamañjarī (last verse). Some MSS (Cat. BHU Nrs. 1 and 3; Cat. Puṇyavijaya ji II, Nrs. 6427–29) and Atrideva (ABĪ 313) call it Ajīrṇāmṛtamañjarī. The Jīrṇāmṛtamañjarī by Kāšīrāja (Kāšīnātha), with a commentary by Rāma Janaka Bhāgavata, recorded in the NCC (VII, 283), is undoubtedly the same work as Kāšīnātha's Ajīrṇamañjarī.

- 99 CC: Rājānaka Bhagavanta is not recorded. Rājānaka's commentary, called Subodhinī, has been edited (see ed. b). See Cat. BHU Nr. 1: the MS dates from 1826/27; the author probably originated from Kaśmīr. The Check-list records an anonymous commentary called Subodhinī(Nr. 10).
- 100 STMI 177: the same author wrote commentaries on the Arkaprakāśa, Sūtrasthāna of the Aṣṭāngahṛdayasaṃhitā, Mādhavanidāna, Rasamañjarī, Rasendracintāmaṇi, Vaṃśīdhara's Vaidyamanotsava, and Śaṃkara's Vaidyavinoda, which establishes that he lived after the close of the seventeenth century. See the texts mentioned.
- 101 Cat. Bikaner Nr. 1374: this is a commentary in Hindī; the MS dates from 1694/95. A commentary in Nepālī is also known (STMI 96). Cat. Punyavijayaji (II, Nrs. 6427-29) records commentaries called vrti and stabaka.

- 104 Cat. Bikaner Nr. 1374. Momin Ali (1990: 153) assigns the Ajīrņamañjarī to A.D. 1811.

- 105 NCC II, 153; IV, 132 and 134: this author also wrote the Yaduvaṃśakāvya, a grammatical poem like the Bhaṭṭikāvya (compare M. Krishnamachariar, 1989: 145). A Cikitsā-paddhati by Kāśīrāja, recorded in the NCC (IV, 139), may be the same work as the Kāśīnāthapaddhati. The Kāśīnāthā (CC I, 104) is probably identical with the Kāśīnāthapaddhati. Check-listNr. 114 (Āyurvedasāra, by Kāśīnātha?) and 899 (Vaidyakapaddhati, by Kāśīnātha, son of Śaṃkara and Rohinī). STMI 96-97: one MS of the Kāśīnāthapaddhati dates from 1761/62. Cat. BHU Nr. 32: by Kāśīnātha, son of Śaṃkara and Rohinī; Nr. 33: by Bhaṭṭācāryakāśīnātha. CBORI XVI, I, Nrs 244-245: the work is called Vaidyakapaddhati in the colophons; the author refers to it as kāśīnāthasya paddhatih, an āyurvedasya sāraḥ; Nr. 244: the author was a son of Śamkara and Rohinī.

- 110 Cat. IO Nr. 2710.
- 111 NCC V, 13: the work is known under various titles: Şaţkarmadīpikā, (Kṛtyā)pallavadīpikā, etc. Edited in the Indrajālavidyāsaṃgraha, 179–264 (see on this publication: Kakṣapuṭa). The author calls his work Kṛtyāpallavadīpikā (1.1), but its title is Şaţkarmadīpikā in the colophons. See on this work: T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta (1981): 122; Tāntrika Sāhitya 662–663. A Ṣaṭkarmamāṇjarī or Vaśakāryamañjarī, ascribed to Rājarāma Tarkavāgīśa, appears, at least in its formerpart, to have been copied almost verbatim from the Ṣaṭkarmadīpikā (see T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta, 1981: 122).

- 116 See T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta (1981): 139–140. This date is corroborated by a reference to the Yoginītantra as one of Kṛṣṇānanda's sources (1.3); the Yoginītantra is assigned to the sixteenth century (T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta, 1981: 85). P. Pal ((1981: 3) comes to the conclusion that Kṛṣṇānanda's life spanned the second half of the sixteenth century. The NCC (V, 13) regards Kṛṣṇānanda as a contemporary of Caitanya (1485–1533), an opinion rejected by P. Pal (1981: 3), who considers it to be more likely that he was born around the time Caitanya died.

- 336 See CC I, 647 and 649; STMI 701; AVI 397. According to the Intr. to the edition of the Śivakoṣa, it is a treatise on nosology, therapeutics, and materia medica; it was written before the Śivakoṣa. R. Mitra (Notices IV, Nr. 1481) recorded the following details about the Samjñāsamuccaya: it deals with doṣadhātvādimarmasamjñā, roganidāna, parimāṇa, ahita, dravadravya, dravyaguṇa, viśoṣaṇalaṅghanādi, triphalādināmāni, āhāravikṛtyādi, rasakalkādi and kledādi; the author states at the end that the work aims at elucidating obscure passages from the Laghuvāgbhaṭa (i.e., the Aṣṭāṅgaḥṛdayasaṃhitā), and that his father. Caturbhu ia, has been his teacher.
- 337 Edition: The Śivakoṣa of Śivadatta Miśra, critically edited by R.G. Harshe, Sources of Indo-Aryan Lexicography 7, Poona 1952. This edition contains a detailed introduction (53 pages) and a number of appendices: I, index to authors and works cited in Śivadatta's Koṣa and commentary; II, current popular names cited in the commentary with their Sanskrit equivalents; III, index to words in Śivakoṣa; the edition is based on two MSS: *CBORI Nr. 616 of 1895–1902 (complete, with commentary) and a MS of the Bodleian Library, Oxford (*Nr. 408 of the Wilson Collection: text only, incomplete). Śivadatta mentions the title of his work at the end as Śivābhidhakoṣa. See on the Śivakoṣa: ABI 429-433; AVI 397–399; DGV IV, 296–297; P.K. Gode (1942b); P.V. Sharma (1976a): 139–140.
- 338 The author calls it (3) a nānārthauşadhakoşa.
- 339 This title is found at the end of the commentary.

- 357 I.e., the Rājanighantu.
- 358 Ajayapāla's Nānārthasamgraha.

- 359 The author of the Amarakosa.
- 360 See NCC I, 332. An Amaracandra was the author of the Ekākṣaranāmamālikā. See C. Vogel, IL 369. The Intr. to the ed. (15) mentions a second Amaracandra (see NCC I, 332–333), who is probably the one referred to in the Śivaprakāśa because the quotations are Iiterary in character and not from a lexicon.
- 361 NCC I, 335: Amaradatta and Amarācārya wrote a lexicon called Amaramālā. Quoted by lexical commentators (Intr. to the ed., 15). See, for example, Bhānu jidīk şita's commentary on the Amarakosa.
- 362 Unidentified.
- 363 Written by Mahākṣapaṇaka. See the Intr. to the ed., 14-15; C. Vogel, IL 319-320.
- 364 NCC II, 211: a poem attributed to Kulaśekhara.
- 365 See the Intr. to the ed., 13: Aśokamalla has a work named Nighanţusāra to his credit (NCC I. 433).
- 366 See the Intr. to the ed., 14: unidentified, unless it is the same as the Bhāvaguṇaratnamālā of Bhāvamiśra.
- 367 Bhāvamiśra's work of this name; compare Bhāvagunanāmamālā.
- 368 The same as Vopadeva.
- 369 I.e., Cakrapānidatta.
- 370 See the Intr. to the ed., 13: Candra or Kavicandra is the author of the Cikitsāratnāvali, but Bhattoji Dīkṣita quotes a lexicographer named Candra. The quotation is not from Candranandana's Madanādinighanţu. Sivadatta is greatly indebted to Subhūticandra, a commentator on the Amarakoṣa, quoted by him as Subhūti.
- 371 The quotation in the commentary to 231 may be from Candranandana's Madanādinighantu; the quotation to 340 is indeed from that work (= Madanādinighantu 24.11).
- 372 NCC VIII, 322: probably the same as the Damayantīkathā of Trivikrama. See the Intr. to the ed., 17: probably the Nalacampū of Trivikramabhatta.
- 373 Compare: Authorities mentioned in the Carakasamhitā.
- 374 Most of the quotations are from the Dhanvantarīvanighantu.
- 375 The single quotation, mentioning Gālava and Ātreya, does not occur in the Dhanvantarīyanighantu.
- 376 Dharanidāsa's Anekārthasāra. See C. Wogel, IL 326-327; Zachariae (1897): 26.
- 377 NCC IX, 247-248: two grammarians called Dharmadasa are recorded.
- 378 See the Intr. to the ed., 15: the author of a lost koşa that, judging from the quotations, may have been a botanical lexicon.
- 379 NCC IX, 209-210. A lexicon by Purusottamadeva. See C. Vogel, IL 333-334.

- 393 See the Intr. to the ed., 16: a botanical lexicon is quoted.
- 394 Identified as a commentary on Śarrigadhara's Triśatī in the Intr. to the ed., 13. Compare Vidvadvaidyavallabhā.
- 395 The author of the Mādhavanidāna is meant according to the Intr. to the ed., 13, but that is not correct. The quotations are from Mādhavakara's Paryāyaratnamālā.
- 396 See the Intr. to the ed., 15: also quoted by Rāyamukuṭa. Mādhavī is one of the sources of Bhānu jidīksita's commentary on the Amarakosa.
- 397 See the Intr. to the ed., 15, where it is supposed to be the lexicon, called Mālatīmālā, quoted by Mallinātha. The quotations are not from the Paryāyaratnamālā, nor from Halāyudha's Abhidhānaratnamālā or the Sadrasanighantu (also called Abhidhānaratnamālā).
- 398 I.e., Rāyamukuţa, the commentator on the Amarakoşa. See C. Vogel, IL 315-316; Zachariae (1897): 22.
- 399 Unidentified. Compare Bhāvagunanāmamālā.

- 441 An old lexicon. See the Intr. to the ed., 16; Zachariae (1897): 6. Compare CC I, 616.
- 442 Compare Utpalinī.
- 443 The author mentions his name at the end of the Śivakoṣa and its commentary, as well as at the beginning of his Sam jāāsamuccaya (Intr. to the ed., 2; AVI 397).
- 444 See the end of the Sivakoşa, and the beginning and end of the Samjñāsamuccaya. A Caturbhuja was the author of the Rasakalpadruma (NCC VII, 315); a Caturbhujamiśra, son of Maheśamiśra of the Kurala family, wrote a commentary on Govinda's Rasahṛdaya (NCC VI, 315). A connection between these Caturbhujas and the father of Śivadatta appears to be improbable (AVI 397; P.K. Gode, 1942b); the NCC (VII, 315), however, regards Caturbhujamiśra, son of Maheśamiśra, as the father of Śivadattamiśra. Compare Caturbhuja's commentary on the Rasahṛdaya.

- 445 Caturbhuja is called karpūrīya in the colophons of the Śivakosa and its commentary.

- 503 Not quoted by name in the Brhadyogataranginī. See Tāntrika Sāhitya 561.
- 504 Not quoted by name in the Brhadyogataranginī.
- 505 Not quoted by name in the Brhadyogataranginī.
- 506 STMI 226.
- 507 NCC XII, 106. Actually, quoted only in the Brhadyogataranginī.
- 508 E.g., Yogataranginī 1.9 = Bṛhadyogataranginī 1.11: from Hārīta; 1.42 = 1.49: from Tīsaṭācārya; 3.17 = 4.18cd-19ab: from Vaidyālamkāra; 4.30 = 5.38cd-39ab: from Yogaratnāvalī; 4.32 = 5.40cd-4 lab: from Matimukura; 8.59-63 = 9.66cd-72ab: from Kṛṣṇātreya; 25.1 = 74.4: from the Rasaratnapradīpa; 27.33-36 = 76.94cd-98ab: from Hārīta.
- 509 Yogataranginī 3.22 = Bṛhadyogataranginī 4.25cd-26ab: from Bhadraśaunaka; 3.18 = 4. 20cd-21ab: from Goraksamata.
- 510 F.R. Dietz (1833: 149-150) mentions a Laghuyogatarangi ni by Śrīlakṣmanapandita, said to be an epitome of the Yogatarangi ni; this work is absent from the CC. The Rasā yanasangrahaquotes a Motiyogatarangi ni.
- 511 The verses are from the Vaidyālamkāra according to Brhadyogataranginī 4.29-32.
- 512 These verses are from the Sārasaingraha according to Brhadyogataranginī 5.29-30. Vighneśa is the same as Ganeśa. See on Ksetrapāla: R.K. Bhattacharjee and S.C. Mitra (1926); J. Gonda (1963): 254; P. Pal (1981): 97; M. and J. Stutley (1977): 153-154; Vettam Mani. Batuka(-Bhairava) is the child (batuka) of the goddess Candī. See on Batuka: M.L.B. Blom (1989): 21; E. Chalier-Visuvalingam, 1996: 261-262; P. Pal (1981): 97-99; M. and J. Stutley (1977): 39.
- 513 Also found in the Brhadyogataranginī (6.29-30).
- 514 Absent from the Brhad yogataranginī.
- 515 Also found in the Brhadyogataranginī (44.30–40).
- 516 The Bṛhadyogatarangiṇī has two formulae of rasakarpūra (118.15-17 and 23-28ab), which are different from this one.
- 517 This series differs from the first series found in the Bṛhadyogataranginī, not only with respect to the names and their order, but especially with regard to the descriptions of the symptoms; the verses enumerating these symptoms do not occur in any other text known to me; they are said to be from Bhallūkamata.

- 518 This fever is related to that called vidhu in the Kāśyapasaṃhitā (viśeṣakalpa 27-28ab; p.215), and vibhu in the Bhālukitantra (quoted in the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 2. 18-23); babhru = vidhu in Vangasena (jvara 353) and babhrain the Bhāvaprakāśa (cikitsā 1.455-456).
- 519 Related to phalgu of the Kāśyapasaṃhitā (viśeṣakalpa 28cd-30; p.215), the Bhālukitantra (quoted in the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 2.18-23) and Vangasena (jvara 354-356), bhallu of the Bhāvaprakāśa (cikitsā 1.459-461).
- 520 Compare visphuraka of the Bhālukitantra (quoted in the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 2.18–23), visphoraka of Vangasena (jvara 359–360ab), and visphoraka = visphāraka of the Bhāvaprakāśa (cikitsā 1.447–448).
- 521 Related to sīghrakārin of the Bhālukitantra (quoted in the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 2.18-23).
- 522 Related to kaphphana (v.l. phamphana) of the Bhālukitantra (quoted in the Madhukośa ad Mādhavanidāna 2.18-23), it may be related to kampana of Vangasena (jvara 362-363).
- 523 Related to vaidārika of Vangasena (jvara 364-368).
- 524 Compare karkoṭaka of Vangasena (jvara 369-375).
- 525 Compare sammohaka of Vangasena (ivara 376-377).
- 526 Samgrāma is the same as yāmya according to a gloss of Bhāvamiśra ad Bhāvaprakāśa, cikitsā 1.447-448; see on yāmya: Bhāvaprakāśa, cikitsā 1.474-476.
- 527 Compare krakaca of Vangasena (jvara 380-381ab).
 528 Related to kūtapākala of the Kāsyapasamhitā (višesakalpa; p.217) and Vangasena (jvara
- 384–390).
- 529 This yogin is not referred to in the four formulae of the same name found in the Rasayogasāgara (akārādi 263-266).
- 530 The same verses also occur in the Bṛhadyogataranginɨ (71.66-72ab). Atrideva (ABI 304) states that this description is the earliest one according to Durgāśańkar Śāstrin; according to others (B.V. Subbarayappa, 1971: 307) śańkhadrāva is already described in the Rasa-pradīpa (sixteenth century).
- 531 Also described in the Bṛhadyogataraṅgiṇī (71.24-25).
- 532 This verse is absent from the Brhadyogataranginī.
- 533 Also mentioned in the Brhadvogataranginī (107.36 and 38).
- 534 The Bṛhadyogatarangiṇī deals with vṛddhi, koraṇḍa and bradhna in one chapter (107).
- 535 Described in chapter 124 of the Brhadyogataranginī.
- 536 Also mentioned in the Brhadyogataranginī (126.33cd-35ab).
- 537 The Bṛhadyogatarangiṇī also states that Śītalā and Caṇḍī should be appeased in cases of masūrikā (and kodrava) (126.77).
- 538 Also described in the Bṛhadyogatarangiṇī (143.53-63).
- 539 Called Mukhamanditikā in the Brhadyogataranginī (144.93).
- 540 Called Nirrtā in the Brhadyogataranginī (144.100).
- 541 Called Pilapiņdikā in the Bṛhadyogatarangiņī (144.101).
- 542 Compare the names found in Rāvaṇa's Kumāratantra. See on the version of the Kumāratantra found in the Yogatarangiṇī: J. Filliozat (1937): 4 and 64.
- 543 The same as candana according to a gloss of the Bṛhadyogataraṅgiṇī; compare PW and MW.
- 544 Trimalla calls it Yogatarangini (1.4; granthapraśasti 1 and 5). Edited by R.R. Hanumanta Pādhye Śāstrī, Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series Nr. 71, Ānandāśrama Press, Poona, 2 vols., 1913, 1914.

- 545 See, e.g., the formulae of rasakarpūra.
- 546 E.g., 13.1-4 on vastraparīkṣā; 44.1 on pariņāmaśūla; 55.2 on kuraņḍa.
- 547 Numerous passages in prose occur in chapter 42; prose is also found at 86.28, between 105.52 and 53, at the end of chapter 132, and in the section of chapter 144 taken from the Kaumāratantra.
- 548 See, e.g., 18.32; 42.118, 142, 162, 176, and 179; 48.7; 59.200; 64.114; 67.7–9 and 49; 71. 172; 84.20; 86.41; 87.12 and 18ab; 88.34; 91.72; 95.64; 105.47ab and 89; 108.39 and 46; 110.42; 139.37; 147 264, 269, and 394.
- 549 The cycle begins with vasanta in the Yogatarangini, with hemanta in the Bṛhadyogatarangini.
- 550 This chapter belongs to the nigharitu-section (chapters twenty to thirty-seven) of the Br-hadyogatarangini.
- 551 Some descriptions are incorporated, e.g., 32.31cd; 34.1–4, 50–65, 163, and 187cd–188ab; 37.31–33; see for some synonyms, for example, 32.27cd; 34.70 and 115.
- 552 This chapter is identical with Śārngadharasamhitā I.4.
- 553 Compare the kañcukas described in the Rasādhyāya.
- 554 Described in 42.21.
- 555 This is usually the first samskāra.
- 556 Two varieties are described: śvāmabola and mānusabola (43.31-34).
- 557 The two varieties are khatī and pāsānakhatikā (43.39).
- 558 Two varieties are distinguished: nalika and renuka (43.54-57).
- 559 Two varieties are distinguished: tarikana and nīlakanthākhya (43.64cd-66).
- 560 It is, a sequence of eight additional verses excepted, identical with chapter thirty-nine.
- 561 E.g., 57.20, 23–24, 32cd–34, 91–92, 101–102, 107cd–108ab; 66.2–3; 71.18cd–19; 110. 25–27; 111.12–18; 116.2–11; 128.1–4.
- 562 E.g., 57.93.
- 563 See, e.g., 57.137cd-139ab; 71.15cd-16ab; 125.13-14.
- 564 E.g., the complications of fever in chapter sixty-one.
- 565 See Triśatī 71, 84, 99, 106, 119, 124, 131, 136, 139, 144, 150, and 166.
- 566 See Triśatī73-80, 82-83, 85-98, 100-105, 107-118, 120-123, 125-130, 132-135, 137-138, 140-143, 145-149, 151-165, 165-171.
- 567 Three verses are devoted to this subject in the Yogataranginī (21.16–18).
- 568 This description (71.20c-f) is identical with the definition given by Adhamalla ad Śārngadharasamhitā I.7.11, which is very close to A.h.Sū.8.12cd-13ab; dandālasaka = vilambikā according to Dalhana ad Su.U.56.9.
- 569 This description (71.24cd-25ab) is identical with Ādhamalla's definition ad Śānigadharasamhitā I.7.27ab.
- 570 This term is also employed by Bhāvamiśra (Bhāvaprakāśa, cikitsā 24.58).
- 571 It is identical with the description of vardhma in Vrnda's Siddhayoga (40.20).
- 572 Not described in the Mādhavanidāna.
- 573 This disease produces a kind of ulcers (vraṇa) of the sexual organs in both men and women, it is not clear whether or not it is the same as syphilis, mentioned as phirangāmayaka in the preceding chapter (117.37); the preparation of rasakarpūra, usually a specific against syphilis, is described in the chapter on rativraṇa; a separatechapter on phiranga is absent; Trimalla regards phiranga as a kind of upadaṃśa (phirangākhyopadaṃśa: 117.30).
- 574 Rasakarpūra, a mercurial compound itself, is prescibed against sūtadoṣa by Trimalla.

- 575 Part of this chapter (135.1–9ab) is also found in Vangasena (strīroga 80–87).
- 576 This chapter agrees rather closely with the verses on the same subject, also borrowed from Nāgārjuna's Yogasāra, inserted between Vangasena, strīroga 90 and 91.
- 577 This disease is also described in the preceding chapter (140.56-58).
- 578 Absent are, e.g., kataka (Madanapāla 6.27), seva (Madanapāla 6.56−58), peruka (Madanapāla 6.61), elāphala (Madanapāla 6.65), tintidīka (Madanapāla 6.88), kapitthapattrī (Madanapāla 6.92), kośāmra (Madanapāla 6.96−97), and lavalī (Madanapāla 6.106−108).
- 579 Added are, e.g., umbikā (30.13–14ab), kiraţā (30.45ab), šimbitikā (31.36), mahacchimbitikā (31.37ab), cakravartišāka (32.30cd–31ab), nāḍīka (32.34cd), karambī (32.35ab), raktamārīṣa (32.37cd), bṛhatkarañja (35.39ab), and ahittha = candasūra (36.24).
- 580 Compare 32.29cd-30ab on jīvanta with Madanapāla 6.36; Trimalla refers in this verse to Bheḍa and others in whose opinion raktavāstūka is a synonym of jīvanta; compare also 30.30 on ādhakī with Madanapāla 10.47, and 36.22 on methikā with Madanapāla 2.27.
- 581 Compare Madanapāla 10.47 and 51; ādhakī and tuvarī are often regarded as synonyms.
- 582 Madanapāla calls both vegetables gṛñjana (Madanapāla 7.65 = Bṛhadyogataraṅgiṇī 32.69; 7.78 = 32.80cd.
- 583 E.g., kelūţa (32.75cd) is identical with Madanapāla's keyūra (7.95), adhalnpuṣpī (34. 165ab) with Madanapāla's arkapuṣpī (1.279), vauhāra (36.29) with Madanapāla's cauhāra (2.35), vicakila (37.69ab) with Madanapāla's vicchinna = bhūmanḍalī (3.101).
- 584 See, e.g., 36.29, 32, and 44ab.
- Additions are, e.g., the verses on sūpa and parpaṭa 16.47-64ab), yamalā roṭikā (81cd-82ab), veṣṭanī (85cd-87), kacavallī (88), and puṣpavaṭī (93-97). The description of jalavallikā or kuṛḍalikā (116cd-120ab), called jalebī in the vernacular, has been borrowed from Madanapāla who calls it kundalikā (11.92-96).
- This is the same as copacīnī, because it occurs in a recipe called copacīnībāspa (91.86-90).
- 5.7 This quotation does not occur in the Yogataranginī, which does not quote a text called Āgama.
- 38 The formula of rasādigutī. The Āśvineya is not quoted in the Yogataranginī, which reproduces another formula from the Aśvinīkumārasamhitā.

Chapter 3 Eighteenth-century authors and works

- 1 NCC: not recorded. ABI 321. Vrddhatrayī 473. VŚS, Preface 7: a treatise on medicine by Ānandavarman in Sanskrit with explanations in Bengali, intended for medical students who are not versed in Sanskrit. An anonymous Sārakaumudī or Cikitsāsārakaumudī is also recorded: NCC VII, 31; Cat. 10 Nr. 2681 (different from Ānandavarman's work because it is written entirely in Sanskrit).
- 2 NCC I, 156: Vaidyakalpadruma by Ananga. See: P.C. Choudhury's Introduction (9) to the edition of the Vaidyakasāroddhāra; Biswanarayan Sastri (1960): 98; V. Raghavan (1975): 31.
- 3 One MS ascribes the work to Pratāpasimha himself (see STMI 23).
- 4 NCC I, 162 and XII, 246: by Ananta, son of Keśavācārya; written in 1886. Check-list Nr. 573: written in samvat 1829. STMI 23: dating from A.D. 1886. CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 136: by Ananta, son of Keśavarāya; written in samvat 1829 = A.D. 1886 (sic! samvat 1829 = A.D. 1772/73). C.G. Kashikar (1977): 153: written in A.D. 1792. The confusion regarding the year of completion is due to the error in CBORI (samvat 1829 = A.D. 1886), and to wrong dating of the MS; at the end of the MS the year of completion is said to be vikrama nava-yuga-aṣṭa-indu, i.e., 1849 = A.D. 1792/93. The correct year of composition is found in M.M. Patkar (1938): 86-87. The treatise begins with an eulogy of Pratāpasinha and his ancestors.
- 5 See M.M. Patkar (1938).
- 6 NCC VI, 16.
- 7 Mentioned as the name of the author of the Kāvyakaumudī by Th. Aufrecht (CC III, 105).
- 8 Probably Bhāskara's work of this title. Bhāskara was a famous astronomer and mathematician of the twelfth century.
- 9 CC: not recorded.
- 10 This may be the Vaidya jīvana.
- 11 CC: not recorded.
- 12 To this list should be added Pārāśara (see CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 136).
- 13 NCC: not recorded. Momin Ali (1990): 152 (placed in the eighteenth century). Bhagvat Sinh Jee (1927): 208: "By Balaram of Benares; it treats of hygiene, nosology, astrology, diseases resulting from folly and vice, materia medica, and therapeutics"; l.c., 122: "In the beginning of the eighteenth century, a well-known physician of Benares composed a large work called "Atarikatimirabhaskara", an important work on the Indian healing art; in the chapter on Materia Medica, he has not only availed himself of the labours of all who had gone before him, but has thrown a new light on some of them; tea is one of the few new drugs he has embodied in his work; his great-grandson, Vaidya Sohamji, was one of the most scholarly and celebrated physicians in Northern India; he died very recently."
- 14 Bāpālāl Vaidya (1982): 619.
- 15 CC I, 125 and 648: author's name Keralībasavarāja; II, 154: author's name Basavarāja. NCC XIII, 245: the author is called (Keladī)Basavarāja or Ikkeri Basava Nāyaka or Basavappa. Check-list Nr. 798.

- 90 NCC: not recorded. STMI 54; the same author composed a medical work, called Ma'ā-lijāt-e-Iskandarīyā, in Persian; it was completed in A.D. 1780.
- 91 CC I, 542; Ill, 115: author's name not mentioned. NCC IX, 65. Cat. Rajasthan Oriental Research Institute (Jodhpur Collection) Nr. 4828 (P.M. Jinavijaya, 1965: II B, 230–231). The work is sometimes ascribed to Kāšīnātha (CC II, 223; NCC IV, 128; STMI 105; Cat. München Nr. 401). Alternative titles of the Lainghanapathyanirnaya are Pathyanirnaya (Cat. Rajasthan Oriental Research Institute, Jodhpur Collection, Nr. 4783: P.M. Jinavijaya, 1965: II B, 226), Pathyāpathyanirnaya, and Lainghanapathyavicāra (JAI 152). A Lainghanapathyanirnaya by Lakṣmīnātha is also recorded (Check-list Nr. 416; Cat. München Nr. 401; AVI 325).
- 92 Cat. Oxford Nr. 1605. The work contains 307 verses according to Th. Aufrecht (Cat.

- München Nr. 401), 304 according to R. Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 153). See on its contents also JAI 153-154.
- 93 This Amṛtasāgara cannot be identical with a work of the same title written in Hindī and ascribed to Mahārāja Pratāpasiṃha of Jaypur, because the latter flourished in the second half of the eighteenth century (see CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 11). It may be the same work as the Cikitsāmrta(sāgara), also quoted by Dīpacandra.
- 94 Hamsarāja's Bhisakcakracittotsava.
- 95 This may be Milhaņa's Cikitsāmṛta or Devadāsa's Cikitsāmṛtasāgara.
- 96 A Cikitsāratnābharaņa was written by Sadānanda Dādhīca and a Cikitsāratna by Jagannāthadatta.
- 97 This may be Śrīkanthapandita's Hitopadeśa. Compare Vaidyakasārasamgraha.
- 98 Probably Bhāskara's work of this name.
- 99 Lolimbarāja's Vaidyajīvana? Compare AVI 325.
- 100 Probably Śrīkanthapandita's treatise of this name, also called Hitopadeśa.
- 101 Works of this title were written by Manu and Kāśīrāma.
- 102 Probably Śamkara's Vaidyavinoda.

- NCC: not recorded. Check-list Nr. 101. The Ekoji to whom the treatise is attributed is probably Ekoji II, son of Tula jā I (1729–1735) and grandson of Ekoji I (1676–1683). Ekoji I was a half-brother of Śivājī and a son of Śāhajī I (1619–1664). Compare Tulajā I. See on Ekoji I and II: K.R. Subramanian (1988): 16–24 and 42–43.
- NCC VI, 142. STMI 65: by Gopālasena, also called Gopāladāsa; composed in 1722; a treatise in 11,700 verses. AVI 312: by Gopāladāsasena; written in śāka 1663 (= A.D. 1741/42; this is an error: the year of composition is rāma-anka-tarka-kṣiti, i.e. 1693 = A.D. 1771/72). R. Mitra, Notices IV, Nr. 1618: by Gopālasena, completed in 1778/79; the extracts, as given by R. Mitra, show that the author calls himself Gopāla at the beginning and Gopāladāsa at the end of the treatise, which deals with āyurvedic prescriptions and rasayogas against the diseases, from jvara up to viṣa; their order is probably based upon the Mādhavanidāna; added are chapters on kacchaparoga and urograha (between hṛdroga and mūtralcrochra), as well as a chapter on aśvaśānti; chapters on sneha, sveda, vamana, etc., are found at the end.

- A number of sources are indicated in ed. i by means of abbreviations (the edition does not contain a list of these abbreviations with their elucidation). Some of the sources are (a few references only are given): Bhāvaprakāśa (13.110-123; 14.22), Cakradatta (13.91-94, 132-138, 145-155; 14.12, 13, 16-17, 19, 20, 21), Carakasaṃhitā (13.139-144), (Rāvaṇa's) Kumāratantra (71.182-193), Rasacandāṇśu (69.51-57, 106-111), Rasaratnākara (17.34-36), Rasendrasārasaṃgraha (13.50-54, 77; 14.87, 101-110), Śāriŋadharasaṃhitā (12.129-133), Suśrutasaṃhitā (13.19), Vaidyajīvana (15.35; 16.28), Yogacintāmaṇi (9. 181-185), Yogaratnākara (13.68-71; 14.34, 35-36). The fifth impression of ed. c mentions the following sources: Jyotiṣatattva (1.20), Nandipurāṇa (1.51-56), and Sāracandrikā (1.16-19).
- 116 The disorder called āhaka (5.1419) is the same as nāsā įvara (commentary ed. i).
- 117 Bhaisai yaratnāvalī 470 is identical with a passage of the Gandhavāda (unit 13).
- 118 This disorder is a kind of emaciation in children (bālaśoṣa) according to the Hindī commentary.
- 119 Syapnameha denotes nocturnal emissions.
- 120 These diseases are absent from eds. g and k. The fifth ed. of c distributes them in its own way over the body of the work and a parisista. See on the mental disorders among this group: G.J. Meulenbeld (1997): 206–208.
- 121 Contemporary physicians and their views are referred to (94.1).
- 122 Disorders of the stomach.
- 123 The main aetiological factor is the unavailability of the love object; its symptoms are not described. The treatment proposed consists of union with the love object, the rousing of antagonistic emotions, and drugs. Smaronmāda is also described in the Ağurveda vijñāna; it is referred to in Dattātreya's Rasacandāinśu (see Rasayogasāgara, cakārādi 71).
- 124 A mental disorder that resembles hypochondria; its causes and symptoms are not described. Soothing (sāntvana) and consolation (āśvāsana) are recommended, as well as drug treatment (for example, with the very fragrant gandharājataila). Gadodvega is also described in the Āyurvedavi jīāna.
- 125 A mental disorder; its causes and symptoms are not described. A feigned (katrima) type is referred to, preferably to be treated by handing out blows (tāḍana). Brahmamoha is also dealt with in the Āyurvedavijñāna.
- Probably a nervous disease; its causes and symptoms are not mentioned. Acalavāta is also discussed in the Āyurvedavijnāna.
- 127 This disease is said to be caused either by amenorrhoea in women or by parasites. Compare the description of tāṇdavaroga in the Āyurvedavijāāna.

- 128 This disease is not described; it may be a nervous disease, accompanied by piercing pains, e.g., a neuralgia.
- 129 A disease characterized by an unsteady gait (= skhālitya); its causes and symptoms are not described.
- 130 This disease is said to be caused by the overindulgence in the dish called khañjanī, i.e., a kind of dāl; its symptoms are not described.
- 131 The accumulation of fluid in the thoracic cavity. The withdrawal of this fluid, by inserting an instrument called triktircaka into one of the intercostal spaces, is described, a procedure undoubtedly borrowed from western medicine.
- 132 A polyuria, closely related to somaroga. This chapter also describes mūtrātisāra as the second stage of bahumūtra.
- 133 Somaroga is a type of polyuria that is due to the decrease of soma in the body (soma is the same as fatty tissue according to the Hindī commentary); mūtrātisāra occurs when somaroga is neglected. Neither somaroga nor mūtrātisāra are said to be restricted to women, as declared in earlier āyurvedic treatises.
- 134 Madhumeha (diabetes mellitus) is regarded as having the same causes as bahumūtra.
- 135 Involuntary ejaculation.
- 136 Equated with gonorrhoea in the Hindī commentary.
- 137 Equated with albuminuria in the Hindī commentary.
- 138 Chyluria and haemoglobinuria.
- 139 Sexual impotence, of which seven types are distinguished.
- 140 Diseases of the kidneys.
- 141 Probably diseases of the gall-bladder. Gallstones are described at 94.7.
- 142 Syphilis.
- 143 The Guinea worm disease.
- 144 Diseases caused by the consumption of insufficiently purified mercurial compounds or the overconsumption of these compounds.
- 145 Hydrocephalus.
- 146 Tremor of the head.
- 147 It is difficult to say which disease is meant by mastişkacaya. Mastişkāpacaya is shrinking of the brain; a synonym, mastulungakşaya, is already found in the Suśrutasamhitā (Śā. 10. 42). Chapter 101 is about the general therapy of cerebral diseases.
- 148 Sun-stroke; three stages of this disorder are described. See on sun-stroke in India: N. Chevers (1886): 396-403.
- 149 This disease is often identified as hysteria. It is described as occurring in women only and its causes are manifold: anaemia, amenorrhoea, grief, lack of affection on the part of the husband, widowhood, etc. The rate of incidence of this disease is said to increase. Yoṣāpasmāra is also described in the Āyurvedavijñāna. See on a particular form of mass hysteria in India: A.N. Chowdhury (1991). See on the history of hysteria: M.S. Micale (1995); B. Simon (1978).
- 150 Itching of the vulvar region.
- 151 A women's disease.
- 152 A person who attempted to commit suicide is called an apamumūrşu. The application of artificial respiration is described in this chapter. See on suicide and ritual death in India: J. Filliozat (1963), (1967); Kane II.2, 925-928; K. Karttunen (1997): 64-67; A.B. Keith (1921); J.J. Meyer (1952): 394; S. Settar (1989), (1990); H. von Stietencron (1967); U. Thakur (1963); L. de la Vallée Poussin (1921); W. Ward (1981): 246-251.

- 153 See, e.g., tāndavārilauha (81.4-5), snāyusūlaharacūrņa (82.2-3), mihirodayarasa (82.4-5), khañjanikārirasa (84.4-5), bahumūtrāntakarasa (86.35-37 and 38-42), ojomehāpaharasa (90.22-24).
- 154 See, e.g., 5.392, 406 (a mantra addressed to the monkey called Trivida cures aikā-hikajvara), 408-409 (mantras against fever), 415 (homage paid to Soma and his attendants, Īśvara, and the mātṛgaṇa cures irregular fever), 416 (the recitation of the Viṣṇusahasranāmastotra cures all fevers), 417 (homage paid to several deities cures all fevers), 682 (homage to Karuṇādhāra and Khasarpaṇa should accompany the use of pānīyavaṭikā), 8.92 (the yoginī called Nāyikā should be honoured during the ingestion of bṛhannāyikācūrṇa), 30.208 and 247, 35.34-35, 101.33 (homage to Lakṣmī and Nārāyaṇa is required during the pṛeparation of laksmīvilāsataila).
- 155 A large number of these names are mentioned by P.V. Sharma (1997), who refers to page numbers of the 2nd ed. of ed. g, which, unfortunately, do not agree with those of the 8th ed., the only one of ed. g available to me.
- 156 The same as ācchukavrkṣa (commentary ed. i), Morinda citrifolia Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1130; WIRM VI, 423).
- 157 The same as cāngerī (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 1217.
- 158 Identical with gandhaprasāraņī according to the Hindī commentary of ed. i.
- 159 The same as ayapan, Eupatorium triplinerve Vahl (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 160 Unidentified.
- 161 The same as agastya (commentary ed. i). Compare Dalhana ad Su.Sū.38.10: vasuka is the same as buka, called bakapuspa in the vernacular. Bakapuspa is also identified as Diplocyclos palmatus (Linn.) Jeffrey = Bryonia laciniosa Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 629; compare S.S.R. Bennet, 198).
- 162 The same as agastya (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 163 Unidentified.

- 224 S. Ārya (1984): 110-111. AVI 257 and 280. VŚS, Preface 7. P. Rāy (1956: 229-230) assigns it to the sixteenth-seventeenth century. The year of completion is A.D. 1893 according to Momin Ali (1990: 154). R.T. Vyas assigns the work even to A.D. 1200 (see the Intr. to his edition of Gangādhara's Gandhasāra, 54).

- 229 This was either the father of Ekojī I, or the Śāhajī who reigned at Tanjore from 1684 to 1712 (see K.R. Subramanian, 1988: 26–36). The work therefore belongs to the seventeenth or eighteenth century.
- 230 NCC IV, 128: composed in 1736 when king Jayasimha was reigning in Jaypur. Compare Dīpacandra.
- 231 CC II, 15 and 25. Oṣadhināmamālā. NCC III, 105-106 and V, 69: Auṣadhanāmamālā or Laghunighanṭu; compare V, 66: Keśavabhaṭṭa's Nighaṇṭu and Laghunighanṭusāra. Checklist Nrs. 95 and 410. STMI 98. CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 34: Auṣadhināmamālā and Laghunighanṭa. The title mentioned in the text itself (first and last verse) is Laghunighaṇṭa; the last verse refers to the Auṣadhināmamālā, which is either an alternative title or the name of a work of which the Laghunighaṇṭa formed part.
 - Edition: 'vyāsa' ityupākhyena 'keśavarāmeṇa' viracitaḥ laghunighaṇṭah; Laghu-Nighanta by Vyasa Keshavaram, ed. by A.S. Paranjpe, G.S. Pendse and V.A. Bedekar, published for the I.D.R.A. (Indian Drugs Research Association), Poona, and for "Vaidyak" in honour of Dr. N.A. Purandare of Bombay; Publication No. 3, March 1962, Poona. This edition is based on two MSS (CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 34 and a MS from the collection of the Asiatic Society of Bombay; see the Editorial Notes, 9–10).
- 232 The 'Editorial notes' contain the statement that 158 drugs are mentioned out of which 129 belong to the vegetable and nineteen to the mineral kingdom, while one (kastūrī; 40-41ab) belongs to the animal kingdom. This statement is incorrect. Twenty drugs described are of mineral origin, one is of animal origin, and the remaining 137 drugs are derived from plants.
- 233 The explanation put forward in the 'Editorial notes' (11-12) that these drugs were not in common use or not available in the region where the author lived is unsatisfactory; kuṭaja (Embelia ribes Burm.f.), for example, is found throughout India.
- 234 Compare, e.g., 2 and Dhanvantarīyanighantu 1.1; 7cd-8ab and Dhanvantarīyanighantu 2. 44; 9 and 2.46; 10cd-11ab and 2.48; 13cd-14ab and 2.52; 18cd-19ab and 2.61, etc. The arrangement of the drugs in the Laghunighanta is also strikingly similar to that of the Dhanvantarīyanighantu. The very numerous corrupt readings of the Laghunighanta can easily be corrected by help of the Dhanvantarīyanighantu.
- 235 The names pārasīkayavānī and sugandhakarabha are absent from the Dhanvantarīyanighantu, the name sugandhakarabha is not even known from any other text. Usually pārasīkand khurāsānī yavānī are identical (see, e.g., Āḍhamalla ad Śārngadhara II.5.26; khurāsānī (and its variants) are of infrequent occurrence in Sanskrit medical texts (see, e.g., Harṣakīrti).

- 236 Usually two types only, the white and the red punarnavă, are described (see e.g. Dhanvantarīyanighantu 1.274–277 and Bhāvaprakāśanighantu, gudūcyādivatga 231–233), but the Rājanighantu (5.404–411) mentions three types (white, red and blue).
- 237 The grounds for assigning this date to the work are not given. One of the MSS (the Bombay MS) was completed in 1860/61.

- 241 Unedited.
- 242 The title is mentioned in the second verse of section one and at the end of section three.
- 243 Compare on the Hikmatprakāśa DGV IV, 301-302.
- 244 The colophon calls the work a pārasīpratibimba. Th. Aufrecht (CC I, 766) regards it as translated from the Arabic.
- 245 I.e., quinsy.
- 246 I.e., cataract.
- 247 The țīkā ad Hikmatprakāśa II, verse 209, remarks that uṣṇavāta is the same as sojāka. The commentary on the Siddhabheṣa jamanimālā mentions saujāka as a synonym of uṣṇavāta and aupasargikameha (gonorrhoea). See Siddhabhesa jamanimālā.
- 248 He is also called Mahādeva (AVI 326), Mahādevapandita (CC I, 436 and 766, II, 100, 184 and 237; Vrddhatravī 467), and Mahādeva Bhatta (STMI 126-127).

- 250 CC II, 100. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 467) and Atrideva (ABI 318) assign the author to the thirteenth-fourteenth century.

- 261 NCC X, 84: a compendium of herbs. STMI 157: an elaborate treatise on materia medica and the practice of medicine.

- 262 NCC X, 29. The Prayogāmṛta is also ascribed to (Vaidya)cintāmaṇi, the pupil of Narasiṇihakavirā ja (NCC X, 84; XIII, 78). See on this work: Vaidyacintāmaṇi.

- 265 See: commentaries on the Mādhavanidāna.
- 266 This commentary is referred to in the Siddhantacintamani.
- 267 The NCC (X, 84) ascribes a commentary on the Dravyagunarājavallabha (i.e., its revised version) to Nārāyanadāsa Vaidya, preceptor of (Vaidya)cintāmani, which makes Nārāyanadāsa Vaidya, i.e., Nārāyanadāsa Kavirāja, identical with Narasimhakavirāja. See: Nārāyanadāsa Kavirāja.
- 268 H. Śāstrī. Notices I. Nr. 266: 5.586 verses.
- 269 R. Mitra's Notices VII, Nr. 2382.
- 270 The CC (I, 298 and 561) and NCC (X, 78 and 91) ascribe the five works mentioned to Nārāyaṇa (Bhiṣa j), whose chronological position is somewhat uncertain. Umeśacandragupta assigns him to the eighteenth century (VŚS, Preface 6–7), but a MS of the Vātaghnatvādinirṇaya already dates from 1700/01 (NCC X, 91). Nārāyaṇa Bhiṣaj and Nārāyaṇadāsa Kavirāja are often mixed up (see Nārāyaṇadāsa Kavirāja). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 467) is of the opinion that an author Nārāyaṇabhaṭṭa, who lived in the thirteenth century, was the author of the Kaṇṭhaprakāśa and Vaidyacintāmani; he identifies him with the Nārāyaṇa who revised the Wākhyākusumāvalī on Vṛṇda's Siddhayoga and also attributes to him a commentary, called Padyadyotinī, on the Gītagovinda (NCC: not recorded). These claims are for the greater part repeated by Atrideva (ABI 318). Momin Ali (1990: 153) assigns Nārāyaṇa, author of the Vaidyāmṛta, to the eighteenth century.
 - O.P. Jaggi (IV, 44) also mentions Nārāyaṇabhaṭṭa as the author of the Kaṇṭhaprakāśa and Vaidyacintāmaṇi. A work of the name Kaṇṭhaprakāśa is not recorded in the NCC (does it refer to the revised version of Śrīkaṇṭhadatta's commentary on the Siddhayoga or is it the same as the Karmaprakāśa?).
- 271 CC I, 83: by Nārāyana Bhatta. NCC III, 201.
- 272 CC I, 611: by Nārāyana Bhatta.
- 273 CC I, 613: by Nārāyaṇa.
- 274 CC I, 613 and NCC X, 78: by Nārāyaṇa. VŚS, Preface 6-7: Vaidyavṛnda and Vaidyāmṛta, two works of Nārāyaṇa on the use of mercury, are not fully appreciated by the physicians of Bengal; they seem to have been composed in the last (i.e., eighteenth)century. Atrideva (ABI 318) also classifies the Vaidyāmṛta as a rasagrantha.
- 275 NCC II, 152; X, 76.
- 276 NCCVII, 27 and X, 82. STMI 159: said to be devoted to the diagnosis of diseases by means of characteristics of the pulse, and to be the first chapter of a work called Kanādisamhitā. Vrddhatrayī 469.
- 277 NCC XI, 217. Cat. BHU Nr. 275. R. Mitra's Notices I, Nr. 210. AVI 445.
- 278 NCC X, 76.
- 279 CC: not recorded. Vrddhatrayī 469.
- 280 NCC X, 84. The Nānauṣadhapariccheda may also be the last chapter of the Rājavallabhanighantu.
- 281 The Siddhāntasanıcaya is also regarded as a commentary on another commentary of the Triśatī, the Vaidyavallabha of Vallabhabhatṭa (Vṛddhatrayī 469; compare NCC X, 82: Siddhāntasanıcaya on Vaidyavallabhā; Vaidyavallabhā may be an alternative title of the Triśatī in this case). Compare Śārnigadhara's Jvaratriśatī.

- 282 See: Rājavallabhanighantu.
- 283 Mentioned only in P.C. Choudhury's Introduction (9) to the edition of the Vaidyakasā-roddhāra; not recorded in the CC. The NCC (X, 84) regards Nārāyaṇadāsa Vaidya (evidently identical with Nārāyaṇadāsa Kavirāja) as the preceptor of (Vaidya)cintāmaṇi, which would mean that he is the same as Narasiṇhakavirāja; on the other hand, the NCC (X, 82) assigns Nārāyaṇadāsa (Kavirāja), author of the Cikitsāparibhāṣā and a commentary on the Vaidyavallabhā (i.e. probably the Jvaratriśatī), to the fourteenth-fifteenth centuries.
- 284 Probably Hastiruci's Vaidyavallabha, but Vaidyavallabha is also an alternative title of Śārngadhara's Triśatī.
- 285 NCC X, 129. CBORI XVI, 1, Nrs. 188-189: the author is called Nidhi at the end of the work, Navanidhirāma in all the colophons of MS Nr. 189 and in the Hindī commentary.
- 286 The Anupānamañ jarī is also ascribed to Viśrāma, a pupil of Pītāmbara (CC I, 16 and 582; NCC: not recorded; CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 8: the word viśrāmagranthakāraka occurs at the end of the MS; AVI 315 and 324; JAI 160–162). Viśrāma was the author of the Vyādhinigraha, a collection of formulae, written in 1782/83 (AVI 315) or 1811/12 (JAI 162).
- NCC I, 204; XII, 102. CBORI XVI, 1, Nrs. 8-9. *Edited (author: Viśrāma), with a Hindī commentary, by the Gujarāt Āyurveda Viśvavidyālaya, Jāmnagar 1972. An Anupānamañjarī has also been published, with a Telugu translation, at Madras in 1915 (Ādi-Sarasvatīnilaya Press) [IO.San. B.101].
- 288 JAI 160-162.

- 290 Arjunapura has been identified as Añjār; Kūrmadeśa is the same as Kaccha (AVI 324; JAI 160-162), the modern Cutch (see N.N. Bhattacharyya, 1991: 162; N. Dey, 1979: 82).
- 291 The Anupānamañjarī has been assigned to 1765/66 (CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 8), 1767/68 (AVI 324), 1767/68 or 1770/71 (CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 9), and 1785/86 (STMI 169–170; JAI 162).

References are toed. d, which does not present the original text of the Amṛtasāgara, but is a re-arranged version in Hindī by Jāārasarāmaśarman, the author of the Anupānadarpaṇa (see: Twentieth-century authors). Jāārasarāma translated the original Mārwāṛī into Hindī, divided the material into four sections and numerous chapters, expanded the text of the first two sections, and added Sanskrit verses; those parts of his text which deal with nidāna and cikitsā are rather faithful renderings of the original, although some chapters (for example, the chapter on bālaroga) differ considerably from it. The Amṛtasāgara is also known as Pratāpasāgara (see Jñārasarāma's bhūmikā to his edition). Another work written under the reign of Pratāpasiņha and sometimes ascribed to him is Ananta's Pratāpakalpadruma.

- 49 Sarsaparilla (sālsā), i.e., Smilax species (AVI 201), or a synonym of ākāśavallī (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 50 A synonym of arkaparņī (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 51 Mastic, i.e., the resin of Pistacia lentiscus Linn. (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 52 Capsicum annuum Linn. (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 53 Coptis teeta Wall. (mismī tītā) (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 54 The same as mājūphala (the galls of Quercus infectoria Olivier) (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 55 It may be Lallemantia royleana Benth. (tukhme bālungā) according to P.V. Sharma (AVI 201). See Abhinavanighantu 177, nr. 619: bālungā; H.M. Said (1970): 396–397 (tukhmi-balanga); Daljīt Simha (1974): II, 520–521 (tukhme bālungā). Picchilā is also a synonym of śālmalī (Dhan vantarinighantu 5.127).
- 56 Cucurbita maxima Duchesne (P. V. Sharma, 1997).
- 57 Rheum australe D. Don = Rh. emodi Wall. ex Meissn. (revandacīnī) (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997; compare S.S.R. Bennet, 1987).

 21: ulatkambal is Aconitum heterophyllum Wall. ex Royle.
- 59 The author states in a gloss (p.543) that it is the same as olatkambal (see preceding note).
- 60 The mucilaginous juice of Aloe barbadensis Mill. = A. vera Tourn. ex Linn. (musabbar) (AVI 201; Daljīt Simha, 1974: II, 279–282).
- 61 I.e., gañjā (the dried flowering and fruiting tops of the female plants of Cannabis sativa Linn.) (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997); it is said to promote fertility in women (p.540).
- 62 Urginea indica Kunth. (vanapalāndu) (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 63 The seeds of Plantago ovata Forsk. (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 64 A resin extracted from pine trees (gandhāvirojā) (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997). See on gandhāvirojā: Daljīt Siṃha (1974): II, 303-306.
- 65 Salep (sālammiśrī, i.e., the tuberous roots of some orchid genera, including Orchis, in particular Orchis latif olia Linn.) (W. Ainslie, 1826: I, 368-369; AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
 Compare Abhinavanighantu 242, nr. 855: sālabmiśrī is the same as Sanskrit sudhāmülī.
- 66 Piper cubeba Linn.f. (śītalcīnī) (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997); prescribed against aupasargikameha.
- 67 Cassia angustifolia Vahl (sanāy, i.e., senna) (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997); prescribed against mastiskavepana.
- 68 Ipomoea nil (Linn.) Roth (kālādānā) (AVI 201).
- 69 Camellia sinensis (Linn.) O. Kuntze, i.e., the tea plant (AVI 201; P.V. Sharma, 1997). See on tea in India: Hobson-Jobson; S.P. Sangar (1999): 93–105; G. Watt II, 65–83; WIRM III, rev. ed., 98–177.

- 70 Eupatorium triplinerve Vahl (ayāpān) (AVI 201; Dal jīt Simha, 1974: II, 58-59).
- 71 See AVI 201.
- 72 Vātāda is a synonym of vātāma.
- 73 Compare AVI 201-202.
- 74 The verses describing these fevers are identical with those of the Bhāvaprakāśa; the first series also occurs in Vangasena's Cikitsāsārasaṃgraha, the third series in Śārngadhara's Trićatī
- 75 It is difficult to identify these diseases, not recorded in other texts; medaḥsūtra appears to be fatty degeneration of the heart, viksepikā myocardial infarction.
- 76 See on this subject: D. Wujastyk (1987).
- 77 The same as bradhna or vardhma.
- 78 Probably hemiplegia of traumatic origin.
- 79 A sudden loss of consciousness in young children.
- 80 This disorder makes intercourse very painful.
- 81 This disorder, characterized by growths on the external genitals, and caused by vāta, blood, or masturbation (karakarman), requires surgical treatment; anaesthesia is mentioned.
- 82 The diseases from āgantuja pakṣāghāta up to jarāyuroga are absent from the Bhai-saiyaratnāvalī.
- 83 See on the mental disorders of this group: G.J. Meulenbeld (1997): 206-208.
- 84 The aetiology and symptomatology of this disease (the accumulation of fluid in the thoracic cavity), absent from the Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī, are described; its therapy is the same as in the latter treatise, but differently phrased.
- 85 This chapter is much shorter than that on the same subject of the Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī; the therapeutic prescriptions are similar.
- 86 The aetiology and symptoms, absent from the Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī, are described; the disease is not only caused by the absence of the beloved one, but also by disorders of the reproductive organs, as well as by disorders of sukra and of anila (= vāta); the treatment is similar to that of the Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī.
- 87 The aetiology and symptoms, absent from the Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī, are described; gadodvega resembles hypochondria; a variety occurring in males, snāyugada, is characterized by fear of losing one's potency; the Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī has more verses on its therapy than the Āyurvedavi jīāna.
- 88 The nidāna and treatment of this disease, which may be hysteria, are similar to those found in the Bhaiṣaijyaratnāvalī.
- 89 This disease, also called brahmamoha, is a mental disorder, elaborately described in the Āyurvedavijñāna, but not described at all in the Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī; tattvonmāda appears to be a materialist and atheistic world view; its treatment, consisting of both chastisement and drugs, is similar in both treatises.
- 90 This disease is also called acalasaṃsthāna, tādavasthyagada, aparivartaka, and aparivrtti; it appears to be a nervous or mental disease, to judge from its description in the Āyurvedavijāāna; acalavāta makes the patient stay immobile in a frozen attitude, thus suggesting a catatonia-like stupor; its treatment resembles that found in the Bhaisajyaratnāvalī.
- 91 Khañjanikā appears to be a disorder of the nervous system, to judge from its description; it is caused by the overindulgence in khañjanī, a kind of pulse (dvidala), and may therefore be the same as the kalāyakhañja of the Suśrutasamhitā; its treatment is like that described in the Bhaiṣaj yaratnāvalī.

- 92 The verses on tāndavaroga consist of a conversation between Ātreya and Urabhra; this disease, which has many causes, is characterised by dancing-like movements of the limbs; it may be a choreatiform syndrome; its treatment is like that described in the Bhaisajyaratnāvalī.
- 93 This disease is characterized by neuralgic pains; three varieties are distinguished: ūrdhvabheda, ardhabheda, and adhobheda or nimnabhedaka; its therapy resembles that of the Bhaisa ivaratnāvalī.
- 94 Probably diseases of the gall-bladder; gallstones are described in this chapter; the treatment resembles that of the Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī; the chapter of the Bhaiṣajyaratnavālī on this disease is longer than that of the Āyurvedavijñāna.
- 95 Diseases of the kidneys; the chapter of the Bhaişajyaratnāvalī on vṛkkaroga is much longer.
- 96 A polyuria, not clearly distinguished from somaroga; mūtrātisāra is said to be the second stage of bahumūtra; the verses describing both diseases are identical with those of the Bhaisajyaratnāvalī; the verses on treatment are much more numerous in the Bhaisajyaratnāvalī.
- 97 This disease, mentioned in the title of the chapter, is not described there, but in the chapter on prameha (chapter 66).
- 98 The descriptions of somaroga and its second stage, mūtrātisāra, are close to those of the Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī; the characterization of mūtrātisāra is identical with that of the same disorder as a sequel of bahumtitra; verses on treatment are absent from the *Āyurvedavijñā*na.
- 99 Loss of sperm by involuntary ejaculation or by masturbation (karakarman).
- 100 This disease is clearly described as gonorrhoea; it is also called vraṇameha and āgantukameha; its treatment is more elaborately described in the Bhaisajyaratnāvalī.
- 101 Albuminuria; its treatment is more elaborately described in the Bhaisajyaratnavāli. Compare Cakra ad Ca.Ci.6.11: ojomeha = madhumeha.
- 102 Chyluria and haemoglobinuria. Compare Cakra ad Ca.Ci.6.11: lasīkāmeha = hastimeha.
- 103 The description of the seven types of dhvajabhanga (sexual impotence) is the same as in the Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī; the latter treatise is more elaborate with regard to its treatment. Compare the types of klaibya described in the Carakasamhitā (Ci.30).
- 104 Hydrocephalus, also called mastişkodaka; its treatment is almost identical with that described in the Bhaişajyaratnāvalī.
- 105 Tremor of the head, also called sīrṣavepana and -vepathu. This disorder is described as sirahkampa at A.h.U.24.19ab and A.s.U.28.26.
- 106 Mastiskacaya is hydrocephalus; mastiskāpacaya is atrophy of the brain.
- 107 Sunstroke, called sardīgarmī in Bengali; the three stages, described in the Bhaiṣajyaratnā-valī, are not mentioned in the Āyurvedavijāāna.
- 108 A disease characterized by an unsteady gait; its causes and symptoms are not described in the Bhaisajyaratnāvalī; its treatment is close to that of the latter treatise.
- 109 Pruritus of the vulva.
- 110 A women's disease; the description of its causes, symptoms, and treatment is close to that found in the Bhaisajyaratnāvalī.
- 111 A person who tried to commit suicide is called an apamumürşu; artifical respiration (śvā-sakriyā) is described in this chapter, which is close to that on the same subject of the Bhai-şajyaratnāvalī.
- 112 The sane as sui ābīja (= kinva) according to a gloss.

- 113 The same as durālabhā or mañ jisthā (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 77 and 1406).
- 114 See, e.g., pages 47, 61, 137, 148, 256, 414, 538, 545, 546, 623.
- 115 Compare the date of the first edition.
- 116 NCC: not recorded. Mentioned by Momin Ali (1990: 153) as a work completed in 1876.
- 117 NCC: not recorded. Ed., with Bengali transl., Viśvavinoda Press, Azimganj 1877 [IO. 1722].

- 461 See the commentary on some characteristics of this unidentified plant.
- 462 Unidentified
- 463 Capsicum annuum Linn. according to P.V. Sharma (1997); compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 325.
- 464 See Kṛṣṇarāma's description of this unidentified plant.
- 465 Mentha piperita Linn. (tīksnapattra) according to the commentary.
- 466 Unidentified.
- 467 Unidentified.
- 468 According to the commentary a substance of a red colour.
- 469 Clausena pentaphylla (Roxb.) DC. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 470 Rheum australe D. Don = R. emodi Wall, ex Meissn.
- 471 The same as revatī.
- 472 A kind of grain. Sābūdānā is identified as Cycas pectinata Griff. and some other species of Cycas (Daljīt Simha, 1974: II, 672; compare WIRM II, 409-410).
- 473 I.e., soap. See on Indian soap: W. Ainslie (1826): I, 393–394; C.D. Maclean (1982): 798 (s.v. sauboon).
- 474 The same as sābu.
- 475 According to the commentary a cultivated shrub with yellow flowers. A kind of jhandu, called hajārā in the vernacular, according to P.V. Sharma (1997); this is, probably, Jasminum sambac (Linn.) Ait. (see WIRM V, 290).
- 476 According to the commentary the same as sahasradru.
- 477 The same as sahasradru according to P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 478 A tuberous plant from Egypt (misaradeśa) according to the commentary. Eulophia campestris Wall. according to V.N. Pandey (1987: 13); Orchis latifolia Linn. according to P.V. Sharma (1997). Sālima is probably the same as sālammiśrī, a name applied to several species of Orchis and to E. campestris Wall. (see Daljīt Sirnha, 1974: II, 676-677). Compare WIRM VII, 104: Orchis latifolia Linn. is said to yield salep of commerce.
- 479 Cassia angustifolia Vahl, i.e., senna (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Also identified as Cassia senna Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 351).
- 480 Unidentified.
- 481 See the description of this substance in the commentary; arsenic according to P.V. Sharma (DGV II-III, 824-825).
- 482 The same as mrtāśman.
- 483 The same as mṛtāśman.
- 484 The same as mṛtāśman.
- 485 The same as kalasora.

- 486 The same as kalasora, See C.D. Maclean (1982); 831 (s.v. shorah).
- 487 The same as lavanga.
- 488 According to the commentary the same as gulakanda (see Daljīt Siṃha, 1974: II, 267 on this product of Rosa damascena Mill.).
- 489 Identified as Merendera persica Boiss. et Kotsch. (absent from WIRM; see Hooker VI, 357) by Daljīt Sinha (1974: II, 694: mīṭhā surañjān). Bāpālāl Vaidya (1984: 642-643) identifies surañjāna as Colchicum luteum Baker.
- 490 Citrullus vulgaris Schrad., the watermelon. See S.S.R. Bennet on the nomenclature.
- 491 A strong acid.
- 492 Lepidium iberis Linn. according to V.N. Pandey (1987: 13), P.V. Sharma (1997), and Daljīt Sinha (1974: II, 377-378). M. Ali (1992: 28 and 30) distinguishes todri surkh (Cheiranthus cheiri Linn.) and todri safed (Matthiola incana R.Br.).
- 493 According to the commentary a type of Zizyphus without thorns. Identified as Zizyphus jujuba Mill. = Z. sativa Gaertn. by Daljīt Siṃha (1974: II, 80-81: unnāb).
- 494 According to the commentary the same as dvīpāntarīyavaţa. Identified as Smilax ovalifolia Roxb. = S. macrophylla Roxb. non Willd (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Several species of Smilax are used as usbā according to Daljīt Siṃha (1974: II, 82-84).
- 495 According to the commentary the same as meşaśṛigī. Also identified as Barleria prionitis Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 212).
- 496 Pennisetum americanum (Linn.) Leeke = P. typhoides (Burm.f.) Stapf et Hubbard (bājarī) according to the commentary; this species of millet is called bajrā, bājrā or bajrī in Hindī (Dal jīt Simha, 1974: II, 507).
- 497 Maerua oblongifolia (Forsk.) A. Rich. = M. arenaria Hookf. et Thoms. (see S.S.R. Bennet, 1987; WIRM VI, 216).
- 498 According to the commentary a variety of punarnavā. Identified as Trianthema portulacastrum Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997), a plant called biskhaprā in Hindī (Daljīt Siṃha, 1974: II, 529).
- 499 Probably Lodoicea maldivica (Poir.) Pers. See on this plant, used in Yūnānī medicine: Daliīt Simha (1974): II, 416.

Twentieth-century authors and works

- NCC: not recorded. Ed., with Hindī interpretation and Urdū version, Nawal Kishore Press, Lucknow 1905 [IO.3416].
- 2 NCC: not recorded. Edition: ajīma timira bhāskara (vaidyakagrantha), śrīmathurānivāsī caturveda śaikaralālajī vaidyake putra caube kyākhūba rāmaprasāda hakīmadvārā samgrhīta, Lakṣmīvenkateśvar Steam Press, Bombay 1937. References are to page numbers of the edition.
- 3 Compare: Jvaratimiranāśaka.
- 4 This series of specific remedies has probably for the greater part been taken from Kāśīnā-tha's Ajīrnamañjarī.
- 5 One of the recipes in Sanskrit (chapter four) is ascribed to Bheda.
- 6 Part of the recipes have been borrowed from Yūnānī medicine, as explicitly stated by the author (27 and 28), or from western medicine (29). Other formulae derive from the Nighanturatnākara (33) or from the author's father (28). A large number of technical terms taken from western medicine occur in the Hindī parts of the work.

Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram, Nr. 1055: Nalapāka. AVI 445. HIM II, 488-490. Edited by Vāmācaraṇabhaṭṭācārya, 1st ed., Vidyāvilāsa Press, Vārāṇasī 1915 [BL.14049.ddd.1; IO.San.D.388(i)]; 2nd ed.: mahārājanalaviracitam pākadarpaṇam, 'mādhurī'-hindīvyākhyāvibhūṣitam (prācīnatama āyurvedīya svasthavṛtta evaṃ pākaśāstra kā viśiṣṭa grantha), vārāṇasīstha rājakīyasaṃskṛtapāṭhaśālīyanyāyaśāstrādhyāpakena nyāyācāryapaṇaitsfrīvāmācaraṇabhaṭṭācāryeṇa saṃśodhitam, 'mādhurī'-hindī vyākhyākāra Dr. Indradeva Tripāṭhī, Kāśī Saṃskṛta Granthamālā 1, Vārāṇasī 1983. References are to the second edition. Pākadarpaṇa is the title mentioned in the text itself (1.21).
- 18 Nala is referred to as an expert in the culinary art in Śilānka's Caüppaṇṇamahāpurisacariya (p.38). An Aśvaparīksana is also ascribed to Nala (see: Veterinary texts).
- 19 Mostly ślokas; many verses at the end of a chapter and some stray stanzas are composed in longer metres.
- 20 The table of contents in the text of the treatise (1.28-32) refers to a division into sixteen chapters (the numbers between brackets are those of the chapters in the edition): odana (1), sūpa (1), sarpis (1), vyañjana (1), māṇṣsa and śāka (1), bhakṣya (3), pāyasa (4), rasāyana, pāna (4 and 5), yūṣa (6), ghṛtādyanna (7), lehya (8), pānīya (9), kṣīra (10), dadhi (11), and takra. Chapter two of the edition (on ṛtudharma) is absent from this list; the chapters on rasāyana and takra, mentioned in the table of contents, do not form part of the printed text.

- 21 See on Rtuparna and Nala: Mahābhārata, Vanaparvan 67 (ed. Poona).
- 22 Compare Mahābhārata, Vanaparvan 54.29–32; 64.3; 72 (ed. Poona). Some verses of the Pākadarpaṇa are taken from the Mahābhārata (with a number of variants): 1.2cd–3 = Vanaparvan 64.2cd–3; 6ab = 64.4ab; 10ab = 64.4cd.
- 23 These types, enumerated only, not defined, are bhakṣya, bhojya, lehya, coṣya, peya, and payogata. Classical āyurveda distinguishes four types: aśita, pīta, līḍha, and khādita (see, e.g., Ca.Sū.28.3).
- 24 These faults (1.39–56) are called asrta (for example, a rice gruel in which a too large amount of liquid has been left), picchila (overcooked), asuci (dirty), kvathita (for example, a rice dish containing a too small amount of rice and too much liquid), suṣka (stale and desiccated), dagdha (burnt), virūpa (for example, a rice dish in which the grains have not been properly crushed), and nartuja (stale).
- 25 A dish made of rice, mudga beans and chicken.
- 26 A type of poison which originates from mixing disagreeing articles of diet.
- 27 These dishes are nowadays called dal.
- 28 A temana is a sauce (MW).
- 29 Dishes with buttermilk as their chief ingredient.
- 30 Ad Ca.Sū.27.265-267 (a recipe for the preparation of madhuśīrṣaka; not found in the printed text).
- 31 Ad Su.Sū.46.376 (a recipe for a khada; absent from the printed text), 396cd-397ab (Nala's definition of a sattaka, in an anonymous quotation) and 453 (the same quotation).
- 32 Nalanrpati's Sūdaśāstra is quoted ad Cakradatta, grahanī 60-61 (on svalpacukra) and agnimāndya 4 (on manda). Cakra borrowed grahanī 60-61 from Nala according to Niścala. The quotations are not found in the edited text. Compare Niścala's quotations from the Sūdaśāstra.
- 33 Śīlānka's Caüppannamahāpurisacariya (p.38) mentions Nala as an expert in sūyārasattha (sūpaśāstra) in a list of authorities on several branches of learning (compare A.K. Chatterjee, 1978: 286).
- 34 Ad Cakrapāṇi's Dravyaguṇa, kṛtānnavarga 48 (a definition of rāgaṣāḍava, not traceable in the printed text).
- 35 Todara III: 3.90 and 110 (on drinking water); 4.57-60 (Nala is referred to in a quotation from Videha on the preparation of peyā, yūṣa and rasa), 710 (on dāḍimīrasa), 1396-1397 (on the preparation of kaḍhī); IX: 1.207 (the preparation of māṇsarasa), 209 (the preparation of kṛta- and akṛṭayūṣā), 333 (the preparation of uṣṇodaka).
- 36 Brhadyogataranginī 16.5-7ab (on the preparation of bhakta; not traceable).
- 37 Siddhamantraprakāśa ad Siddhamantra 12cd-15ab (recipes for a khala and a kāmbalika; not occurring in the printed text).
- 38 See G. Wojtilla (1985): 114, (1999): 10.
- 39 Ksemakutūhala 11.13-15ab (a recipe for a sattaka; not traceable).
- 40 See K.T. Achaya (1994): 94: the Śivatattvaratnākara refers to drinking water cooled in a device made of pūgapatta (the bark of Areca catechu Linn.).
- 41 Cf. Amarakośa 9.2.44. See Om Prakash (1961): 209.
- 42 The related alasāndra (Su.Sū.46.35; also mentioned in the Bhojanakutūhala) has been identified as Vigna unguiculata (Linn.) Walp. = V. sinensis (Linn.) Savi ex Hassk. = V. cylindrica (Linn.) Skeels, in particular with V. unguiculata subsp. cylindrica (Linn.) Van Eseltine (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1701; compare WIRM X, 497–499).

- 43 This may be a variety of āluka.
- 44 This may be an Amaranthus species (compare M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 104).

- 3 The only source indicated is Dattarāma's Nāḍīdarpaṇa; fourteen ślokas (30–43) are borrowed from it.
- 4 Bhūdharabhaṭṭa's Nādījñānadarpaṇa may also have been one of the author's sources, since some verses on pages 9-10 are identical with Nādījñānadarpaṇa 56-59 and most of the stanzas on page 22 with verses 50-53 of the same work.
- 5 See p.28.
- 6 Compare Nādījñānadar paņa 63-65.
- 7 This view was put forward by Dattarāma in his Nādīdarpana.
- 8 Diseases included in this list are, e.g., yonivyāpad and (yoni)kanda (86), somaroga (87), masūrikā and romāntikā (88), plīhajvara (91), udanmeha (96), and vradhna (97). The longest list known to me of characteristics of the pulse in various diseases is found in a series of articles by Ekendranath Ghosh in the Journal of Ayurveda 4 (1927–28), 453–460; 5 (1928–29), 13–20, 66–75, 340–347; 6 (1929–30), 104–111, 151–158, 166–176, 260–269, 334–340, 454–463; 7 (1930–31), 12–19, 50–60 (more articles belonging to this series were apparently published in earlier volumes of the Journal of Ayurveda).

 - The title, Nādīcakra, is mentioned in verses four and nine, as well as in the colophon.
- 13 Compare on the contents: S. Upadhyaya (1986): 40-41.
- 14 This number is mentioned in the Hathayogapradīpikā (4.18) and many Tantric works (see, e.g., M. Eliade, 1960: 240; D. Snellgrove, 1987: I, 296). Other numbers are also found (see A. Avalon, 1953: 110; M. Eliade, 1960: 240; O.P. Jaggi, 1973: V, 62).
- 15 Karnika is one of the sources of the Nādīvijñāna (NCC III, 186).
- 16 The diseases revealed by these methods are called sparśa-, praśna-, and darśanaroga, terms unknown from the classical āyurvedic literature.
- 17 The tastes enumerated are katu, tikta, uṣṇa, lavaṇa, madhura, and amla; kaṣāya is omitted

- and replaced by usna, which is a vīrya in āyurvedic theory.
- 18 Probably nocturnal emissions.

- 102 The distinction of disorders by vāta and pitta on the one side, pitta and vāta on the other, and the corresponding distinctions which follow, are rare in āyurvedic literature. The vāta pulse touches the pitta pulse in a disorder by vāta and pitta, whereas the pitta pulse touches the vāta pulse in a disorder by pitta and vāta.
- 103 The commentator calls this pulse, occurring in fever, visamasamkalitanādī.
- 104 The commentator remarks that these disorders of the tongue, etc., are found in the Cintā-mani and the Vāhatagrantha.
- 105 The commentator refers to works called Ratnākara and Vāhatagrantha.

- 130 Rāvaņa's treatise has also, variants disregarded, some verses in common with Kaṇāda's work. E.g., 27ab = Kaṇāda's Nāḍīvijñāna 106; 29ab = 102ab; 32 = 50; 52 = 92; 72 = 31; 73 = 41; 74 = 30; 75 = 34. Some verses are also found in the Śārngadharasaṃhitā: Rāvaṇa 7 = Śārnga I.3.1; 20ab = 4ab.
- 131 See on the contents of Rāvaṇa's Nādīparīkṣā also S. Upadhyaya (1986): 75-86.
- 132 C. Dwarkanath (1991: 155) supposed that the author was the Siddhācārya Rāvaṇa, mentioned in the Ānandakanda (the name of this Rasasiddha is, however, Revaṇa), who, in his opinion, lived between the tenth and thirteenth centuries and belonged to the Nandī school of pulse specialists. See about other works attributed to Rāvaṇa: Kumāratantra.
- 133 The verses of Ravana which are already found in the Śarngadharasanhita may point to a common tradition.
- 134 C. Dwarkanath placed the work in the twelfth century (1991: 43) or in the period between the tenth and thirteenth centuries (1991: 155).

- 135 It may be that astasthānaparīkṣā, a subject frequently referred to in nādī-texts, has been developed in circles specialized in the examination of the pulse and was adopted later by the more traditionally orientated physicians.

The Nādīprakāśa quoted in Mauktika's Vaidyarnuktāvalī may be Rāmarāja's work, since Śaṃkarasena's work of the same title is posterior to Mauktika. A commentary by Rāmarāja on Kaṇāda's Nādīvijnāna, quoted by Jīvānandavidyāsāgara in his commentary on the same work, may well be this Nādīprākaśa. Rāmarāja is mentioned in Kapilamiśra's Nādīprabodhana (S. Upadhyaya, 1986: 42). Rāmarāja's Nādīprakāśais also called Nādīparīkṣā (ABI 320; Jaggi IV, 45; Vṛddhatrayī 470). The same author is credited with two works on rasašāstra, the Rasadīpikā and Rasaratnapradīpa (CC I, 495, 496, 518, II, 116 and 121; ABI 320; Vṛddhatrayī 470). Atrideva (ABI 320) and G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 470) regard this Rāmarāja or Rāmarāya as the minister of Sadāśiva Rāya (middle of the fifteenth century) of the Vijayanagar kingdom, who was a mere puppet in the hands of his minister. Compare on Rāmarāja's identity: Rasaratnapradīpa by Rāmarāja.

A condensed English rendering of the Nāḍī prakāśa is found in J.C. Sikdar (1988: 89–135). References are to page numbers of b. The title of the treatise is Nāḍī prakāśa in one of the introductory verses, Dhamanī prakāśa in the concluding verses.

- 158 J.C. Sikdar (1988) describes the contents of three chapters, exclusively devoted to nādī-parīksā.
- 159 The text edited by K.R.L. Gupta and that by Dhurmo Dass Sen Gupta have four chapters and also deal with other forms of parīkṣā (ārtava-, retaḥ-, mūtra-, nāsā-, āsya-, netra-, and jihvāparīksā) in the second half of chapter three.
- More than sixty verses from Kaṇāda's work are found in the Nāḍī prakāśa; J.C. Sikdar's claim (1988: 68) that thirty-two verses were borrowed does at least not apply to K.R.L. Gupta's text. Śaṃkarasena's quotations from Kaṇāda deviate sometimes slightly from the printed versions of the latter's work (see J.C. Sikdar, 1988: 52, 53, 54, etc.); additions to Kaṇāda's text also occur (see J.C. Sikdar, 1988: 60 and 61).
- 161 The contents of chapter four resemble those of texts on svarodaya or svaraśāstra.
- 162 Probably the work of this title ascribed to Vaidyacintāmaņi or Narasinhakavirāja.

Verses 1-30 of Kaṇāda's Nāḍīvijñāna are found, accompanied by an English translation, in S.K. Ramachandra Rao (1987): III, 133-138. References are to m.

- Kaṇāda's Nāḍīvijñāna is said to form the first and only extant chapter of a Kaṇādasaṃhitā in five chapters, the subjects of the other four being roganirṇaya, kaṣāyaugha, pāradādika, and mahāvidyārasa jāraṇamāraṇa (HIM II, 478-480). NCC III, 125-126: Kaṇādasaṃhitā in five chapters, but only the Nāḍīparīkṣā or -vijñāna is found in MSS; Kaṇādasaṃhitā in five parts, nādī, roga, kaṣāya, mercury, etc.
- 186 Mostly ślokas, but longer metres are also represented (see Jīvānanda's commentary and J.C. Sikdar's Intr., 13-16, to ed. o). Editions bb, f and o have sixty-four, edition k has 113 verses. H. Śāstrī, Notices I, Nr. 201: Nādīprakāśa of Kaṇāda in 144 verses.
- 187 The examination of the pulse at the foot is referred to in stanzas 38 and 107.
- 188 See on the contents of Kaṇāda's Nāḍīvijñāna also J.C. Sikdar's Intr. (3-8) to ed. o and S. Upadhyaya (1986): 63-75.

- 194 Jīvānanda quotes the Govindatāmī yā vyākhyā (81) and mentions a reading supported by Govindarāma (97). Govindarāma was the author of a Nādīvijāāna.
- 195 I.e., the Mādhavanidāna.
- 196 See: Nādī prakāšā by Rāmarāja.
- 197 Also called Śanikara (102-110); his commentary is referred to as Śāmkarī vyākhyā (113). Cf. Nādīprakāśa by Śanikarasena.
- 198 CC I, 653; III, 135. 199 CC: not recorded.
- 200 I.e., Maheśvara's Viśvaprakāśa.
- 20. C. Dwarkanath placed the work in the twelfth century (1991: 42) or in the period between the tenth and twelfth centuries (1991: 155). Kaṇāda's treatise cannnot be the oldest on the subject, since conflicting views are mentioned (compare stanzas 16 and 18 on the location of the pulses of the three doṣas with respect to the three fingers of the examining physician; stanza 18 is considered as not resting on authority by Śaṃkarasena and Jīvānandavidyāsāgara; compare the verses from Dattarāma's Nādīdarpaṇa quoted in the Bhāratīyanādīviñāna and Bhūdharabhatta's Nādījñānadarpaṇa).
- 202 NCCX, 29. Cat. Tanjore Nrs. 11193–94 (cf. A.C. Burnell, 1880: 70). STMI 207–208. This work is identical with the Nādīcakra.
- 203 NCC X, 30 and 292: the same as Rāmacandra's Nāḍīparīkṣā. Cat. Sarasvati Bhavan XII, Nr. 45304 (by Rāma).
- 204 NCC X, 30. This work, consisting of fifty-seven verses, deals more at length with the nādīcakra system than with the examination of the pulse (S. Upadhyaya, 1986: 43).
- 205 NCC: not recorded. Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 41813.

A Gadān jana ascribed to Agniveśa (NCC: not recorded; Check-list Nr. 285) may be the An jananidāna; the same applies to an Agniveśanidāna by Agniveśa, with commentary (Check-list Nr. 9), and to a Nidānasthāna by Agniveśa (NCC X, 129; see Agniveśa). A Netrān jana (Cat. Bikaner Nr. 1419) is identical with the An jananidāna. Other titles of the An jananidāna are Agniveśan jana (NCC: not recorded) and Nidānan jana (NCC X, 129; Cat. BHU Nrs. 5 and 77).

- 4 The work has wrongly been described as a treatise on eye diseases (Cat. IO Nr. 2714; Bhagvat Sinh Jee, 1927: 207; Gulabkunverba I, 75; S.K. Ramachandra Rao, 1985: 16; G.P. Srivastava, 1954: 33). The title is explained in the first verse, where the treatise, simply called Añ jana there, is said to have been composed by Agniveśa as a collyrium (añ jana) for physicians whose eyes are covered by the darkness (timira; this term also denotes an eye disease causing cloudy vision) of ignorance. The title Añ jana recurs in the last two stanzas.
- 5 Their number is 232 (nayanānaladṛnmita) according to the author himself. R. Mitra (Notices X, Nr. 4206) and STMI (14) mention a number of 333 stanzas.
- 6 P.V. Sharma remarks that the totak a and other more recent metres abound in the work (AVI 247).

- 7 Some verses of the Añjananidāna are identical with verses included in the Mādhavanidāna, which are either quoted from one of the classical āyurvedic works or from unknown sources: Añjananidāna 124 = Mādhavanidāna 27.1 (from an unknown source); 133 = 28. 20 (from Su.); 134 = 29.2 (from Su.); 135cd = 29.7ab (from an unknown source); 144 = 33.1 (from Ca.); 166ab = 37.2cd (from Vāgbhaṭa); 172 = 41.4 (from an unknown source); 185 = 46.1 (from an unknown source); 207 = 51.2 (from an unknown source).
- 8 Examples are: agnimāndya, alasaka, vilambikā, halīmaka, bhrama, nidrā, paramada, pānavibhrama, ūrustambha, annadravaśūla, ānāha, śūkadoṣa, koṭha, kṣudraroga, yonikanda, stanaroga, stanyadusti.
- 9 A ghatī is a period of twenty-four minutes.
- 10 This term may be a synonym of vişa (see the Hindī translation); it is frequently used in this sense in the Tantrasārasarngraha.
- II Already mentioned, for example, by Vrnda (Siddhayoga 5.57; 6.6), Cakrapāṇidatta (ad Su.Sū.35.24 and 40.10), Vijayarakṣita (ad Nidāna 6.2-4), and Śārngadhara (I.7.27ab).
- 12 Already mentioned by Vāgbhaṭa (A.h.Ni.15.27-28ab = A.s.Ni.15.29cd-30ab); also known to Vangasena (āgantukayrana 25).
- 13 This is the same as kārśya, i.e., leanness.
- 14 The term kuranda, a synonym of kurantaka, occurs in the Cakradatta (vrddhibradhnacikitsä 18), Haramekhalä (4.182 and 187–188), Räjamärtanda (17.1 and 5–7), Śārngadharasamhitä (III.11.104), Sodhala's Gadanigraha (kāya 35.51–58), Vangasena (antravrddhi 41–46), etc.; kuranda, as described in the Añjananidāna, is identical with Mādhava's vrddhi.
- 15 Vrnda was the earliest author to describe vardhma (Siddhayoga 40.20-23).

AVI 315: title Vaidyavinoda. H.D. Velankar (1944): 356: Vidyāvinoda(vaidyaśāstra). A medical work edited as the Akalankasamhitā is actually Vijaya's Kalyāṇakāraka; another Akalankasaṃhitā is also recorded. See on authors called Akalanka: CESS A 1, 35; A.K. Chatterjee (1978; see index); J.P. Jain (1964): 171–180; D.N. Lorenzen (1991): 26; NCC I, 3–7; S.Ch. Vidyabhusana (1971): 185–186. The Akalanka of the Vidyāvinoda is distinct from the Jain logician of that name (about A.D. 625–675), because he refers to Vīrasena (about A.D. 710–790), according to J.P. Jain (1964: 185–189). A.K. Chatterjee (1978: 328) places the logician Akalarika in the middle of the eighth century. Compare on this Akalarika and his date: A.K. Chatterjee (1978): 328–329; T.G. Kalghatgi (1975): 236; K.B. Pathak (1931–32).

- 31 The names of many sources are partly abbreviated and can for that reason not be identified. Compare the strikingly similar list of sources of the Bhesajjamañjūsāsannaya.
- 32 One prescription derives from Acyuta, the author of the Āyurvedasāra, who is also quoted by Niścala.
- 33 A mantra against fever, and eight, mostly rather long, prescriptions.
- 34 See: Agastya.
- 35 See: Ālambāyana.
- 36 A quotation on takra.
- 37 Most of Anantakumāra's twenty-six quotations are in verse and relate to therapy. One verse (24.401), borrowed from the Amitaprabhīya, is said to derive ultimately from Vararuci. Compare Amṛtaprabhīya and Carakanyāsa. See on Amitaprabha: commentaries on the Carakasamhitā.
- 38 The full name of this source is not known. Five quotations on the treatment of poisoning are borrowed from this work.
- 39 NCC I, 351. Four prescriptions derive from this treatise, which is once mentioned in the text itself (20.225). Also quoted by Niścala.
- 40 NCC I, 354. Twenty-five prescriptions are quoted.
- 41 Three prescriptions are borrowed from this work; one of these (9.270–272ab: pācanāmṛta) is said to be also found in Bhela; another one (23.23) is common to the Amṛtaprabhīya and Bāhaṭa. A Yogaśataka is ascribed to Amṛtaprabha. An Amṛtaprabhā may have been one of Candraṭa's sources (AVI 285). See on Amṛtaprabha: commentaries on the Carakasaṃhitā. Compare Amitaprabhīya.
- 42 NCC II, 166. Four quotations on the properties and actions of some drugs.
- 43 NCC II, 179. Nine prescriptions are quoted. An Āryasamuccaya is quoted in Candraţa's Yogaratnasamuccaya.
- 44 Two quotations on dravyaguna and six prescriptions.
- 45 One quotation on dravyaguna and one prescription.
- 46 A prescription.
- 47 See: Aurabhra.
- 48 NCC: not recorded. Eight prescriptions are borrowed from this authority or work. The formula of a śrībāhuśālo gudaḥ is found in many works, e.g., Vṛnda's Siddhayoga (arśas 68-78).
- 49 NCC: not recorded. One of the two quotations (18.508–511) is a prescription against kşudramasūrī.

- 50 See NCC XIII, 262–263: several works of this title. The definition of an angula (7.52cd–53ab); auspicious days for administering medicines (7.130–134ab). These quotations may derive from a work on jyotisa.
- 51 See: Bhadrasaunaka.
- 52 Nineteen prescriptions derive from Bhadravarman, who is also quoted by Candrața (as Bhadravartman) and Niścala.
- 53 See: Bhāluki.
- 54 See: Bharadvāja.
- 55 The single quotation (11.130-132) may derive from the Nāṭyaśāstra, it consists of a prescription for singers (gāyaka).
- 56 See: Bhārgava.
- 57 CC: not recorded. One quotation on the regimen of patients with wounds (vranin).
- 58 A quotation on offerings to Ganesa in children's diseases.
- 59 A very long quotation (9.69cd-115) on gifts (dāna) as a pacificatory measure in various diseases.
- 60 See: Bhela.
- 61 Fifteen prescriptions derive from this treatise. Also quoted by Candrata and Niścala; the work was not available to Gopāladāsa.
- 62 See: Bhoja.
- 63 See: Bhoja.
- 64 See: Bhoia.
- 65 CC: not recorded. One prescription is borrowed from this authority or work.
- 66 Thirty-three prescriptions derive from this work, which is also quoted by Candrata and Niścala. A Bindusāra was a work on toxicology (viṣatantra) (see T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta, 1981: 127).
- 67 CC: not recorded. Five prescriptions are quoted; one of these (15.254-255) is iatrochemical in nature and mentions pāradabhasman.
- 68 On gifts (dāna) pacifying particular diseases (9.54-62; 13.249; 14.443).
- 69 CC: not recorded. Many quotations on diet and the properties of medicinal substances.
- 70 See: Bhoja.71 See: Caksusva.
- 72 A prescription.
- 73 Ninety-two quotations. See: Candrata.
- 74 See: Amitaprabhīya.
- 75 NCC: not recorded. The Catuḥṣaṣṭi is quoted once only (24.497–498ab) by Anantakumāra; this verse is on the diet to be kept in eye diseases. The Kairalīon the Uttarasthāna of the Astāngahrdaya ascribes the Catuhsasti to Vaideha.
- 76 See: Tīsata.
- 77 Two prescriptions are borrowed from this treatise. Four works with this title are known: (a) anonymous, *printed at Calcutta in 1868 and 1872; (b) by Maheśvara; (c) by Viśvanātha, the author of the Pathyāpathyaviniścaya; (d) by Sadānanda Śukla (NCC VII, 29).
- 78 Daśemānī refers to groups of ten drugs mentioned in Ca.Sū.4.
- 79 See: Devala.
- 80 NCC: not recorded. Four prescriptions are borrowed from this work; one of these is also found in the treatise of Kāñcīpuravāsin.
- 81 NCC: not recorded. Two prescriptions.

- 82 Eight prescriptions. Compare Dhanvantarī yani ghantu.
- 83 Three quotations on the properties of medicinal substances. A MS of an Ekadravyavini-ścaya is recorded in the NCC (III, 49).
- 84 NCC V, 307: quoted by Bhattotpala. A work on fragrant substances; the Yavanas are referred to (8.1013–1016ab); a Persian (pārasīka) type of kurikuma is mentioned (8.1051).
- 85 NCC: not recorded.
- 86 NCC VI, 238. Eight prescriptions; one formula derives from Devadeva (15.84–95ab), another one from Mārkandeya (20.329–337). A Gaurītantra is quoted by Rāghavabhatta in his commentary on the Śāradātilaka (NCC VI, 258). See also Tāntrika Sāhitya 195.

- 93 NCC: not recorded. A prescription is quoted.
- 94 See: Jejjata.
- 95 See: Jātūkarna.
- 96 NCC: not recorded. A prescription is quoted.
- 97 NCC: not recorded. Two prescriptions are quoted.
- 98 A prescription against garbhaśūla (21.115). Compare Jīvaka and Kāśyapasaṃhitā.
- 99 Prescriptions against garbhapāta and -śūla, one for each month of pregnancy, ending with a mantra (21.121–136ab); a prescription against śopha during pregnancy (21.177).
- 100 Two prescriptions (8.1038-1039: takkola is mentioned; 9.478cd-479ab).
- 101 NCC: not recorded. Two quotations on the preparation of drugs and sixty-six prescriptions.
- 102 A prescription. See: Kāṅkāyana.
- 103 A verse on the religious treatment of masūrikā (18.468).
- 104 See: Kāśyapa.
- 105 Kātyāyana is usually regarded as an authority on śālākya, which disagrees with Anantakumāra's quotations. See: Kātyāyana.

- 107 See: Kharanāda.
- 108 See: Krsnätreya.
- 109 See: Ksārapāni,
- 110 See: Kṣārapāṇi.
- 111 See: Bhoja.
- 112 Probably the Aśvinākumārasamhitā. Six prescriptions are quoted, one of which is the phalaghrta of the Aśvins.
- 113 CC: not recorded. A prose passage from some commentary on the subject of snehapāka (between 7.77ab and cd).
- 114 Two quotations on religious treatment of diseases.
- 115 About seventy quotations from this work. See: Candrata's Suśrutapāṭhaśuddhi.
- 116 Twenty-four prescriptions and rules (two long quotations: 26.562-577 and 30.151-169).
- 117 CC: not recorded. The three quotations consist of two prescriptions and a verse on the four varieties of takra. Quoted by Candrata according to P.V. Sharma (AVI 285).

- 118 Anantakumāra cites a prescription borrowed by Candrața from the Mahodadhi. The latter work does not figure among Candrața's sources. A Mahodadhi by Śivanātha Yogin is a work on rasaśāstra (AVI 468).
- 119 Two quotations on dravyaguna.
- 120 CC I, 432; II, 99: a work on architecture. A quotation on religious treatment.
- 121 See: Nāgārjuna.
- 122 See: Nāgārjuna.
- 123 The six quotations from this Nāmanīta cannot be traced in the Nāvanītaka that forms part of the Bower MS.
- 124 Several works of this title are known (NCC X, 161). Some verses on the treatment of poisoning are quoted.
- 125 About twenty quotations. This Nārāyaṇīya is Nārāyaṇa's Tantrasārasaṇgraha, since several quotations from the Nārāyaṇīya can be traced in that source: Yogaratnasamuccaya 9.1 = Tantrasārasaṃgraha 15.1; 10.163 = 15.56; 14.50 = 16.38; 18.86 = 15.41cd-42ab; 21.451 = 16.1: 21.5 ●6 = 16.5cd-6ab.
- 126 See: Parāśara.
- 127 About one hundred and ninety quotations from this work, which is probably Candrața's Suśrutapāthaśuddhi.
- 128 NCC: not recorded. One prescription is quoted.
- 129 NCC: not recorded. Seven prescriptions are borrowed from this treatise.
- 130 NCC XIII, 72: several works of this title are known; one of these works was written by Kavikanthahāra. One prescription has been borrowed from the Prayogaratnākara.
- 131 NCC XIII, 78.
- 132 NCC XIII, 73-74: several works of this title are known. One prescription is quoted. A Prayogasangraha by Śivanandin is mentioned by Rājkumār Jain (1981: 89).
- 133 NCC XIII, 74–77: several works of this title are known. A Prayogasāra is also quoted by Pṛthvīmalla in his Śiśurakṣāratna and Kalyāṇa in his Bālatantra (CC I, 356; II, 79). Two MSS of a Prayogasāra dealing with garbhiṇībālacikitsā are recorded in the Check-list (Nr. 578), and one MS of a commentary on that text (Nr. 751: Sarvāṅgasundarī by Vāsudeva). Only one of Ananta's three quotations (20.217–218) is concerned with kaumārabhṛtya.
- 134 NCC XIII, 78. Ten quotations, mostly on the treatment of children's diseases.
- 135 This quotation (15.248) is traceable in Bhoja's Rājamārtanda (15.1).
- 136 See: Nimi.
- 137 CC: not recorded. A prescription is quoted.
- 138 A prescription.
- 139 CC: not recorded. The single citation from the Sacīmata (21.221-222: religious therapy, leading to an easy delivery) is said to derive from Candrata, though this text is not found in the lists of Candrata's sources.
- 140 Two quotations on the preparation of drugs and four prescriptions. See: Sahasrayoga.
- 141 Four prescriptions. Probably identical with the Sahasrayoga.
- 142 Four prescriptions.
- 143 A quotation on measures of length (7.50cd-52ab).
- 144 CC: not recorded. Two prescriptions are quoted, one of them (21.284) spoken by Bhārgava.
- 145 CC: not recorded. Thirteen prescriptions, one of them in prose.
- 146 Several treatises of this title are known (CC I, 714; II, 170–171 and 233; III, 147). Two prescriptions are quoted. Two medical texts of this name are recorded: (a) anonymous (Cat.

- Tanjore Nr. 11146), (b) by Śivadāsa (CC II, 154). Anantakumāra may quote from the latter, since Śivadāsa was also the author of a Yogasārasamuccaya and a treatise of that title is among Ananta's sources.
- 147 CC: not recorded. Six prescriptions.
- 148 Probably the same as Śarvatrāta. Three prescriptions are quoted.
- 149 CC: not recorded. Four prescriptions; one of these (16.417-420) is also found in Bhojottara and Siddhayoga.
- 150 This is the Siddhasāra of Ravigupta (see the references in R.E. Emmerick's edition of that text).
- 151 This Siddhayoga appears to differ from Vṛnda's work because Ananta's quotations cannot be traced in the latter.
- 152 CC: not recorded. Three prescriptions. A MS of a Siddhayogasamuccaya is recorded in the Check-list (Nr. 819).
- 153 CC: not recorded. A prescription is quoted.
- 154 CC: not recorded. Quoted on dravyaguņa: 8.472cd—473ab (common to Śikhāyoga and Hārīta) and 473cd. The Śikhāyoga is referred to as one of the twelve vişatantras in Śrīkantha's Yogaratnāvalī (T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta, 1981: 127).
- 155 CC: not recorded. The only quotation (29.395cd-404) proves that this work was written in the form of a dialogue between Siva and Pārvatī.
- 156 CC: not recorded. An ardhaśloka on kṣāra and three prescriptions. Also quoted by Śrīdā-sapandita in his commentary on the Aṣṭāngahṛdaya.
- 157 CC: not recorded. Three prescriptions.
- 158 See: Pākaśāstra texts.
- 159 Vāsudeva's Sarvāngasundarī commentary on the Prayogasāra? (see note on the Prayogasāra.). One of the quotations (between 8.971 and 972) is evidently from a commentary. The other three quotations are in verse and borrowed from some other treatise by the author of the Sundari.
- 160 Eleven quotations on dravyaguna and treatment. A treatise of this title is cited in the Nirna-yasindhu, Jyotişaratnasangraha and Prayogapaddhati or Ratnāvalī (NCC II, 300). It was a Tantric work according to the commentary on Nārāyana's Tantrasārasangraha (ad 1.2).
- 161 See: Nimi.
- 162 See: Vaitarana.
- 163 The Yogaśataka is quoted: 12.128 (= Yogaśataka 19); 14.144 (= 10); 16.415 (= 25); 18. 387 (= 42); 20.436 (= 17); 21.444 (=75); 24.401 (also found in the Amṛtaprabhī ya; = 49); 24.428; 24.566 (= 59).
- 164 A gloss on a quotation from the Mahāpāthaśuddhi.
- 165 See: Hariścandra.
- 166 Two quotations; the formula of tāmrādiguţikā (14.224-240) derives ultimately from Videhādhipa. Compare Vrddhahārīta.
- 167 See: Kāśyapa.
- 168 See: Kharanāda.
- 169 CC: not recorded. Three prescriptions.
- 170 See: Nimi.
- 171 CC: not recorded. A prescription (15.259–260), versified from the prose of the source.
- 172 It is not clear which texts are referred to under this abbreviation.
- 173 CC: not recorded. A prescription is quoted. A Yogaratnakaranda was no longer available to Gopāladāsa; see Gopāladāsa's Cikitsāmṛta.

- 174 See CC I, 478. Twelve prescriptions are borrowed from this treatise, which is also quoted by Niścala.
- 175 See CC I, 481. Fifty-six prescriptions are borrowed from the Yogāmrta.
- 176 CC: not recorded. One prescription has been borrowed from this treatise.
- 177 One prescription has been borrowed from this work. Is this Bhavyadatta's Yogaratnākara, quoted by Niścala? A Yogaratnākara was also known to Gopāladāsa. Śrīkantha's Yogaratnāvalīmay also have been Ananta's source.
- 178 CC I, 479; II, 112; III, 103: several works of this title are known. Two prescriptions are borrowed from the Yogasāra. A treatise of this name was composed by Dakşa Śrīvaraṇa (Cat. BHU Nr. 150) and Śivadāsa (Cat. Sarasvati Bhavan XII, Nr. 44803; J. Filliozat, Liste Nr. 111).
- 179 CC I, 480; II, 112: several works of this title are known. One of these works was written by Ganapativyāsa; see NCC V, 247: Ganapativyāsa, son of Mahīdhara Vyāsa, author of Yoga(sāra)samuccaya or Vaidyakašāstrasārasamgraha. Compare Check-list Nr. 1065. Two prescriptions are borrowed from the Yogasārasamuccaya.
- 180 Three quotations: 19.314; 19.315 (= Yogaśataka 13); 24.259 (also found in Bāhaṭa; = Yogaśataka 62). Compare Vararuci.
- 181 CC: not recorded. One prescription derives from the Yogasiddhi.
- 182 CC: not recorded. One passage in prose (on snehapāka) and nine prescriptions in verse; one of the latter (16.126) is also found in Bhoja.
- 183 See CC I, 480. Five prescriptions are quoted.
- 184 CC: not recorded. Eight prescriptions are quoted from the Yogayukti, which was also one of the sources of Candrata and Niścala.
- 185 Yogaratnasamuccaya 20.225.
- 186 Yogaratnasamucca ya 11.91; 20.277 (referred to in a quotation from the Astāngasamgraha).
- 187 Yogaratnasamuccaya, prose (from the Pāthaśuddhi) between 7.79 and 80.
- 188 Yogaratnasamuccaya 10.125.
- 189 See the passage referring to Indu.
- 190 See the passage referring to Indu.

- 192 See the passage referring to Indu.
- 193 Yogaratnasamuccaya 24.237 (referred to in a quotation from Vrddhahārīta).
- 194 Yogaratnasamuccaya 11.100-104.
- 195 Ad A.h.U.2.69-70.
- 196 Cf. Su.Ni.13.55-56.
- 197 Cf. Su.Ņi.13.39.
- 198 Cf. Ca.Śā.8.42-45.
- 199 Chapter twenty-two, for the larger part in prose. This Nārāyaṇīyabālatantra does not form part of Nārāyaṇa's Tantrasārasaṇgraha; it is proclaimed by Parāšara, in conformity with Rāvaṇa's Kumāratantra (22.1); the names of the bālagrahas differ from those employed by Nārāyaṇa. Yogaratnasamuccaya 22.184-250 may also be from the Nārāyaṇī ya, the names of the bālagrahas, as occurring in these verses, disagree with those found in the prose portion.
- 200 Yogaratnasamuccaya 22.3-177. This Bālatantra attributed to Jīvaka and proclaimed by Dhanvantari bears more resemblance to chapter eleven of Nārāyaṇa's Tantrasārasaṃgraha, at least with regard to the names of the bālagrahas and their classification, than the Nārāyaṇīyabālatantra which precedes it.

- 201 Yogaratnasamuccaya 22.251-269: paksigrahas are described.
- 202 Compare the numbers mentioned in the Suśrutasamhitā and the works ascribed to Vāgbhata.
- 203 Also known to the Kaiyadevanighantu.
- 204 Identified as Psoralea corylifolia Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1360) and Solanum ferox Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1505).
- 205 This may be the same as dhustūra = dhattūra. Durdhūraka is found inthe Aṣṭāngasamgraha (see P.V. Sharma, 1997; M. Univāl. 1981).
- 206 This may be the same as gudūcī.
- 207 Also found in the Śivatattvaratnākara (VI.17.121).
- 208 This may be the same as pīlu (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1430).
- 209 Identified as Acalypha indica Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 26; P.V. Sharma, 1997; P.K. Warrier, V.P.K. Nambiar and C. Ramankutty, 1994: I, 36-38).
- 210 Mentioned in a number of other texts.
- 211 The same as kāravella (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1119). Regarded as jalakāravellī by P.V. Sharma (1997).
- 212 Identical with karamarda (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 213 Identified as Artocarpus gomezianus Wall. ex Trec. subsp. zeylanicus Jarrett = A. lakoocha auct. non Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 174; compare WIRM I, rev. ed., 455) and as A. communis J.R. et G. Forst. = A. incisus Linn.f. (P.K. Warrier, V.P.K. Nambiar and C. Ramankutty, 1994: I, 207). Regarded as identical with lakuca, i.e., Artocarpus lakoocha Roxb. (P.V. Sharma, 1997) or A. hirsutus Lam. (P.K. Warrier, V.P.K. Nambiar and C. Ramankutty, 1994: I, 215-216).
- 214 Found in the Suśrutasamhitä,
- 215 Mentioned in the Bhelasamhitā (Ci.26.17).
- 216 Identified as Morinda coreia Buch.-Ham. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1131) = M. tinctoria Roxb. (P.V. Sharma, 1997), Pavetta indica Linn. and P. tomentosa Roxb. ex Sm. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1240–1242), and Tarenna alpestris (Wight) Balakr. = Stylocoryne lucens (Hook.f.) Gamble (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1589a; absent from Hooker and WIRM).
- 217 Identified as Gmelina arborea Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 814).
- 218 The Aṣṭāṅgasaṇigraha mentions a plant called siñcatī (Sū.7.180; Indu: vṛkṣabadarī, found in Kaśmīr)
- 219 The synonym svetabarbara is applied to Acacia leucophloea Willd. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 19). Svetavarvaraka is a variety of candana (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 220 Uttundikī is identified as Coccinia indica Wight et Arn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 450) and Trichosanthes cucumerina Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1642). Uttundikā and uttundikī (A.h.U.3.18; Candranandana: = kākatiktā) are names of vanakārpāsī (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 221 Various identifications (see N.S. Mooss, 1953: 27): Amorphophallus dubius Blume (compare WIRM I, rev. ed., 234: kānanakanda), Arisaema tortuosum Schott, Synantherias sylvatica Schott (compare WIRM X, 92: vanakanda), and Tacca leontopetaloides (Linn.) Kuntze = T. pinnatifida Forst. et Forst.f. (compare WIRM X, 108: sūraņa).
- 222 Vraņarohiņī, found in the Gadanigraha (prayogakhanda, tailādhikāra 365), is the same as katphala, Myrica esculenta Buch.-Ham. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 223 Identified as Anacardium occidentale Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 124).

- 224 See N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 280; N. Dev (1979): 193.
- 225 8.525 (said to be taken from the Saingraha) is identical (apart from one variant) with Mā-dhavadrav yaguna, śākavarga 29, the well-known and often quoted verse on patola.

- 228 CC and NCC: not recorded. STMI 23.
- NCC I, 373; VI, 48. STMI 25 and 625. Cat. Madras Nr. 13263: the author calls himself Arunagiri at the beginning, and Arunacala at the end of his work; the title is mentioned in the colophon only. The same author wrote a Singārasaptasatī (NCC I, 373: the MS dates from 1626) and a Vaidyasāramu (in Telugu). The part of the latter work that is available deals with diagnosing a patient's illness on the basis of characteristics displayed by the messenger (P. Hymavathi, 1993: 81–83).
- 230 The work is therefore also called Śārīrakasūtraguņapāṭḥa (NCCI, 374: author's name Arunācala, who is regarded as separate from Arunagiri; J. Filliozat, Liste Nr. 174: by Arunācala). P. Cordier (1903b: 350) regarded it as a treatise on materia medica.

- 302 CC and NCC: not recorded. STMI 41.
- 303 CC: not recorded. Edition: vaiyakasāroddhāraḥ, granthakāraḥ śrībrajanātha śarmā, sampādakadvayam kavirāja-dharmanātha-tarkatīrthaḥ, śrīpratāpacandracaudhurī, published by the Government of Assam, Guvāhāṭī 1964. The text is accompanied by an autocommentary in a mixture of Assamese and Sanskrit. The edition is based on two MSS, one of which is complete. The title of the work is not mentioned in the body of the text, but only in the colophons. References are to page numbers of the edition.

- 304 The verses are not numbered in the edition. The editors rearranged the text of the manuscripts, divided it into twenty-three chapters, and filled up lacunae (see the Intr. to the ed., 11-12).
- 305 Not only the rules for preparing a svarasa, kalka, etc., are given, but also recipes.
- 306 Netra-, jihvā-, mūtra-, and nādīparīksā are described.
- 307 See, e.g., 279, 286-287, 344-345.
- 308 A Kuntikauśikasanıvāda from the Bhairavatantra is quoted. See Tāntrika Sāhitya 449 on the Bhairavatantra.
- 309 It is remarkable that verses on the examination of the pulse are attributed to Caraka (400–401).
- 310 The editors are of the opinion that the author made use of some works by Cakrapāṇidatta and their commentaries by Śivadāsasena, as well as of the Rasendrasārasaṃgraha (see the Intr. to the ed., 7-8).
- 311 Not only the treatment, but also the characteristics of this disease are described, which is rare in the Vaidyakasāroddhāra.
- 312 The name of some species of Datura.
- 313 An unidentified substance; its purification is described in Assamese.
- 314 An unidentified substance.
- 315 Garlic.
- 316 Cannabis sativa Linn
- 317 The Assamese name of a medicinal plant is referred to (241), the purification of kāphinga is described in Assamese (324), and, as already mentioned, the auto-commentary is written in a mixture of Assamese and Sanskrit.

- 328 Identified as Glycosmis arborea (Roxb.) Correa (WIRM IV, 150) and G. pentaphylla (Retz.) Correa (P.V. Sharma, 1997; WIRM IV, 150). M. Abdul Kareem (1997, Nrs.

- 806–808) mentiones three species: Glycosmis arborea (Roxb.) DC., G. cochinchinensis Pierre ex Engler, and G. pentaphylla (Retz.) DC. (these names are absent from WIRM).
- 329 Cannabis sativa Linn.
- 330 See P.V. Sharma's Intr. to his ed. of the Śabdacandrikā, 5-6.
- 331 Kaempferia rotunda Linn. (WIRM V, 315).
- 332 Its synonym is drdhakantaka, identified as Carissa carandas Linn. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 332; Vanausadhicandrodaya II, 83). Drdhakantaka is also regarded as a synonym of ankota (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 65).
- 333 Annona squamosa Linn.
- 334 Glinus oppositifolius (Linn.) A.DC. = Mollugo oppositifolia Linn. = M. spergula Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 802; P.V. Sharma, 1997). Also identified as Mollugo cerviana Ser. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1117).
- 335 Heliotropium indicum Linn. (P.V. Sharma, 1997; WIRM V, 29).
- 336 Identified as Lannea coromandelica (Houtt.) Merrill = L. grandis Engl. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 995).
- 337 One of the synonyms of aśoka (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1445).
- 338 Identified as Clerodendrum infortunatum Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 442).
- 339 Identified as Leucas cephalotes Spreng. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1018).
- 340 Annona reticulata Linn. (Hindī nonā, according to a note of P.V. Sharma in his edition); see also M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 138. Also identified as Cicca acida (Linn.) Merrill = C. disticha Linn. = Phyllanthus distichus Muell. Arg.; see M. Abdul Kareem (1997): 107, Nr. 1270: called Phyllanthus acidus (Linn.) Skeels.
- 341 P.V. Sharma (1997) regards limpāka as a synonym of madhukarkaţikā, identified as Citrus grandis (Linn.) Osbeck = C. maxima (Burm.) Merrill, which cannot be correct, since these two types of Citrus fruit are mentioned separately. Also identified as Citrus aurantifolia (Christm.) Swingle, C. limon (Linn.) Burm.f (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 417 and 423), and C. medica Linn. var. limonum Wall. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr.427; absent from WIRM).
- 342 Identified as Citrus Iimetta Risso (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 422).
- 343 Opuntia dillenii Haw. (see DWH II, 99: viśvasāraka, a synonym of mahākantakinī).
- 344 See P.V. Sharma (1979a): 90. Identified as Curcuma amada Roxb. (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 345 Grewia asiatica Linn. or G. subinaequalis DC. (see WIRM IV, 262); compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nr. 821.
- 346 One of its synonyms is parvapuṣpī, a plant mentioned in the Carakasaṃhitā (Sū.27.108), but dificult to identify (see T.B. Singh and K.C. Chunekar, 1972: 99–100).
- 347 Ophiorrhiza mungos Linn.
- 348 Argemone mexicana Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 153; P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 349 Trikantaka is a synonym of gokşura (Dhanvantarinighantu 1.102–103). Compare M. Abdul Kareem (1997), Nrs. 1245 and 1636.
- 350 A synonym of prśniparnī (1.140-142).
- 351 A synonym of hilamocikā (1.291).
- 352 A synonym of guñjā (1.151).
- 353 A vernacular name of the babbūla tree (1.17).
- 354 A synonym of medas (fatty tissue; 5.8).
- 355 A synonym of vārtākī, the aubergine (1.186).
- 356 Cakrapānidatta regards gandhabhadrā and gandhādhyā as synonyms of prasāranī (see P.V.

- Sharma's Intr. to ed. b, 7). The identity of prasāranī became disputed in the course of time; the plant described under this name in the Śabdacandrikā is the one used in Bengal.
- 357 Cakrapāṇidatta ad Su.Sū.38.12 and 46.274; Kaiyadevanighaṇṭu 1.660cd-661; Paryā-yaratnamālā 612. Kuruntikā is often identified as Celosia argentea Linn.
- 358 The vernacular name of śrīhastinī = kuruntikā is already hātiśuridā in Mādhavakara's Paryāyaratnamālā.
- 359 The author mentions his name at 1.1; he calls himself a physician (vaidya).
- 360 Cannabis sativa Linn. (bhangā) is not mentioned by the earlier Cakrapāṇidatta; the name indrāśana, occurring once in the Cakradatta (kuṣṭha 64), probably designates another plant in this case, namely kuta ja (see P.V. Sharma's Intr. to ed. b, 5).
- 361 The earlier Cakrapāṇidatta was not sure about the identity of these fruits (see Cakrapānidatta ad Ca.Sū.27.131 and Su.Sū.46.139).

Sharma (AVI 312) regards the work as posterior to the fourteenth century, because vi jayā (Cannabis sativa Linn.) is prescribed in it; this argument, however, is unconvincing (see G.J. Meulenbeld, 1989). N. Saxena (1995: 64–65) accepts P.V. Sharma's opinion and dates the Yogasāra to A.D. 1600.

- NCC IV, 132; VII, 26: compiled in the fourteenth century. Edition: Venkaţeśvar Press, Bombay 1884/85 [BL.14043.e.21; IO.9.G.7]. The NCC refers to ABI 314 and 319, where, however, conflicting claims are found: Atrideva mentions a Cikitsākarmakalpavallī by Kāśīnātha Caturvedin, printed by the Venkaţeśvar Press (314), and an author called Kaśīnātha Dvivedin, said to have written the Rasakalpalatā, Cikitsākarmavallī, Ajīrṇamañjarī, and the Gūḍhārthadīpikā commentary on the Śārngadharasaṃhitā (319). G. Hāldār (Vṛdhatrayī 468) ascribes to Kāśīnātha Dvivedin, who lived in the fourteenth century, the same works as Atrideva does. Umeśacandragupta (VŚs, Preface 9) mentions Kāśīnātha Dvivedin as a native of Benares, who wrote the Cikitsākramakalpavallī, a book generally used by the physicians in the Northwestern Provinces.

Nandikeśvara is mentioned as a mythical figure in the Kā-śyapasaṃhitā, where he is the youngest of five brothers who have one sister called Ṣaṣthī (bālagrahacikitsā, page 100). Cakrapāṇidatta (ad Ca.Sū.1.62-63ab) refers to him as a puruṣātiśaya. Nandikeśvara is an authority on āyurveda and other sciences in the Lingapurāṇa, he is an authority on erotics in the Ratirahasya (2.5; see K. Mylius, 1993: 159) and may be the same as the Nandīśvara of the Paācasāyaka (see R. Schmidt, 1911: 49). Compare Tantrayukti.

This Nārāyaṇa is designated as an antaranga; he has been identified as Nārāyaṇa Khān, the father of Naraharidāsa, a companion and follower of Caitanya (A.D. 1486–1533; see R.C. Majumdar, 1980a: 566–569), according to N.N. Das Gupta (1936/37: 157), to whom this identification is unacceptable, being not supported by the facts.
- 631 This title, though only appearing in full in the colophons, is suggested by the author in one of the introductory verses (1.2), where he states that his book is a summary of the essence (sārasamgraha) of various tantras.
- 632 Edition: Tantrasārasangraha (with commentary) of Nārāyaṇa (Tāntric) of Śivapuram, edited critically with introduction in English and Sanskrit by Vaidyaratna Pandit M. - 641 Chapter seventeen, the kṣudrapaṭala, describes measures that can be taken against magical practices collectively called kṣudra; these practices consist of: stambha (commentary: = pravṛttivināśa), vidveṣaṇa (commentary: = snigdhānāṃ parasparakalahaḥ), uccāṭa (commentary: = deśāt deśāntaraṃ preraṇam), utsāda (commentary: = punarāvṛttivarjito vināśaḥ), bhrama (commentary: = unmāda), māraṇa, and vyādhi. Chapter eighteen is called ksudradhvamsapatala.
- 642 Compare T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta (1981): 128: a comparison with the second part (Mantrapāda) of the Īsānaśivagurudevapaddhati (one of the Śaiva manuals of temple worship and spiritual discipline; see J. Gonda, 1977a: 213, note 202; J. Filliozat, 1937: 68–69; N.P. Unni's Introduction to the edition of the work) shows that the Tantrasārasamgraha, from chapter eleven onwards, is very probably a recast of that Mantrapāda; the reverse is true for chapters one to ten; Nārāyaṇa's work offers in those chapters the more complete version, which has been abridged under Īsānaśiva's name as chapter forty of the Mantrapāda (this reasoning confuses the chronological positions of the two treatises compared). See for an assesment of the situation: T. Goudriaan (1977), esp. 158–161. Chapter two of the Tantrasārasamgraha is related to chapter 294, chapter eleven to chapter 299 of the Agnipurāna.

- 647 See: Anantakumāra. Some fragments of the Tantrasārasangraha are incorporated in the Agnipurāṇa: chapter two is almost identical with Agnipurāṇa 294; parts of chapters seventeen and eighteen occur in Agnipurāṇa 306; parts of chapter twenty sqq. in Agnipurāṇa 307 sqq., etc. (T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta, 1981: 128, note 85). One verse from a Nārāya-ṇīya in Timalla's Yogataraṅgiṇī(29.2), six verses in the Bṛhadyogataraṅgiṇī(79.17-22), and two verses in the Yogaratnākara (364 and 365), cannot be traced in chapters fifteen-sixteen of the Tantrasārasangraha. The Nārāyaṇīya quoted in Rāghavabhaṭṭa's commentary on the Śāradātilaka (see CCI, 642; J.N. Farquhar, 1967: 267) is not the edited version of the Tantrasārasangraha (T. Goudriaan, 1977: 160).

- 752 This term is in other āyurvedic treatises of ten a synonym of either ūrustambha or vātarakta; the latter disease is absent from the Basavarā jīya.
- 753 Compare sandhigatavāta of the Mādhavanidāna (22.21cd = Su.Ni.1.28ab).
- 754 Compare ardita of the Mādhavanidāna (22.44-48ab = Su.Ni.1.68-72).
- 755 This disease is described in Telugu.
- 756 An exception is vraṇāyāma, not described in the Mādhavanidāna. Some disorders absent are tūnī, pratitūnī, aṣṭhīlā, and pratyaṣṭhīlā, which are dealt with in chapter nineteen of the Basavarāiī va.
- 757 Not found in the list, but probably the same as sarpika.
- 758 This is in conformity with their number in Vāgbhaṭa's works.
- 759 These varieties are jihvikā-, padminī-, nandā-, vāsinī-, mohinī-, dāhinī-, kālarātrī-, and ksobhinī markatī.
- 760 Their number is sixty-five in the Suśrutasamhitā, fifty-six in the Mādhavanidāna.

- 807 See CC I, 492: three authors of this name are known, a poet, an authority on kāmaśāstra, and a lexicographer. The author on kāmaśāstra is mentioned in the Pañcasāyaka (1.3).
- 808 The verses quoted, concerned withthe pūjā of Dhavalāmukhī for the purpose of uccāṭana, are very similar to those on the same subject found in the Ṣaṭkarmadīpikā (see T. Goudriaan, 1978: 364). Here they are said to derive from the Vīratantra (see on this text: CCI, 594 and III, 125; T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta, 1981: 88; Tāntrika Sāhitya 602–603). Usually, the Mahāvidyā called Bagalāmukhī is associated with magical powers (see D. Kinsley, 1997: 37, 57, 197–201).

- 968 See S.J. Bakht and S. Mahdihassan (1984). The term arka is interpreted as denoting an aqueous or tinctorial extract (R.C. Majumdar, 1971: 264), a tincture or extract (HIM II, 427), a medicinal tincture or essence (P. Rāy, 1956: 163), and an essence (Srivastava, 1954: 122).
- 969 It should be noticed that many ingredients for arkas havelittle volatile constituents: see the table in an article by D.S. Kumar (1992: 55); the same author (1992: 58) suggested that an arka may be a pooled mixture of the hydrodistillate fraction and the aqueous extract remaining in the distillation vessel. - 970 The term arka is sometimes regarded as not indicating a distillate, but a kind of decoction (see, for example, the Vācaspatya). The Arkaprakāśa itself applies the term arka also to a fermented decoction, usually called arista (2.91) (see D.S. Kumar, 1992: 57).

The treatise is not always ascribed to Śambhu or Śambhunātha, but also to Mahādeva (CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 47), Rudra (NCC IV, 19–20), or Śiva (Check-list Nr. 363; CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 45). The Collection Punyavijayaji contains a MS (Nr. 32) of a Kālajñāna attributed to Bālāvabodha, which may be based on a confusion with the title of a commentary; the same collection contains the MS (Nr. 80) of a Bṛhatkālajñāna by Dhanvantari, with Bālāvabodha and Bījaka. The colophons of some MSS use Kālajñāna)vicāra as a second title (Check-list Nr. 362; STMI 102). Some MSS of an anonymous Kālajñāna contain the text usually attributed to Śambhu (see Cat. BHU Nrs. 27–30).

STMI 212-213 (wrongly described as a treatise on the diseases of women and children). Cat. IO Nr. 2691 (the contents of chapter one disagree with the printed text; chapter two begins with śiroroga). CBORI XVI, 1, Nrs. 250-252. Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 42770: title Vaidyasārasamgrahahitopadeśa. Collection Punyavijayaji Nr. 124: title Vaidyakašārasamgraha (two copies). P. Hymavathi (1993: 56, n.2) mentions an additional MS in the Oriental Institute. Baroda.

Edition: hitopadeśa vaidyaka, paramajainācārya śrīkanṭhasūriviracita, murādābādanivāsi bhiṣagvara śaṇkaralāla hariśaṃkarakṛta bhāṣāṭīkāsameta, Śrīveṅkaṭeśvar Press, Bombay 1912/13 [IO.6.E.21]. The title of the treatise is mentioned in the introductory verse and in the colophons. The colophon of chapter ten gives Vaidyakasārasaṃgraha as a second title.

- 1118 Nāţī-, mūtra-, mala-, jihvā-, śabda-, sparśa-, akṣi-, and rūpaparīkṣā.
- 1119 The Hindī commentator adds that these nādīs should be examined at the nose.
- 1120 Part of the verses on nādīparīkṣā are identical with or closely related to verses found in earlier monographs on the subject: e.g., 1.14 = Kaṇāda's Nādīvijñāna 15; 1.22 = 18; 1.24 = 21 = Rāvana's Nādīparīkṣā 15cd-16ab; 1.60 = 43; 1.62 = 44; 1.76 = 47; 1.78 = 48.
- 1121 Verses 93-113 are closely related to Vangasena, aristādhikāra 197-219.
- 1122 Compare Vangasena, aristādhikāra 220-222.
- 1123 Compare Vangasena, aristādhikāra 224-225.
- 1124 Taken almost verbatim from Vangasena, aristādhikāra 178-186.
- 1125 Taken almost verbatim from Vangasena, ariṣṭādhikāra 187-188.
- 1126 Taken almost verbatim from Vangasena, aristādhikāra 189-192.
- 1127 This section also contains recipes which increase the size of the lobes of the ear and the breasts (24-33).
- 1128 Recipes against nosebleeds prevail.
- 1129 Hoarseness (svarabhanga) is included, as well as vyanga and lāñchana (two kṣudrarogas).
- 1130 Gandamālā and galaganda are included, as well as tṛṣṇā.
- 1131 Kşayakāsa is separately dealt with (71-73).
- 1132 Although not mentioned as belonging to the abdominal diseases, this chapter also deals with krmi (45-50) and nalagulma (57-59); the treatment of ahijambuka is absent.
- 1133 Probably the same as what is usually known as śūkadosa and upadamśa.
- 1134 This is the same as mūtrāghāta.
- 1135 Usually regarded as one of the varieties of mūtrāghāta.
- 1136 A synonym of andavrddhi, i.e., swelling of the scrotum.
- 1137 The treatment of this disorder is not described; recipes against dāha (burning feet; 96) and blisters of the feet (sphuţitau pādau; 97) follow upon those against vicarcikā. Chapter seven (87) also contains a recipe against a disease called bāla, which is a vernacular term for snāyukaroga according to R. Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 107).
- 1138 Sopha caused by bhallataka nuts (Semecarpus anacardium Linn.f.) is also mentioned.
- 1139 Dadru is also one of the forms of kustha.
- 1140 These verses contain recipes considered to be agnidīpana, i.e., stimulating the digestive fire.
- 1141 Compare this list of contents with the description of Cat. IO Nr. 2691.
- 1142 The general symptoms of eye diseases by vāta, pitta, kapha and rakta are enumerated, which is very unusual; doşic types only of prameha are characterized, etc.
- 1143 Exceptions to this rule are rather frequent; see, for example, the diseases of the ears, nose, mouth and throat, hrdroga, śvāsa, plīhan, nālagulma, nararoga, mūtraśarkarā, mūtrarodha, uṣṇavāta, kuranda, ślīpada, ringinīvāta, ūrustambha, raktapitta, etc.
- 1144 See, e.g., 4.43–44 (a varti against eye diseases attributed to Nāgākhya bhikṣu, i.e., Nāgārijuna); 4.45 (a saugata añjana); 4.70–72 (candraprabhā guṭī); 4.96–99 (candrodayavaṭī); 9.19–22 (a formula called cintāmaṇi).
- 1145 Pārśvanāthaand (Mahā)vīra figure in a mantra against bālagrahas (10.7); Aruņa is invoked in a mantra against eye diseases (4.19); the adoration of Sūra (i.e., Sūrya) is recommended if one suffers from kustha (9.1).

- 1146 A verse about the determination of the life span of a patient.
- 1147 Sambhudeva is said to have expounded the lore about lūtā.
- 1148 See JAI 157: written in Hindī, completed in 1761/62; the same work quotes a Sārasaṃ-graḥa, which may be the Hitopadeśa or Harsakīrti's Yogacintāmani.

- 1150 Compare Mādhavanidāna 2.1.
- 1151 Compare Sodhala's Gadanigraha and Cāmunda's Jvaratimirabhāskara.
- 1152 The same as snāyuka according to R. Bhatnāgar (JAI 107).
- 1153 A disease of the nose.
- 1154 Rakta dhīma a, rendered as lāl cakattā by the Hindī commentator, is identical with raktaman dala (see 10.79).
- 1155 Rendered as ghāva (a wound or sore) by the Hindī commentator.
- 1156 Most of these diseases remain unidentified.
- 1157 See Dalhana ad Su.Ni.1.74.
- 1158 Műträghata is called műtrarodha by Śrīkantha.
- 1159 A kind of ulcer.
- 1160 I.e., the articulatio atlanto-occipitalis (Haripranna's Rasayogasāgara, upodghāta 138).
- 1161 The text reads śritodare.
- 1162 The text reads jaladambuke.
- 1163 A kind of inflammatory swelling, called jālagardabha in the Suśrutasanhitā (Ni.13.17) and Aṣṭāngahrdayasanhitā (U.31.13cd–14ab).
- 1164 Compare the names mentioned in the Nāḍījñānadarpaṇa and other nāḍīśāstra-texts.
- 1165 Usually called Alambusā.
- 1166 Usually called Yaśasvinī.
- 1167 Usually called Pūsā.
- 1168 Usually called Gandharī.
- 1169 Usually called Sankhinī.
- 1170 Compare Sodhala's Gadanigraha 30.88.
- 1171 Regarded as identical with svarnaksīrī (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1172 Katutundī is regarded as identical with tiktabimbī (P.V. Sharma, 1997). Compare tundīrī.
- 1173 The same as katphala (P.V. Sharma, 1997).
- 1174 I.e., marica, black pepper (Hindī commentary: miraci).
- 1175 Compare Gadanigraha, kāya 3.28; 23.82 and 85; 33.45.

- 1185 See the bhūmikā to the edition.

- 186 The recorded names of the author of the Yogaratnāvalī are the same as those of the author of the Hitopadeśa; the former is always called a paramaśaivācārya. Atrideva (ABI 317) distinguishes two works called Hitopadeśa, the one by jainācārya Śrīkaṇṭhasūri, the other by paramaśaivācārya Śrīkaṇṭhaśivapaṇḍita. According to R. Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 107) the paramaśaivācārya Śrīkaṇṭhaśambhu, who wrote a work called Vaidyakasārasaṇgraha (i.e., Śrīkaṇṭhapaṇḍita's Yogaratnāvalī), differs from Śrīkaṇṭhasūri. P. Cordier (1896a: 4) regarded the Vaidyahitopadeśa and Yogaratnāvalī as treatises written by one and the same author; the same opinion is still adhered to by P. Hymavathi (1993: 56–57).
- 1187 Śainkarlāl Hariśainkar's bhūmikā; no proofs are adduced. R. Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 107) claims, also without giving arguments, that Śrīkanṭhasūri lived in the sixteenth century. Momin Ali (1990: 153) asserts that Śrīkanṭhaśambhu's Vaidyakasārasaingraha (i.e., the Hitopadeśa) dates from A.D. 1734. P. Hymavathi (1993: 56-57) places the author of the Hitopadeśa in the period A.D. 1300-1360.

- 1189 CC: not recorded. Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 42913.
- 1190 NCC VII, 124: the author was patronized by king Anantamiśra. J. Filliozat (Liste Nr. 44) recorded an anonymous Jagatprakāśa.

- 1192 NCC VII, 27. Edition: Cikitsā Tilakam of Srinivāsa, edited with introduction by Sri S. Venkatasubramanya Sastri, Madras Government Oriental Series Nr. 108, Madras 1953. This edition is based on a single MS, and consists of the sūtrasthāna only, a second MS (Cat. Madras Nr. 13338) breaks off in the same sthāna. The name of the work is mentioned at the beginning (1,2) and end (40.37) of the sūtrasthāna.
- 1193 Compare on the contents: P. Hymavathi (1993): 114-117.
- 1194 The sūtrasthāna consists of 2,000 verses.
- 1195 The author calls his work a summary of what has been said in earlier times (1.5); sauśrutāḥ and āgniveśakāh are mentioned in the first verse.
- 1196 Some verses of this appendix are indeed found in the Cārucaryā: 17 = Cārucaryā 506; 40 = 313; 42 = 315; 54 = 300; 56 = 303. See for an English translation of verses 122-133: B. Rama Rao (1973): 125.
- 1197 A bheşa japarisişţa at the end of the sūtrasthāna was probably added later, because it gives the formulae of a few rasas, and appears to be completely unrelated to the text of the sūtrasthāna.
- 1198 1.3-4; 40.34 and 36.
- 1199 See 1.5.
- 1200 See J.1 and 40.36.
- 1201 The editor of the Cikitsātilaka claims in his introduction (23-24) that the name of the author indicates a South Indian origin; he regards the Telugu words in the treatise as pointing to Āndhra or Karnātaka as the region of residence. P. Hymavathi (1993: 115-116) notices that more Telugu than Kannada words are present. The Telugu words, listed by the editor, are, however, apparently glosses, and do not form part of the text.
- 1202 Compare the name of Śrīnivāsa's grandfather.
- 1203 P. Hymavathi (1993): 115.
- 1204 P. Hymavathi does not specify the edition he used, which made it impossible to verify his claim.

- 1207 CC and NCC: not recorded as a work of Subrahmanya, but ascribed to Kārttikeya, son of Gaurī (NCCIV, 6). Check-list Nr. 118. STMI 33. Cat. Madras Nrs. 13176–77: ascribed to Subrahmanya, also called Śrīgaurīputrakārttikeya and Śrīpārvatīputrakārttikeya. S. Ārya (1984): 123. AVI 468: by Gaurīputra. This Bāhaṭagrantha need not directly be related to Vāgbhata's works. Compare Vāhada and Vāhaṭa.

- 1210 P. Hymavathi (1993: 230) supposes that astasthānaparīkṣā was invented by the author of the Bāhaṭagrantha, and that the science of medicine became known, after the spread of this new technique, as bāhataśāstra.

- 1218 CC: not recorded. Check-list Nr. 826. STMI (214) records a Sūtrasthāna by Sukhānanda.
- 1219 NCC II, 398: name of a chapter at the end of the Uddāmareśvara- or Uddāśatantra, ascribed to Mahādeva Śukrācārya, and dealing with abhicāra, vasīkaraṇa, etc.; alternative titles are Ullūkala, *printed, with Hindī translation, Moradabad 1925, and said to form part of a Kalpasāgara. STMI 215: in the form of a dialogue between Śukra and Mahādeva. Tāntrika Sāhitya 82–83: in seventy-two verses, consisting of a dialogue between Bhairava and Pārvatī, and dealing with the use of various parts of an owl's body for magical purposes.
- 1220 NCC: not recorded. Check-list Nr. 338: a commentary on the sūtrasthāna of an unknown work. Related to Indu's commentary on Vāgbhata's works?
- 1221 CC II, 95 and 174. A Reucaryā by Sundaradeva (NCC III, 31) contains undoubtedly the same text or part of it, since the colophon of the first chapter of the Bhūpacaryā mentions Reucaryā as one of the titles of the whole work or its first part (Cat. IO Nr. 2704).
- 1222 CC II, 99; III, 93. Cat. IO Nr. 2704. The Mallapurāṇa is in the form of a dialogue between Kṛṣṇa and Someśvara; it is probably not earlier than the fifteenth century and not later than A.D. 1674/75, the year in which the BORI MS was completed (see the Introduction to the Mallapurāṇa, ed. by B.J. Sandesara and R.N. Mehta, Gaekwad's Oriental series No. 144, Baroda 1964). See on the contents and importance of the Mallapurāṇa: E.D. Kulkarni (1961), whose article is based on the BORI MS (*Nr. 369 of 1892–95). A chapter on wrestling is also found in the Māṇasollāṣa. See on Indian wrestling: J.S. Alter (1992), (1993), (1994); O.M. Lynch (1990): 105–106. An interesting feature of the Mallapurāṇa is its description of five bodily types (sāra), called asthi-, māṇṣa-, medaḥ-, asthimedaḥ-, and asthimāinsasāra respectively.

- 1226 Bodleian d.725(5c): subjects covered are kāyapratīkāra, uttamāngarogacikitsā, strīrogacikitsā, and viṣacikitsā; see D. Wujastyk (1990): 111: the author was the son of Govindadeva.
- 1227 Compare Govindadeva.
- 1228 CC I, 541 and 728.
- 1229 He is called Susena in the colophons of the ed., in MS d.721 of the Bodleian Library (see D. Wujastyk, 1990: 93), and in MS Nr. 45194 of Cat. Sarasvati Bhavan XII. His name is Susena(deva) in the text (vyañjanavarga 12 and 14), Sukhena(deva) in MS Nr. 2732 of Cat. IO, Sukhena and Sukhena in MS Nr. 2733 of the same collection, Sukhena(paṇḍita) in MS Nr. 21 of CBORI (XVI, I), Sukhenadeva in MS Nr. 23 of the same collection, Sukha in MS Nr. 11039 of Cat. Tanjore, Śrīsukha in a Tanjore MS (see A.C. Burnell, 1880: 65), a MS of the Collection Punyavijayaji (Nr. 10), and in the CC. His work also went by the name of Susena (CBORI XVI, I, Nr. 21) and Susenavaidyaka (Cat. BHU Nr. 20).
- 1230 CCI, 52, 675, 730; II, 4, 10, 175, 189; III, 12: Āyurvedamahodadhi by Śrīsukha or Suṣeṇa. NCC II, 153. The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram records an anonymous Āyurvedamahodadhi, accompanied by a commentary (Nr. 906). Editions:

Gopal Reddy), Sanskrit Academy Series 45, Osmania University, Hyderabad 1991; this edition is based on a single paper MS, preserved in the Library of the Osmania University; the MS was completed in A.D. 1796 (see the Preface to the edition). The title is mentioned at the end of the work. See on this treatise: *D.V.S. Reddy and B. Rama Rao (1963).
- 161 The author does not mention his name at the end of the treatise (see B. Rama Rao, 1978: 12).
- 162 The first part breaks off towards the end of the nidana of visarpa.
- 163 The second part begins with the therapy of visarpa.
- 164 See, for example, 4468-71, consisting of four verses absent from the chapter on visphota of Mādhava's treatise.
- 165 Compare with the Mādhavanidāna the following series of chapters of the Āyurvedā-bdhisāra: śiroroga, netraroga, karnaroga, nāsāroga, mukharoga, viṣa, strīroga, garbhasrāva and garbhapāta, mūḍhagarbha, sūtikāroga, stanaroga, bālaroga. The arrangement of the kṣudrarogas differs considerably from their order in the Mādhavanidāna.
- Phiranga is referred to in some recipes of part one (4014-4019; 4042-4044); copacīnī, often prescribed against phiranga, occurs in the formula of copacīnīpāka (4050-4051), employed against upadarņša and related disorders.
- 167 Not known from other sources. CC: not recorded.

- 194 Bhagwan Dash (1976): 12; (1991): XXI. P. Cordier (1903a: 627) gives Sakalāyurvedasārasanngraha as the Sanskrit equivalent of the Tibetan title.
- 195 This title is given by Bhagwan Dash (1991: XXI) and P. Cordier (1903a: 627). Bhagwan Dash (1976: 12) also mentions a longer title: Chehi rig-byed mthah-dag-gi sñiñ-po bsdus-pahi glegs-bam-gyi che-brzod bsgyur byan sman-lam-gyirim-pa; che-brjod (probably correct) and smon-lam (probably incorrect) in Bhagwan Dash (1976a): 15-16.
- P. Cordier (1903a: 627) regarded Dar-mo and Blo-bzan chos-grags as two distinct persons; Bhagwan Dash (1976: 12; 1991: XXI) does not mention Dar-mo and refers to Blo-bzan chos-grags as the one who revised the translation. See on Dar-mo and his full name: M. Taube (1981): 6, 34, 49, 52, 73, 76; Rechung (1973): 21-22. Dar-mo wrote a biography of G-yu-thog yon-tan mgon-po the Younger (M. Taube, 1981: 49).

- 197 P. Cordier (1903a): 627; not mentioned by Bhagwan Dash. See G. Schulemann (1958) and M. Taube (1981) on persons called Hjam-dbyans.
- 198 Bhagwan Dash (1976: 12; 1976a: 15; 1991: XXI) gives Hāsavajra as the Sanskrit equivalent of his name and regards him as the author. Compare P. Cordier (1903a: 627).

Shama Sastry, University of Mysore, Oriental Library Publications, Sanskrit Series No. 61, Mysore 1922 [BL.14004.b.30; IO.San. 26.BB.2]; repr., University of Mysore Oriental Research Institute Series No. 166, Mysore 1988. The edition is based on three MSS of the Sūtra and one of the commentary.
- 209 These pākas do not agree with those of the classical doctrine of āyurveda; see Vaidya Bhagwan Dash (1971): 68–69.
- 210 The classical doctrine of āyurveda distinguishes eight main types of fever.
- Sūtras 2.20 and 21, on the lotus located in the back (pṛṣtha), are identical; the lotus of the umbilical region (nābhi) is described in two different ways (2.24 and 25), namely as covered by twenty, respectively thirty, vessels, and connected with the syllable ña, respectively the syllables ta and tha.
- 212 \overline{A} yurvedasūtra 3.1 = Yogasūtra 1.1; 3.13 = 1.3; 3.60 is related to Yogasūtra 1.15.
- 213 See R. Shama Sastry's Intr. to his ed. of the Ayurvedasūtra.
- 214 Bhoja's commentary is called Rājamārtanda.
- 215 Rāmānandasarasvatī's commentary is called Maniprabhā. See CC I, 480 and 520.
- 216 Three varieties are described, v\u00e4tapittodara, kaphapittodara, and pl\u00e4hodara (4.25-27). The types of classical \u00e4yurveda are different.
- 217 The sweet taste increases the blood, the salt taste the fatty tissue, and the acid taste muscular tissue.
- This series, more complete than that found at 4.40-42, differs from the latter: the sweet taste increases semen (śukla), the acid taste bone marrow (majjā), the salt taste bone tissue (asthi), the bitter taste fatty tissue (medas), the pungent tastemuscular tissue (māṇṣa), and the astringent taste both blood (rakta) and the nutrient fluid (rasa).
- 219 Sūtras 5.44–49 and 85–88 are, as indicated in Shama Sastry's Intr. to the ed. (9), borrowed from the Taittirīyopaniṣad. Āyurvedasūtra 5.85–88 = Taittirīyopaniṣad 3.10.5.

- 220 This series agrees for the greater part with 5.44-49.
- 221 The Vedic names of the months are used instead of those that became current in later times. e.g., Madhu instead of Caitra.
- 222 Some of the names are unusual, e.g., tintrikā (10.13), kalya (10.17), śaun da (10.28), tapasvinī (= jatāmāɪnsī; 10.32), dharusī (10.33), suprabhā (= padmakāstha or bākucī; 10.37), tāmrapuspī (= dhātakī or pāṭalā; 10.38), dīrghāyus (= jīvaka or śālmalī; 10.46), vṛṣyavallī (10.49), kalalā (10.65), āmaṇḍā (= eraṇḍa; 10.75), and vāmanī (= kapikacchū; 10.79). A few substances are described more than once: tintrikā (10.13, 41, 43: three entirely different versions), vāluka (10.24 and 35: two different versions), viśalyā (10.63 and 67: two different versions), and balā (10.73 and 77; 73 is a shortened version of 77). The descriptions cannot, as claimed in the Intr. to the edition (13-14), have been borrowed from the Dhanvantari-, Rāja-, and Bhāvaprakāśanighantu, because of the numerous discrepancies.
- 223 Āyurvedasūtra 11.3-54 = Yogasūtra 2.4-55; 12.1-55 = Yogasūtra 3.1-55; 12.56-76 = Yo gasūtra 4.1-22.
- 224 These statements agree with those in chapter five.
- 225 These series of lotuses and letters of the alphabet disagree with the series of chapter two; the number of lotuses is thirty-five in chapter two, twenty-seven in chapter fourteen.
- 226 See also on the special features Shama Sastry's Intr. to his edition of the Ayurvedasūtra.
- 227 See R. Shama Sasti y's Intr. to the edition, 13.
- 228 J.N. Farquhar (1967): 289.
- 229 J. Filliozat in L. Renou and J. Filliozat (1953): 46.
- 230 See the footnotes to the edition. Yogānanda usually refers to its Sūtrasthānaas sūtravacana, sometimes as sūtrasthāna (e.g., ad 1.5 and 3.82); the Śārīrasthāna is quoted as śārīravacana (e.g., ad 1.71, 74, 76), rarely as sūtravacana (e.g., ad 1.66), the Nidānasthāna as nidānavacana (e.g., ad 1.52-56); the Cikitsāsthāna is also quoted (ad 1.60).

- 602 See W. Kirfel (1927): 108. Compare Buddhabhatta's Ratnaparīkṣā. Manmatha Nath Dutt calls these chapters Agastyasamhitā (Preface V to his English translation of the Garudapurāṇa). The chapters on ratnaparīkṣa from the Garudapurāṇa are extensively quoted in the Yuktikalpataru, ascribed to Bhoja (see: Yuktikalpataru).

- 605 Garudapurāṇa 146.1. The pupils are Suśruta and others at the beginning of chapter 175, where Dhanvantari is regarded as a form of Viṣṇu.
- 606 Garudapurāna 147.48; compare Hārīta III.2.148-150 and A.h.Ni.2.62 = A.s.Ni.2.64.
- 607 The text of the editions of the Garuḍapurāṇa varies considerably. The text used by Manmatha Nath Dutt Shastrī for his English translation of the Garuḍapurāṇa has twenty-four extra chapters on nidāna.
- 608 Suśruta is mentioned as the one who receives Dhanvantari's teachings at Garudapurāņa 171.1, 172.1, 174.1, and 175.1.
- 609 See Garudapurāņa 168.1 and the colophon of chapter 173.
- 610 It is called Sūtrasthāna in the colophon.
- 611 The series of seven dhatus is peculiar in having vasa as its first member.
- 612 Vīrya is said to be threefold, uṣṇa, śīta and lavaṇa, which has no parallel in any āyurvedic treatise; śakti is mentioned as a synonym of vīrya.
- 613 Ajīrna is described as the disorder which is at the origin of all diseases. Compare the views found in the Āyurvedasūtra.
- 614 This chapter contains a mantra against bālagrahas.
- 615 J. Bhattācārya (1986: 312-314) compared the prescriptions of chapters 170 and 172 with those of the Cakradatta.
- 616 See, for example, 177.10, 68 and 79; 178.10 and 19; 182.16 and 21; 183.11-12.

- 617 See, for example, 177.68-72; 178.1-15; 184.14-28.
- 618 See B.L. Gaur (1992): 365; C. Minkowski (1991): 394. Compare Agnipurāṇa 295. The Buddhist equivalent of gārudī vidyā is jāngulīvidyā according to B.L. Gaur. Compare Amarakoṣa 1.7.11: a viṣavaidya (toxicologist or snake-charmer) is called jāngulika. The term jāngulika is also found in the Harsacarita (see MW).
- 619 See also C. Vogel, IL 377-378; C. Vogel refers to a forthcoming edition and translation of this chapter by R. Birwé and to *an article by this authorin ABORI, D.J. Vol., 47. J. Bhaṭṭā-cārya compared the readings of chapters 169 and 202 of the Garuḍapurāṇa with those of a number of Nighantus and works on dravyaguna (see J. Bhaṭṭācārya, 1986: 302-309).
- 620 E. Abegg (1956: 11-27) gives an analysis of the contents of the thirty-five chapters of the Pretakalpa of the Garuḍapurāṇa. His profusely annotated German translation of chapters one to sixteen of the Pretakalpa is not based on the text that forms part of the Garuḍapurāṇa, but on Naunidhirāma's Garuḍapurāṇasāroddhāra, a treatise sometimes confused with the Purāṇa itself; it is not much shorter than the Pretakalpa of the Garuḍapurāṇa and contains partly different material. The text of the Sāroddhāra was edited, with an English translation, by Ernest Wood and S. V. Subrahmanyam, The Sacred Books of the Hindus, Vol. IX, (*orig. publ., Allahabad 1911), repr., AMS Press, New York 1974. See on the Pretakalpa also: G. Bonazzoli (1984).
- 621 See on this chapter: E. Abegg (1956): 91–99; W. Kirfel (1954): 333–356. W. Kirfel, after consulting a number of editions of the Garudapurāṇa, distinguished four different versions of this embryological tract and established a critical text, accompanied by an annotated German translation. See on the Pretakalpa also: R.F.G. Müller (1930b): 190.
- 622 References are to the edition of the Garudapurāṇa, not to W. Kirfel's text.
- 623 Compare Sāroddhāra 6.3-4 and 15.7; Manusmṛti 3.46-47. Caraka (Śā.2.3), Suśruta (Śā. 2.25) and Vāgbhata (A.h.Śā.1.23cd-25; A.s.Śā.1.3) do not allow it on the first three days.

- 630 Compare Sāroddhīra 15.36-43. The same ten names are found in the Gherandasamhitā, Sadānanda's Vedāntasāra, the Śivasamhitā, and many other treatises.
- 631 The Sāroddhāra (15.47) mentions the same number.
- 632 The Sāroddhāra (15.47) mentions a number of seven hundred thousand. The total number of hairs of scalp, face and body is 2.900,956 in the Aṣṭāṅgasaṃgraha (Śā.5.59–60), but 29,956 in the Carakasamhitā (Śā.7.14).
- 633 The precise meaning of this term, also employed in the Padmapurāņa (see E. Abegg, 1956: 206), is unknown.
- 634 The difference between rakta and sonita is not quite clear, but sonita may be the female procreatory fluid here.
- 635 The measures are partly different in the Sāroddhāra (15.48-52): seventy pala of skin; fifteen pala of bile; seven pala and a half of phlegm; the quantities of faeces and urine are said to be indeterminable. Compare Ca.Śā.7.15; A.h.Śā.3.80-81; A.s.Śā.5.63.

- 834 Edition: Kasyapa Samhita, published by Sri Yathiraja Sampathkumaramuni of Melkote, printed at the Kabeer Printing Works, Triplicane, Madras 1933. This work should not be confused with the Kāśyapasaṃhitā or Vṛddhajīvakīyatantra on kaumārabhitya. See on the Tantric Kāśyapasaṃhitā: J. Gonda (1977a): 104–105. The Padmasaṃhitā (see NCC XI, 150) mentions the Kāśyapasaṃhitā among the 108 Pāñcarātrasaṃhitās (see G.R. Josyer's Foreword, 2, to the edition of the Kāśyapasaṃhitā).
- 835 This is the title of the work in the colophons; it is named in this way after the garuḍapañcā-rṇamantra (see 1.6–19). Compare NCC IV, 148–149 (nine works called Kāśyapasaṇhitā); V, 319–320. Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 41556: Garuḍapañcākṣarīkalpa, said to be the second chapter of the Kāśyapīya.
- 836 Kāśyapasarnhitā 3.1 and 4.1.

- 837 Kāśyapa received from Brahmā the knowledge of neutralizing poisons (Mahābhārata, Ādiparvan 8.11, ed. Poona). An authority called Kāśyapa or Vrddhakāśyapa is repeatedly quoted on the subject of toxicology. See: Kāśyapa.
- 838 See on these subjects: T. Goudriaan (1978).
- 839 The five types are: sthāvara, jangama, kṛtrima, grahaja, and śankāviṣa. See on śankāviṣa: Ca.Ci.23.221-223.
- 840 The first three groups are connected with one dosa, the mixed breeds, called vaitaka, with all three dosas.
- 841 See on the caustic juice from bhallātaka, Semecarpus anacardium Linn.f., and its actions: R.N. Chopra, R.L. Badhwar and S. Ghosh (1984): 325–327; H. Drury (1978): 388–389; DWH I, 389–392; WIRM IX, 271–274.
- 842 Chapter nine to twelve almost verbally agree with chapters seven to ten of the Tantrasārasamgraha, chapter eight of the latter work has twenty-two additional verses (8.43-75); the subject of chapter six of the Kāšyapasanhitā, sarpakrīdā, is dealt with in chapter five of the Tantrasārasamgraha. Compare R.C. Majumdar (1971): 230-231; Hemarājašarman 19; R. Šāstrī (1977): 443; V. Šukla I, 107-108; Tantrasārasamgraha, Preface 8 and bhūmikā 18-20.
- 843 Cat. Mysore XIII, Nrs. 41499 and 41500: in the form of a dialogue between Śiva and Pārvatī. Cat. Tanjore Nrs. 11045–46: a late medical treatise of Tantric inspiration, in the form of a dialogue between Śamkara and Pārvatī; the work deals with diseases and therapy, and describes the appeasement of various deities as an element of treatment. Compare NCC IV, 148; Hemarājaśarman 19.
- 844 AVI 140: a MS of a Kāśyapasamhitā, kept in the Sarasvati Bhavan of the Banāras Hindu University, contains a text dealing with nosology and therapy; a considerable number of rasauşadhas are found among the formulae; the treatise may not be earlier than the twelfth or thirteenth century; this work has been described by *V.N. Dwivedi et al. (1972). Compare NCC IV, 148.
- 845 See G.R. Josyer's Foreword (2) to the edition of the Tantric Kāśyapasaṃhitā. Compare NCC IV, 148.
- 846 NCCIV, 150. Cat. Madras Nr. 13112: on the characteristics of diseases and their therapy; the treatise cannot be very old since it mentions śańkhadrāva as a panacea.
- 847 NCC: not recorded. MS Collection Punyavijayaji.
- 848 NCC V, 104: a text of this name, compiled from various sources, has been printed, with a Marāthī translation, *Poona 1886; V, 354: printed, first instalment only, The Journal of the Tanjore Maharaja Serfoji's Sarasvati Mahal Library 18, 1/2, 1965, 1-5. Cat. Tanjore Nrs. 11048-52 (cf. A.C. Burnell, 1880: 69): a work on many topics including magic and medicine. See Tāntrika Sāhitya 154-155 for a number of works called Kautukacintāmaņi.
- 849 NCC V, 105. Cat. IO Nrs. 2725–26: the title is not mentioned in the MSS; a treatise on quack medicines and spells, and their miraculous power in effecting cures and the fulfilment of one's desires. The description of the contents of Nr. 2725 in Cat. IO is incomplete; the verses quoted state that the work is devoted to the two categories of kautuka called artharūpa and śabdarūpa; the latter category consists of poetic alamkāras; the section on artharūpakautuka describes various types of stambha (agni-, aśani-, jalastambha, etc.) and vašīkarana, kṛtrimavastukarana (the making of counterfeit substances), churikābandha (the protection from attacks by means of a knife), etc.
- 850 NCC V, 105. STMI 97.

- 851 NCC V, 106: a Tantric medical compilation in fifteen chapters, based on Nāgārjunasamhitā. Yogaratnāvalī. Kāmaratna. and Kautukacintāmani by Anūpasimha.
- 852 NCC V. 105: a dialogue between Siva and Pārvatī on magic, medicine, etc.

- 1222 CC I, 692: a translation of Qānūni Ṭibb (i.e., Avicenna's Qānūn).
- 1223 CC: not recorded. MS Collection Punyavijayaji. A sahadevīkalpa is found in the Kākaca-ndīśvarakalpatantra.
- 1224 CC I, 705. Editions:
 - a Sahasrayoga, with a Malayāļam commentary, ed. by Āttūr K. Piṣārōṭi, Bhārata Vilāsam Press; Trichur *1926 and 1947.
 - b Cikitsāsārasarvasva or Sahasrayoga, with a Malayāļam commentary called Sujanapriya, ed. by K.V. Krishnan Vaidyan and S. Gopala Pillay, The Vidyarambham Press, Mullakkal, Alleppey, * 1st ed., 1946, 11th ed., 1974.
 - c sahasrayogam (mūl saiņskṛt evain malayālam-hindīanuvād sahit), keralīya āyurved cikitsā paramparā kā ek lokapriya granth, ed. by Rāmnivās Śarmā and Surendra Śarmā, Daksina Prakāśan, 2nd ed., Hyderabad 1990.

Ed. a is preferable to ed. b, according to F. Zimmermann ((1989: 251, n.54); it is based on the MSS of the royal palace at Cranganore; unfortunately, its editor interpolated a number of apocryphal recipes. References are to page numbers of editions b (ed. 1974) and c. See on the Sahasrayoga: *R.N. Sharma (1988); M. Uniyāl (1991).

- 1225 The total number of recipes is about three hundred in the MSS (F. Zimmermann, 1989: 109), but their number has increased to more than one thousand in ed. b. See on the structure of the Sahasrayoga: F. Zimmermann (1989): 201–202. See on a number of recipes: M.C. Sāvamt (1994).
- 1226 F. Zimmermann (1989: 107–111) mentions a number of about fifty. See for a detailed analysis of one of the recipes: F. Zimmermann (1989): 52–59. See also Vayaskara N.S. Mooss (1979): 34–35 and 41–42. See for the preparation of many recipes: The Ayurvedic Formulary of India, Part I (1978). See on manipravalam: F. Zimmermann (1989): 105–111.
- 1227 See N.S. Mooss (1979): 35.
- 1228 The iatrochemical formulae are for the greater part in manipravāļam according to F. Zimmermann (1989: 74); many of them are, however, in Sanskrit, at least in ed. c: the formulae of jvarānkuśarasa (ed. c, 224), rāmabānarasa (ed. c, 224), bhūtabha iravarasa (ed. c, 231), tāmrabhairavagutikā (ed. c, 232), etc.
- 1229 Some series of prescriptions are preceded by verses on nidāna in Malayāļam. See, e.g., nāsikāroganidāna (ed. b, 478–480) and śiroroganidāna (ed. b, 499–501).
- 1230 Probably phirangaroga.
- 1231 Quoted are A.h.Sū.22.27-31 (ed. b, 551); 16.25-28 and 31-35 (ed. b, 558).
- 1232 The actual number is larger, because several recipes counted as one item in the edition actually consist of a series of prescriptions.
- 1233 M. Uniyāl (1991) gives, without referring to a particular edition, the following numbers: 111 kaṣāyas, 66 ghṛtas, 104 tailas, 92 cūrṇas, 16 vaṭīs, 70 guṭikās, 15 ariṣṭas, 10 āsavas, and 14 bhasmans and kṣāras.
- 1234 Malayālam names of medicinal substances are omitted for the larger part.
- 1235 Identified as Flacourtia indica (Burm.f.) Merr. = F. ramontchi L'Herit. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 763).

- 177 The MSS mention either A.D. 1216 or 1665 as the year of completion. W.A. de Silva (1913: 42-43) was convinced that the work was completed in 1665 (see, however, the critical remarks of J. Attygalle, appended to W.A. de Silva's article). K.D. Somadasa (1996) (WS. 10) gives the same year of composition. Some MSS indicate that the Yogaratnā-karaya was written during the reign of a king Bhuvanekabāhu, but it cannot be established with certainty which king of this name is meant (see J. Liyanaratne, 1987a: 196-198). K.R. Norman (1983: 163) assigns the Yogaratnākaraya to the late fourteenth century.

Chapter 6 Authors and works on veterinary medicine

- See on Indian veterinary science in general: Anonymous (1945); R. Froehner (1952): 54–60, (1968): 572–582; J. Jolly (1901): 14 (C.G. Kashikar 17–18); A. Krishnaswami Ayyar (1939a), (1939b); A. Smithcors (1957): 42–109.
- 2 NCC I, 302. The author was a Digambara Jain (NCC; Rājkumār Jain, 1981: 88) or a brāhmana (ABI 329; Ambālāl Jośī, 1981: 93). Atrideva and Jośī call the work Aśvavaidya, date it to about A.D. 1400, and add that the works of Candrarāja were Abhinavacandra's model. Vardhamāna Pārśvanātha Śāstrī claims (Intr. to his ed. of the Kalyāṇakāraka, 39) that Abhinavacandra wrote his work not in Sanskrit, but in Kannaḍa. A.M. Shastri (1991: 114–115) says that Abhinavacandra's Aśvavaidya was written in Kannaḍa, dates from about the fourteenth century, and was based on a treatise on aśvaśāstra attributed to the mythical being called Revanta.
 - See on Revanta, also called Raivata (a common faulty reading according to H.-P. Schmidt, 1977: 142), who is associated with horses: J.N. Banerjea (1956): 442-443; A. Bhattacharyya (1977): 45-46; N.K. Bhattasali (1929): 174-177; B.B. Bidyabinod (1909); Dowson; K.K. Handiqui (1949); 461; H. Härtel (1960); 24, 37, 46, 68-70; H. Krishna Sastri (1916): 236; J.J. See also the Raivatastotra in Nakula's Aśvaśāstra and the mantra addressed to Revanta in Jayadatta's Aśvāyurveda (quoted by Mitramiśra in his Vīramitrodaya, Laksanaprakāśa, aśvalaksanaprakarana, p.446). The probably earliest references to Revanta are found in the Brhatsamhitā (57.56), Mārkandeyapurāņa (see J.N. Banerjea, who refers to the Bibliotheca Indica edition, chapter 109; H.-P. Schmidt, 1977: 154) and Visnupurāna (3.2.7) (see C. Suneson, 1984: 237–238). He also figures in the Agnipurāņa (according to the Śabdaka/padruma; see however, H.-P. Schmidt, 1977: 154: the Agnipurana does not mention him), Bhavisyapurāņa (quoted by H.-P. Schmidt, 1977: 154), Devībhāgavatapurāņa, Garudapurāņa, Kālikāpurāna, Matsvapurāna, Sāmbapurāna (quoted by H.-P. Schmidt, 1977: 154). Skandapurāna, and Visnudharmottarapurāna (3,67.9, ed. Śrīvenkateśvar Press, Bombay 1912/13; quoted by H.-P. Schmidt, 1977: 154), as well as in various other works in Sanskrit and in regional languages, in inscriptions, etc. (see H.-P. Schmidt, 1977 and C. Suneson, 1984; see also J.J. Meyer, 1937, s.v. Revanta). The etymology of Revata is elaborately discussed by C. Suneson (1984: 256-262); see also H.-P. Schmidt (1977: 141, 149 and 154; an etymology is found in the Bhavisyapurāna).

- 30 The verses are the same as those in the Mānasollāsa, but Someśvara's seventh type, called kubja, is absent.
- 31 The verses are almost the same as in the Mānasollāsaand are also found in the anonymous Gajaśāstra, which quotes them from a treatise by Vyāsa. The amśaka types are called after gods; a part (amśa) of these gods is thought to be present in them.
- 32 The avartas are especially prominent among these marks.

- 33 Twelve types of dantāghāta are enumerated and described; their names are also found in the anonymous Ga jaśāstra, which adds two more.
- 34 They consist of: śarīra, roman, chāyā, gati, gandha, svara, varṇa, sattva.
- 35 The names and descriptions do not tally with those of Someśvara.
- 36 Four sheens are distinguished, partially different from those of Jayadatta.
- 37 The list resembles that of Nakula's Aśvaśāstra.

Edition: Šālihotra of Bhoja, critically edited by Ekanath Dattatraya (sic) Kulkarni, Sources of Indo-Aryan Lexicography 11, Deccan college, Postgraduate and Research Institute, Poona 1953. This edition, based on four MSS and a number of related texts, contains a useful introduction (with summary of the contents of the treatise) by E.D. Kulkarni, and a number of Appendices: 1, A comparison of the text of Bhoja's Śālihotra with Nakula's Aśvacikitsita; II, Additional passages found in Bhoja's Yuktikalpataru; III, Critical notes; IV, Glossary of important and technical words in the text; V, Glossary of important words from additional passages; VI, Glossary of Indian drugs mentioned by Bhoja in his text; VII, Index verborum to the text; VIII, Index of important words in additional passages from the Yuktikalpataru. The edition was reviewed by J. Filliozat, JA 241, 1953, 539–540.
- 43 The corresponding passages of the Aśvacikitsita are indicated in the footnotes and quoted in Appendix 1. The following verses cannot be traced to Nakula's text: 26–27, 39, 48ab, 49cd, 50ab, 69, 84–90, 92ab, 95–97, 112ab, 117, 130–138.

- 53 NCC V, 229. AVI 519. A treatise on elephants, called Bṛhaspatimata (A.B. Keith, 1935: 757, Nr. 6257; STMI 535) is the same work (see NCC V, 229). Th. Aufrecht (CC I, 376) records a Bṛhaspatitantra, dealing with the different breeds of elephants. A Bṛhaspatisaṃhitā on elephants and their medical treatment is quoted by Mitramiśra in the Vīramitrodaya, Lakṣaṇaprakāśa, gajalakṣaṇaprakaraṇa, p.331-346, 347-350, 350-352, 353-354, 356-376, 378-386, 390-397, 399.

Bṛhaspati is referred to in Godāvara's Hariharacaturanga and Nīlakanṭha's Mātangalīlā(4. 4). He is mentioned in the commentary on Nārada's Gajaśikṣā and in Pālakāpya's Hastyāyurveda. Bṛhaspati and a Bārhaspatya are among the sources of Basava's Śivatattvaratnākara.

Kulkarni (Intr. to his ed. of Bhoja's Śālihotra, 16) state that Dīpankara was a son of Nānākara and grandson of Nidhānakara. P. Peterson (1899), Preface 24: the author was a vaidya by caste, belonging to the Kāntāravāsinī Gāi or Gaï; he appears to have been a Buddhist; his work is said to consist of 1,300 verses in ninety chapters; Śālihotra and his disciples are saluted.
- 59 NCC: not recorded. AVI 519: the author is called Garia. Hemarājašarman says (36) that the author refers to Śālihotra, Garga and Suśruta as authorities on the science of horses. This work may be the same as Gana's Siddhayogasamgraha (see: Gana).
- The author was a Jain householder (gṛhastha) who lived in the twelfth century. See on him and the mentioned two works, written in Prakrit: B.M. Chintamani (1971): 169; JAI 91–92; V.P.P Śāstrī (1984): 387. B.M. Chintamani and V.P.P. Śāstrī assign him to the thirteenth century. According to R. Bhaṭṇāgar (JAI 91–92) he wrote, apart from the mentioned works, a Svapnaśāstra and a Sāmudrikatilaka, also called Puruṣastrīlakṣaṇa (see NCC IX, 90 and 356: Durlabharāja, son of Narasiṃha or Nṛṣiṃha Mahattara, author of Sāmudrikatilaka or Naralakṣaṇa). Durlabharāja was a minister of Kumārapāla of the Caulukya dynasty of Gujarāt (A.D. 1143–1174); his son, Jagaddeva, who wrote the Svapnacintāmaṇi, held the same position as his father (JAI 91). Compare Jinadāsa.
- 61 CC: not recorded. Alternative titles are Gajaparīkṣā, Gajaprabandha and Hasticikitsā; the treatise deals in about 1500 verses with the characteristics of elephants, the duration of their life, their conception period, diseases, etc.; it was completed in A.D. 1158/59 (JAI 91).
- 62 NCC: not recorded. This treatise, completed in A.D. 1157/58 according to R. Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 91), is concerned with horses.

- 71 NCC V, 230: extracts from Pālakāpya with a Marāṭhī verse translation. Check-list Nr. 291. STMI 545-546. Cat. Tanjore Nr. 11287: incomplete (the Sanskrit text reaches up to 10.3); the Sanskrit text is chiefly from Pālakāpya and the Vaiśampāyanīya; the text is accompanied by a translation in Marāṭhī verse by Śarabhendra (see Cat. Tanjore on the contents of the Marāṭhī version); the MS contains 300 finished coloured illustrations with text, ninety-three without text, and sixteen unfinished coloured and pencil sketches. Cat. Tanjore Nrs. 11265-11281 and 11282-11286 (with Telugu commentary) appear to contain the same text. A.B. Keith (1935): 756 (Nr. 6255). Edition: Gaja Śāstram of Pālakāpya Muni with extracts from other works and coloured illustrations, edited with translation in Tamil by K.S. Subrahmanya Śāstri and a summary in English by S. Gopalan, Saraswati Mahal Series No. 76, Tanjore 1958.
- 72 Śarabhendra, also called Serfojī, son of Tulajā II, was one of the Mahratta kings of Tanjore, who reigned from A.D. 1798 to 1832. He was the patron of many scholars and was mainly responsible for the development of the Sarasvatī Mahāl Library at Tanjore; he also compiled a large medical treatise in Marāṭhī, the Śarabhendravaidyaratnāvalī, consisting of a collection of more than five thousand recipes. See on this work: N. Gangadharan (1922): 156; V.S. Venkatasubramania Sastri and C. Rajarajeswara Sarma (1974): 34–36. The Śarabhendravaidyaratnāvalī has been edited in Marāṭhī and in a Tamil translation (the latter edited by K. Vāsudeva Cāstri and S. Venkaṭṭarājan, title: Carapentirar Vaittiyamuṭaikal, vols. 1–9, Tañcai 1949–1957).
- 73 The Gajašāstra and its anubandha are composed mainly in ślokas, but contain also many stanzas in more elaborate metres.
- 74 It is an extract from the vanānucarita chapter (I.1) of Pālakāpya's Hastyāyurveda.
- 75 This elaborate description is not found in the Hastyāyurveda.
- 76 These descendants and their characteristics are also described in Someśvara's Mänasollāsa (2.274–281). See: S.S. Misra (1982): 223–224; Edgerton's translation of the Mātaigalīlā, chapter 1, n.17.
- 77 More succinctly related in the Mātangalīlā (1.35-39).
- 78 The eight major forests and the elephants found there are also described in the Hariha-racaturanga, the Mānasollāsa, and the Nītinirotīti, a commentary on the Arthaśāstra by Yogghama, alias Mugdhavilāsa (see the quotation in a footnote of Kangle's edition of the Arthaśāstra, ad 2.2.15–16). The Arthaśāstra (2.2.15–16) merely lists the names of the forests. The Mānasollāsa differs somewhat in its details. See on these forests: S.S. Misra (1982): 216–217; Th.R. Trautmann (1982): 273–278. See also: P.E.P. Deraniyagala (1938): 161–162. Compare Nārāyana Dīkṣita's Gajagrahanaprakāra, chapter 3.
- 79 Compare on this subject: P.E.P. Deraniyagala (1938): 152-155.
- 80 The names of the second and third series are largely the same as those mentioned in the Mātangalīlā, but this work is not quoted.
- 81 Edgerton (see his translation of Nīlakantha's Mātaṅgalīlā, ch.5, n.39) mentions that this chapter contains five verses which are also found in the Mātaṅgalīlā.
- 82 See on this subject: P.E.P. Deraniyagala (1938): 159–160. The largest elephants, those most suited to warfare, are found in Sri Lanka (see K. Karttunen, 1997: 194, on references to them in Graeco-Roman sources). Compare the critical remarks of Th.R. Trautmann (1982: 279–280) on the reliability of the classical sources, in particular Aelian. See on the elephant in Aelian's De natura animalium: H.H. Scullard (1974): 222–230. - 83 See on this subject: S.S. Misra (1982): 217–220. See also: P.E.P. Deraniyagala (1938): 155–157. The bhadra, manda and mrga, as well as mixed types, are mentioned, for example, in the Rāmāyaṇa (Bālakāṇḍa 6.25; ed. Bombay). See on the mrga and other types used in processions and other ceremonials: R. Carrington (1958): 197–198.
- 84 These eight types are called after gods; the Gajaśāstra describes eight types, among which the viṣṇvaṃśa holds the most prominent place; the verses are also found in the Mānasollāsa and Śivatattvaratnākara, which add a ninth type, called agnimāruta. See on the aṃśa types S.S. Misra (1982): 221–222. See also: P.E.P. Deraniyagala (1938): 157.
- 85 Three pure and three mixed types are described, to which three, called antarvarna, are added from another source. See on the colours: P.E.P. Deraniyagala (1938): 158. A different classification is quoted from an unspecified source. An independent and very elaborate classification of male elephants is found in the Hastividyārṇava (1–149, pages 12–78), followed by a classification of females (pages 79–96).
- 86 Five types, called after the five elements (mahābhūta).
- 87 Numerous smells are distinguished. See P.E.P. Deraniyagala (1938): 159.
- 88 Three main types (sāttvika, rājasa, tāmasa), which are subdivided. See on the sattvas: P.E.P. Deraniyagala (1938): 158.
- 89 Many types of trumpeting are mentioned.
- 90 The description according to Vyāsa is also found in the Hastividyārņava (p.104–110), Mānasollāsa, and Śivatattvaratnākara. Compare S.S. Misra (1982): 222–223.
- 91 The classification differs from that in the Mātaṅgalī lā (12.13). See on the locomotion of elephants: G.M. McKay (1973): 43-44.

- 110 Edgerton mentions (see his transl. of Nīlakantha's Mātangalīlā, p.62, n.39) that the MS of the Gajasāstra also quotes from a Gautamīya and a Rājaputrīya; the latter is a work on elephants by Budha according to the Matsyapurāna (24.3); the Padmapurāna (1.12.43–45) tells that Rājaputra, a son of Tārā and also known as Budha, knew all the sciences and

- was the propounder of the science of elephants. Gautama and Rājaputra are authorities on elephants quoted in Godāvara's Hariharacaturanga.
- 111 I.e., the work on elephants by Vyāsa.
- 112 Pālakāpya is mentioned in the final colophon of both Gajašāstra and Gajašāstrānubandha, which suggests that the major part of the treatise has been taken from a work ascribed to him. This work cannot be the Hastyāyurveda, which does not deal with many subjects of the Gajašāstra.
- 113 F. Edgerton (see the preface to his translation of Nīlakantha's Mātangalīlā, 9-10) is convinced that the Gajaśāstra is a relatively late compilation, since it contains (without referring to its source) nearly one hundred verses of the Mātangalīlā, scattered in many different places; one of the verses quoted was originally composed by the author of the Mātangalīlā.

A Dhanurveda, compiled from various sources, has recently been published: Dhanurveda (Sub-Veda of Yajur-Veda); compilation, translation (into Hindī) and commentary: Dr. Devvrat Acharya, Vijaykumar Govindram Hasanand, Delhi 1999. V.R.R. Dikshitar (1987: 367) refers to a Tryambakadhanurveda and a Vīracintāmanidhanurveda (this is an extract from the Śārngadharapaddhati according to CC I, 594). The Traiyambakadhanurveda is quoted in Mitramiśra's Vīramitrodaya, Laksanaprakāśa, nānāyudhalaksanaprakarana, p.276-278, 280; the same applies to the Vīracintāmanidhanurveda (nānāyudhalaksanaprakarana, p.279-284) and the Auśanasadhanurveda (rājacakralakṣaṇaprakaraṇa, p.239-241; nānāyudhalaksanaprakarana, p.293-294, 303, 306-318) (compare P.K. - 146 The verses on elephants appear to have been composed, at least for the larger part, by the author himself, and are not borrowed from earlier treatises on the same subject.
- 147 Pālakāpya is the authority quoted; the verses are closely related to Gajaśāstra 2.62-64.
- 148 Cf. Mātangalīlā 1.26-30.
- 149 Compare the corresponding verses of the Ga jaśāstra and Someśvara's Mānasollāsa.
- 150 Rājaputra is the same as Bāşkali in Pālakāpya's Hastyāyurveda. Compare the Rājaputrīya mentioned in the Gajasāstra.
- 151 Two varieties of chāyā are distinguished: chāyā in the restricted sense, and prabhā; three types of chāyā are described, called after the elements fire, water and earth.
- 152 Compare Śivatattvaratnākara VII.11.205-212.
- 153 Suitable types are elephants called prājāpatya, aindra, kaubera, kaumāra, saumya, āgneya, and vāyava.
- 154 These elephants should be endowed with eleven good qualities.
- 155 Some unsuitable types are called vātakarin (761), rākṣasa (762; 782), pūtana (772), hastanikṣepa (776), caṇḍāla (780), and napuṛṇsaka (786).
- 156 See on the life span of elephants: P.D. Stracey (1991): 51-52.
- 157 The sage Śālihotra is mentioned as the protector of horses (55; 57-59).
- 158 The list resembles that of Nakula's Aśvaśāstra See S.S. Misra (1982): 185. Compare the list of breeds of Gaṇa's Sārasaɪngraha (see A.C. Burnell, 1880: 74). Breeds of horses are also mentioned in the Arthaśāstra (2.30.29).
- 159 The distinction of bhadra, mada and mrga classes is usually applied to elephants.
- 160 The seven śuddha types are brāhma, ārṣa, māhendra, yāmya, kaubera, vāruna, and gāndharva; the six rājasa types are āsura, rākṣasa, paiśāca, nāga, pautra, and śākuna; the three tāmasa types are pāśava, mātsya, and vānaspatya. This classification is the same as that found in Nakula's Aśvaśāstra, but the descriptions are more elaborate. Compare the human sattva typology (Ca.Śā.4.37-39).
- 161 See on the anatomy of horses and its terminology: W.D. O'Flaherty (1978; see figure 1, illustrating the points of the horse); S.S. Misra (1982): 202–206. Some of the terms occurring in this section are: āsana (the saddle area; 330–331); bhāsala (dock; 345); ghoṇā (the nose; 314); grīvā (crest of the neck; 326); kākasa (the sides of the withers; 328–329); kakṣa (elbow and region of the girth; 339); kakuda (the withers; 329–330); keṣānta (the forelock; 327); kroḍa (the area between chest and heart; 333–334); kūrca (the back tendon; 336–337); kuṣṭhikā (the pastern; 337); nigāla (the part of the neck around the jugular furrow; 324, 331); mandira (back of the knee or hock; 352); manḍūkī (the frog; 338); pālihasta (the front of the cannon bone; 336–337); prapāṇa (the inside of the upper lip; 312–313); protha (the muzzle, the area around the nostrils; 313–314); randhra (the sheath?; 349); sthūra (hock; 351–352); stuva (poll; 321); trika (the area of the back together with the joints of the hind-quarters; 342); uparandhra (the penis?; 349); vaha, vāha (the harness point, between the cest and the point of the shoulder; 325, 328); vakrasakthi (351). See for a discussion of the term manḍūkī: W.D. O'Flaherty (1978).
- 162 This subject is not dealt within Nakula's Aśvaśāstra. Some terms found in this section are: ghoṇā (370); kākasa (381); kakṣa (385); kakud (361); kakuda (381, 387); kroda (382); kūrca (384); kuṣṭhikā (384); manyā (the side of the ear; 379); nigāla (378); prapāna (368);

- protha (361); sthūra (393); stuva (376); trika (388); vakrasakthi (396); vidu (the hollow between the frontal bones: 379).
- 163 Three types are distinguished, related to vata, pitta and kapha.
- 164 The eight shapes distinguished are very close to those of Nakula's treatise on horses: śukti, sanıghāta, mukula, avalīdhaka, pādukā, pādukārdha, śatapādī, and jalāvarta.
- 165 The total number of āvartas is 123; they are divided into 113 whirls called impermanent (adhruva), and ten called dhruva. Nakula has a total number of ninety-six, of which again ten are dhruva.
- 166 Two special āvartas, described by Someśvara, are mentioned: devamaņi (666) and rocamāna (670).
- 167 The views of several authorities on the number of chief colours are referred to; these authorities are Sumitra (one chief colour), Nişadha (two colours), Mitrajit (three colours), Śālihotra (four colours), Astyali(?) (five colours), Kārika(?) (six colours), and Garga (seven colours).
- 168 The maximum span is thirty-two years.

- 178 D. Pingree (CESS A 2, 129) calls him Godāvara Miśra.
- 179 NCC II, 23.
- 180 Godāvara also refers to his (A)dvaitadarpaņa in his Yogacintāmaņi (P.K. Gode, 1944d: 472-474; compare NCC I, 125: quoted once in the Yogacintāmaņi, twice in the Hariharacaturanga).
- 181 Also referred to in Godāvara's Yogacintāmani (P.K. Gode, 1944d: 472-474).
- 182 See CESS A 2, 129-130 (lost).
- 183 See CESS A 2, 129-130 (one incomplete MS has been preserved).
- 184 See P.K. Gode (1944d). Sridhar Das (1960: 63) adds a Mantracintāmani, Yantracintāmani, and Durgotsavapū jākramasamskrtapaddhati to the list of Godāvara's works (not recorded as works of Godāvara in CC and NCC). K.M. Bhubaneswar (1958: XX) adds a Mukticintāmani, and, as his most popular work, still being used all over Orissa, the Śāradāśaradarcanasamskārapaddhati (two MSS are in the Orissa State Museum collection).
- Mentioned in the introductory verses of the Yogacintāmani (see P.K. Gode, 1944d). D. Pingree (CESS A 2, 129) calls him Balabhadra Miśra. Balabhadra (see on him: K.M. Bhubaneswar, 1958: XVII-XVIII) was the author of the Advaitacintāmani (NCC I, 124) and Śārīrakasārapuruşottamastuti (CC: not recorded), two works referred to as written by his father in Godāvara's Yogacintāmani; Balabhadra's father, Gangādhara, wrote the Kāsīmīmāmsā (NCC IV, 137) and the Sannkṣepaśārīrakavārttika (see CC I, 685) on the Sannkṣepaśārīraka, two works (these two works are attributed to Narasinha, Gangādhara's elder brother, by K.M. Bhubaneswar, 1958: XVII) mentioned as written by his grandfather in Godāvara's Yogacintāmani (see P.K. Gode, 1944d).

- 192 NCC III, 172 and VI, 142. Check-list Nr. 383. STMI 537. Cat. Berlin Nr. 945. This treatise deals with the elephant and its diseases in three sections (ullāsa); its subjects are (see Cat. Berlin): sādhyāsādhya, lakṣaṇa, brāhmaṇādi, jātilakṣaṇa, āraṇyadantisā-dhukaraṇahastivāhana, saṃkīṛṇajāti, dantidoṣa, śītalīkaraṇa, jalodgāra, jāṭhara, nādī, svaralakṣaṇaviṣacikitsā, gajacakra, gajapraśaṃsā, gajalūtā, kavacādika, jvara, atisāra, grahaṇī, kmiroga, pāṇḍu, pracaṇamayakalānala madya, gulma, śūla, arocakāmaya, karṇaroga, śiroroga, śuṇdāmaya, tuṇḍaroga, rājaroga, netraroga, āmavāta, mūtrabhangaroga, kuṣṭha, khañjatā, raktapitta, śītapitta, apasmāra and mūrchā, prameha, and vīryahīnacikitsā (compare STMI 537). Gopāladāsa was a son of Balabhadra. He also wrote a Vaidyavilāsa and a commentary, called Śabdāmṛta, on the Kumārasaṃbhava (NCC VI, 142). This commentary is referred to in Rāmacandra's Prakriyākaumudī, a grammatical work that dates from the fourteenth or fifteenth century (see CC I, 347 and 512, II, 77 and 210, III, 74; NCC XII, 220–223); this establishes that Gopāladāsa Kāyastha is earlier than this Rāmacandra.

Dave (1985: 130) says that, apart from the pied crested cuckoo, four more cuckoos are called câtaka: the common and the large hawk cuckoo, the plaintive cuckoo, and the banded bay cuckoo. See on Cuculus varius varius Vahl, the common hawk-cuckoo: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 3, 200–202, on C. sparverioides sparverioides Vigors, the large hawk-cuckoo: the same, 3, 198–200, on Cacomantis passerinus (Vahl), the plaintive cuckoo: the same, 3, 218–220, on Cacomantis sonneratii (Latham), the Indian baybanded cuckoo: the same, 3, 215–217. Compare Cakra ad Ca.1.12.75: priyavādin = cātaka: Dalhana ad Su.Sū.46.59: sāranga = cātaka.
- 287 Clamator coromandus (Linnaeus), the redwinged crested cuckoo. See: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 3, 192-194.
- 288 Haliaeetus leucoryphus (Pallas), the ringtailed or Pallas's fishing eagle. See: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 289-292.
- 289 Circaetus gallicus, the short-toed eagle. See on Circaetus gallicus (Gmelin): S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 327–329.
- 290 Spilornis cheela (Latham), the crested serpent eagle. See on the Indian subspecies: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 329-335.
- 291 Accipiter badius (Gmelin), the shikra. See on the Indian subspecies: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 234–239. Compare Caraka's syena.
- 292 Falco peregrinus, the shahin falcon. See on Falco peregrinus peregrinator Sundevali, the shaheen falcon: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 350–352. Compare Caraka's śaśaghnī.
- 293 Torgos calvus, the black or king vulture. See on Sarcogyps calvus (Scopoli), the black or king vulture: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 296–298. Compare Caraka's grdhra.
- 294 Gyps bengalensis (Gmelin), the Indian whitebacked vulture. See: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 307-310.
- 295 Haliastur indus, the Brahminy kite. See on Haliastur indus (Boddaert), the Brahminy kite: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 230–232.
- 296 Milvus migrans, the common pariah kite. See on Milvus migrans govinda Sykes, the pariah kite: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 227–229. Compare Dalhana ad Su.Sū.46.74: the cilli is the same as the cilha; ad Su.U.35.6: the cīralli is called cilla in the vernacular;
- 297 Anthropoides virgo (Linnaeus), the demoiselle crane. See: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 2, 146–148. Compare Caraka's krauñca.
- 298 Ciconia ciconia, the white stork. See on Ciconia ciconia ciconia (Linnaeus), the white stork, and Ciconia ciconia boyciana Swinhoe, the Eastern white stork: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 99–102. Compare Caraka's baka.
- 299 Anastomus oscitans (Boddaert), the openbill stork. See: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 95-98.
- 300 Leptoptilos dubius (Gmelin), the adjutant stork. See: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 1, 105–107. Compare Cakra ad Ca.Sü.27.41: the krauñca is called koñca in the vernacular.
- 301 See on Hamsadeva's fanciful classification of the crows and allied birds: K.N. Dave (1985: 3-4)
- 302 Corvus splendens Vieillot, the house crow. See on the Indian subspecies: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 5, 242–247. Compare Caraka's vāyasa.
- 303 Pyrrhocorax graculus, the Himalayan yellowbilled or Alpine chough. See on Pyrrhocorax

- graculus digitatus Hemprich et Ehrenberg: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 5, 236–238. Karaţa is found at Astānganighantu 354.
- 304 Unidentified. Compare Astānganighantu 354.
- 305 Corvus macrorhyncos, the jungle crow. See on the subspecies of Corvus macrorhynchos Wagler, the jungle crow: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 5, 251–258.
- 306 Unidentified. Dhvārikṣa is one of the synonyms of kāka, a crow in general, in Sanskrit literature (see K.N. Dave, 1985: 1, 2).
- 307 Unidentified. Compare Astānganighantu 355, where it is a synonym of dronakāka.
- 308 Unidentified. Different from Suśruta's parabhṛta. Parabhū is a synonym of dhvāṅkṣa in the Astāṅganighantu (354).
- 309 Corvus frugilegus, the rook. See on Corvus frugilegus frugilegus Linnaeus, the rook: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 5, 248–249. Compare Caraka's vāyasa.
- 310 Unidentified. Cirajīvin is a synonym of vāyasa in the Aṣṭāṅganighaṇṭu (354).
- 311 Unidentified. K.N. Dave (1985: 6,8) regards it as probable that the carrion and jungle crow are called thus. See on the jungle crow: sakrtpraja. See on Corvus corone orientalis Eversmann, the Eastern carrion crow: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 5, 259-260.
- 312 Corvus corax, the raven. The Punjab raven (C. corax subcorax Severtzov) and the Tibetan raven (C. corax tibetanus Hodgson) are called dronakāka in Sanskrit literature according to K.N. Dave (1985: 1). See on the Indian subspecies of Corvus corax Linnaeus: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 5, 261–266.
- 313 Pyrrhocorax pyrrhocorax (Linnaeus), the redbilled chough. See on the Indian subspecies: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 5, 238-242. K.N. Dave (1985: 11) is of the opinion that the jungle and carrion crows and the raven are also called kākola.
- 314 Bubo zeylonensis, the brown fish owl. See on Bubo zeylonensis leschenault (Temminck), the Indian subspecies of the brown fish owl: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 3, 280–282. The large hooting owls are called ulūka according to K.N. Dave (1985: 177). Compare Caraka's ulūka.
- 315 Tyto alba, the barn owl. See on Tyto alba stertens Hartert, the Indian barn owl: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 3, 250–251.
- 316 Bubo bubo, the great horned owl. See on Bubo bubo bengalensis (Franklin), the Indian great horned or eagle-owl: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 3, 273–275. K.N. Dave (1985: 179–180) regards pecaka as a name probably designating the brown fish owl and the Indian great horned owl; the Indian brown hawk-owl is also one of the owls called pecaka. See on Bubo zeylonensis leschenault (Temminck), the brown fish owl: S. Ali and S.D. Ripley 3, 280–282, on Ninox scutulata lugubris (Tickell), the Indian brown hawk-owl: S. Ali and S.D. Gambier-Parry Nr. 51: Sārasaṃgrahaśālihotra, chapters 1–18, 20–23, 25–27, and a last chapter (adhyāya), by Indrasena: author's name and title (Sārasaṃgraha, extracted from Śālihotra) are mentioned in the introductory verses. P. Peterson, A Report, Preface 25: by Indusena or Indrasena, who styles himself as a mahārājādhirāja and maṇḍalendra and whose vīruds Rūpanārāyaṇa, etc., show that he was one of the Brāhmaṇa rājas of North Bihār or connected with them; the work was composed in A.D. 1812. G. Mukherji (1925): 534: based on Śālihotra, written in A.D. 1812.
- 364 NCC I, 442 and VII, 175: other titles are Aśvacikitsā, Aśvaśāstra and Aśvatantra; a work called Śālihotra is also attributed to Jayadatta. Check-list Nr. 52: Aśvacikitsā; Nr. 768: Śālihotra by Jayadatta. STMI 538–539: Aśvavaidyaka or Aśvacikitsā, and Śālihotra. Cat. IO Nr. 2763 (compare F.R. Dietz, 1833: 153–154): the work is called Śālihotraśāstra; in many parts of the text the MS differs considerably from ed. a, both as regards matter and arrangement (see Cat. IO for the arrangement of the chapters). Cat. Sarasvati Bhavan XII, Nrs. 44919 and 44966. CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 14. Cambridge Add 2832 (see D. Wujastyk, 1990: 112). B. Jawalia (1983): 328–329 (Nr. 2942). See on Jayadatta's Aśvavaidyaka: S.Ch. Baner ji (1972): 37–39; S.K. Kalra (1987); R.C. Ma jumdar (1971): 255; U.V. Mandokhot (1987a), (1987b).

- 365 The author states (1.5) that the verses are 1,800 in number.
- 366 Identical with the pradeśādhyāya of Nakula's Aśvaśāstra.

- 367 Largely identical with the angalaksanādhyāya of Nakula's Aśvaśāstra.
- 368 These verses differ from the corresponding ones in Nakula's Aśvaśāstra. Jayadatta distinguishes a total number of ninety-six āvartas, twenty of which are auspicious (3.30); see U.V. Mandokhot (1987b): 129-130. The same eight forms of āvarta (3.60-65) are described as in Nakula's Aśvaśāstra (see S.S. Misra, 1982: 188-189). See also on the āvartas of horses: W. Caland (1910).
- 369 A punera is a white mark of various shapes above the upper lips of a horse, i.e., a blaze. See U.V. Mandokhot (1987b): 131; D. White (1989): 285.
- 370 A puşpa is a mark that appears and disappears again on the body of a horse. See U.V. Mandokhot (1987b): 131.
- 371 The names of horses according to their colour(s) differ in Jayadatta's work from those found in Nakula's Aśvaśāstra and Someśvara's Mānasollāsa.
- 372 See U.V. Mandokhot (1987b): 133-134.
- 373 These verses agree with those on the same subject in Nakula's Aśvaśāstra.
- 374 Four types of sheen are described; see S.S. Misra (1982): 193–194. W.D. O'Flaherty (1978) remarks that chāyā is called roan in English; horses may have a blue or a red roan.
- 375 Two types are described; see S.S. Misra (1982): 193-194.
- 376 Compare the Greek and Byzantine material on this subject, discussed by K.-H. Fischer and J.A.M. Sonderkamp (1980).
- 377 This nighantu consists of strings of synonyms; all the substances mentioned and their names are known from human āyurveda. See on the nighantu: P.V. Sharma (1984e).
- 378 See on errhines in the veterinary medicine of the Romans: R. Froehner (1952): 165.
- 379 A disease in which a horse, although endowed with a good appetite, loses strength and weight.
- 380 The names of these diseases are: upakuśa (gingivitis), leśa or āleśa (teeth remaining in the jaw), jihvāstambha, alāvūka or alāvuka (a disease with a foul smell from the mouth, a swollen palate and aversion to food), praśūna or prasūna (gingivitis with discoloration of the lips, oral cavity and palate), dantaroga, galagraha, mukhapāka, adhidanta, rohiņī, upajihvikā, gandaroga (a disease of the inner surface of the cheeks), oṣṭharoga, and galaśālūka (tonsillitis). The diseases called leśa, alāvūka, prasūna, and garıḍaroga are unknown in human medicine.
- 381 These diseases are: toyasrāva, prasannāndha, naktāndha, timira, munjaka and munjajāla (30.67-69), paṭala (30.54-57), budbuda, pūyasrāva, kāca (30.21-23 and 37), raktasrāva, cipiṭa, vartmaroga or vartmakunda (30.80-81), abhiṣyanda (30.44-46) and pracāraka (30.31). Diseases unknown in human medicine are prasannāndha (blindness without a visible disorder of the eyes), munjaka and munjajāla (infestation of the eyes by parasites), and pracāraka (a disease in which the cornea is covered by fleshy growths; pterygia, called arman in human medicine, may be meant).
- 382 The same as Śālihotra's lingita; Jayadatta uses both langita and lingita.
- 383 Runny nose.
- 384 Sores within the nostrils; it may be glanders (HIM II, 389).
- 385 More than twenty diseases are described.
- 386 Five types of sūla are distinguished: saubhikşa, ürdhvavarti, bhinnavarti, vibandha, and snehavarti. On saubhiksa see S.S. Misra (1982): 210-211.
- 387 A disease of the chest.
- 388 Abnormalities of the urine and disorders of micturition.

- 389 Three varieties are distinguished, in which the skin (tvac) is respectively devoid of hair (alomikā), full of nodules (granthimatī), or covered with ulcers (vranasamyuktā).
- 390 A synonym of muşkaroga is andaskanda; five varieties are described: vātānda, pittānda, sleşmānda, pūtānda, and raktānda. Gana's Sārasangraha describes diseases called andaskanna, andacāli, pittānda, kaphānda, pūyānda, and raktānda.
- 391 A disease in which the stallion is unable to serve a mare. Gana's Sārasamgraha describes a disease called unnīta.
- 392 The same eight types as in human medicine are described.
- 393 A disease in which the ears and tail are stiff (stabdha). A disease of the same name occurs in elephants.
- 394 The diseases distinguished and described are: manyāstambha, manyācālī, hanugraha, pṛṣṭhagraha, ekāngaroga, mṛgaroga, mṛgairmbha, ākṣepaka, kapotakaniṣāda, and ardita. Unknown in human medicine are manyācālī (it resembles manyāstambha, but the horse's neck quivers), mṛgaroga (here described as a disease in which the horse sweats and is easily alarmed), mṛgairmbha (mṛgaroga accompanied by much yawning), and kapotakaniṣāda (a disease in which the horse prefers to lie down).
- 395 Dosic types are described.
- 396 The following grahas are mentioned: Lohitākşa, Virtipākşa, Kāśin, Samkāśin, Susamsthita, Kaubera, Vaiśākha, Mrdugraha, Ūrdhvagraha, Varuna, Brhaspati, Soma, and Sūrya.
- 397 Consumption; dosic types are described.
- 398 It resembles the human fever called vātabalāsaka, but it is not described as a fever. Vātabalāsaka is also described in Gaṇa's Sārasaṇŋgraha.
- 399 Disorders due to an excess of particular substances in the food (lavaŋa-, dhānya-, surā-, and ksīravyāpad).
- 400 A disease with discoloration and swelling of the belly; it is also called anjalikarika and gangapatanga. Anjalikarika is also described in Gana's Sārasangraha.

Kalhaṇa was a son of Bilhaṇa and a grandson of Yaśaḥpāla; he calls his work Sārasamuccaya and mentions the work of Śālihotra as one of his sources (see the introductory verses as quoted by P.K. Gode, 1946e). R.C. Majumdar (1971: 255) refers to the work as Śālihotrasārasamuccaya and adds that some regard it as the redaction by Kalhaṇa (twelfth century) of Śālihotra's saṃhitā. Mira Roy remarks (1986: 174–175) that Kalhaṇa's work, which she calls Śālihotrasamuccaya, dates from about the twelfth century and is believed to be a redaction of the Śālihotrasamhitā; it is a voluminous work in sixty-eight chapters, throwing light on different aspects of the horse inclusive of anatomy, physiology, and pathological conditions requiring medical and surgical treatment and including information relating to breed, sex, age, and so on; the medical and surgical methods follow the classical precepts of āyurveda.

Bhaṭnāgar (JAI 177) claims that the work dates from about A.D. 1125; Kīrtivarman descended from Jain kings of the Cālukya dynasty; his father was Someśvara I (see D.C. Ganguly, 1989: 167-173), also known as Trailokyamalla (A.D. 1042-1068), his elder brother was Vikramāditya VI (see D.C. The edition of Nakula's Aśvaśāstra contains two extracts from this work (p.128–131): the first one is called andhabadhirādivijñāna, and is about horses who are blind (andha), deaf (badhira), dumb (mūka), apathetic (jaḍa), not responding to sexual stimuli (ṣaṇḍa), impotent (kośamohin), and shunning the company of other horses (kumārikā); the other extract is on the measures of various parts of the horse's body.

The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram records a work on horses by Nakula, accompanied by a commentary (Nr. 2170). See for the editions those of Jayadatta's Aśvavaidyaka. References are to ed. b. The title is not mentioned in the body of the work; the colophons of ed. b call it Aśvacikitsita.
- 439 Chapter seventeen in missing in ed. b; its last chapter is chapter eighteen. MS Nr. 8 of Cat. BHU ends with chapter seventeen, called śrngādhyāya.
- 440 The five Pāṇḍavas are mentioned by name; Nakula belongs to this group of five brothers.
- 441 This table corresponds for the greater part with the actual contents, but vişa (chapter sixteen) is not mentioned, and cestā is added after aśvaśālā (chapter eighteen).
- 442 Aśvacikitsita 1.5-21 is identical with the paksacchedakathā of Nakula's Aśvaśāstra.
- 443 These breeds are classified under the catagories uttara, madhyama, kanīyas and nīca on the one hand, under the catagories jalaja = brāhmaṇa, vahnija = kṣatriya, samīraja = vai-śya and ulūkamṛgaja = śūdra on the other. Nakula's Aśvaśāstra deals in a different way and more elaborately with the breeds in its kulalakṣaṇādhyāya; it describes the categories brāhmaṇa, etc., in the vāhanaśikṣādhyāya.
- 444 Horses of uniform and of mixed colours are described; those of mixed colours are called cakravāka, śyāmakarna, mallika, yamadūta, astamangala, and kalyānapañcaka. Compare

- S.S. Misra (1982): 189–192. The kalyāṇapañcaka (with white feet and a white spot resembling the moon on the forehead) is said to be sarvakalyāṇakāraka in Bhoja's Śālihotra (7); E.D. Kulkarni (Appendix III to the edition of this text) remarks that Śivājī rode only a kalyāṇapañcaka horse.
- 445 The eight types of āvarta of Jayadatta, Nakula's Aśvaśāstra, and Someśvara (see S.S. Misra, 1982: 188–189) are not mentioned, but many more āvartas are endowed with a name. Nakula's Aśvacikitsita does not describe the pundras and puspas, and merely refers to these marks in a later chapter (9.50).
- 446 This chapter is very interesting on account of the importance of blood in the causation of disorders; the disturbance of the doşas appears to be secondary in nature (see G.J. Meulenbeld, 1990). The treatment of the disorders, caused by blood and one or more of the doşas, is also indicated, as well as some aristas.
- 447 The beginning of the chapter declares that the body of a horse has 72,000 nādīs (the same number as in humans); eight, or according to another tradition, seventeen of these can be used for bloodletting. Barley (yava) is recommended as the best food for horses, chickpeas (caṇaka) or Vigna aconitifolia (Jacq.) Marechal = Phaseolus aconitifolius Jacq. (mukuşta) being the second choice; see P.K. Gode's articles on this subject: (1946d1), (1946e), (1946f), (1946g), (1947b).

- 453 Identical with Nakula's Aśvacikitsita 1.5-21; the colophon indicates that it has been borrowed from that work.
- 454 The term pradeśa, not often used in a technical sense in human āyurveda, designates the sections of an image in śilpaśāstra (S. Gunasinghe, 1957: 22). See S.S. Misra (1982): 202–205 on the anatomical terminology. See also R.W. Lariviere (1983) and W. O'Flaherty (1978). The edition adds some verses on the same subject from Śālihotronnaya.

- 457 Eight types of āvarta are distinguished (see S.S. Misra, 1982: 188–189); their total number is, as in Jayadatta's treatise, ninety-six; twenty among these are said to be auspicious. The

- āvarta called rocamāna is also mentioned. The edition adds a number of verses (from some other source) on the same subject.

Similarities between many of the names in Hemacandra's list and names for horses in Turkish dialects have been pointed out by H. - c The Mātanga-līlā, translated from the original Sanskrit by P.S. Sastri, 1934 (p.61–104, probably reprinted from some periodical).

See on translations a and b: J. Filliozat (1933). See on transl. a: F. Edgerton's Preface to transl. b, 12–14. See on transl. b the reviews by W. Norman Brown (JAOS 1932, 89) and G. Sarton (Isis 19, 1933, 425).

F. Edgerton made use of two books on elephants and elephant-lore: *G.H. Evans (1910); G.P. Sanderson (*1896; repr., 1983). On the same subjects and on the Indian elephant in history may also be consulted: S.A. Ali (1927); E. Balfour (1967): I, 1037–1041; V. Bhattacharyya and G.K. Shrigondekar (1924); J. Corse (1979); P.E.P. Deraniyagala (1938); S. Digby (1971); K. Karttunen (1997): 187–201; Ch. Lassen (1847): 303–315; A.J.W. Milroy (1927); S. Mohammad Ali (1986); G.N. Pant (1989); R.N. Saletore (1975): 207–209; H.H. Scullard (1974); A. Senadhira (1995): 44–45; P.D. Stracey (1991); R. Sukumar (1994); C. Taay van Wezel (1898); J.E. Tennent (1861): 75–240, *(1867); Th.R. Trautmann (1982); Watt III, 208–227; WIRM III, 143–149; F.E. Zeuner (1963): 275–298. Much has been written about the Indian elephant in the works of Greek and Roman authors (see, for instance: J. André and J. Filliozat, 1986; K. Karttunen, 1997; H.H. Scullard, 1974). Early European travellers in India also wrote down accounts of what they saw and heard about the elephant (see, for example: Jan Huyghen van Linschoten in A.C. Burnell and P.A. Tiele, 1970: 11, 1–8; Garcia da Orta, 1979: 179–190).

References are to translation b. The title is mentioned at 1.2 and 12.31. See on this work: S.Ch. Baner ji (1972): 41-45.

- 512 The metres are elaborate and varied (see F. Edgerton's Preface to his translation, 7-8).
- 513 See on Romapāda: J. Filliozat (1933): 166, n.2; HIM II, 400 and III, 577; S.N. Pradhan (1927): 110-117; Vettam Mani (1989): 457 (Lomapāda). Romapāda, who resided in Campā, was the father-in-law of Rṣyaṣniga, and is regarded as a contemporary of Daśaratha, father of Rāma. He is mentioned in the Rāmāyana (Bālakānda 9.7-8; 11; ed. Bombay) and the Mahābhārata (Vanaparvan 110; ed. Poona). Kālidāsa (Raghuvansáa 6.27) refers to the king of Anga as one whose elephants are trained by sūtrakāras.

The Bhāgavatapurāṇa (IX, 23) is also acquainted with Romapāda and his companion Daśaratha.

A group of sages granted Romapāda the boon to capture wild elephants; these sages are mentioned by name (1.5: Gautama, Nārada, Bhṛgu, Mṛgacarman, Agniveśya, Arimeda, Kāpya, Mātangācārya, and others). Compare the sages mentioned in Pālakāpya's Hastyāvurveda.

- 514 See on him: Pālakāpya's Hastyāyurveda.
- 515 Four jātis are described: bhadra, manda, mrga, and samkīrņa (mixed). These types, well known in the literature on the subject, are mentioned, for example, in the Arthaśāstra, Brhatsamhitā, Śukranīti (F. Edgerton's translation, 1985: 50, n.2; B.K. Sarkar, 1974: I, 282–283), and Rāmāyaņa (J. Filliozat, 1933, 167, n.1; S.S. Misra 1982: 217–218). See on these types in recent elephant-lore: F. Edgerton (1985), Introduction to his translation, 11–16; P.D. Stracey (1991): 41–42.
- 516 See S.S. Misra (1982): 215.
- 517 See S.S. Misra (1982): 224-225; P.D. Stracey (1991): 39-41.
- 518 Elephants from one to ten years old are described, together with their names, and the twelve stages of life of an elephant.
- 519 See on the height of the Indian elephant: P.D. Stracey (1991): 55–58. See also F. Edgerton's notes to his translation.
- 520 Their main categories are described (sāttvika, rājasa, tāmasa) and eight subdivisions; the same chapter deals with the colour, sheen (chāyā), and the seven types of sensitiveness to stimuli of control.

- 523 Some disorders (by vāta, pitta, kapha: 11.38-40) and their treatment are also described. Worms are said to be the most frequent cause of disease in elephants.
- 524 For a long time, mahouts were imported from India in the West (see K. Karttunen, 1997: 194, 197). See on the mahout: P.E.P. Deraniyagala (1938): 143–146.
- 525 See F. Edgerton's Preface to his translation, 7.
- 526 Some do not regard him as a Mūssatu, but as a Nambudiri (see S.V. Iyer, 1976: 54). See on the Nambudiri (Nampūtiri) brāhmaņas: G. Tarabout (1991), (1994): 171-173.
- 527 NCC X, 175: other works by the same author are Kāvyollāsa, an adaptation of Mammaţa's Kāvyaprakāśa, and Manuṣyālayacandrikā, a work on architecture (compare S.V. Iyer, 1976: 54). A.B. Keith (1973: 465) regarded the Mātangalīlā as distinctly modern, being written in part in elaborate metres; he gives the name of the author as Nārāyana.
- NCC: not recorded. JAI 180: written in A.D. 1527 on the request of Cāmarāja, king of Mysore, by the Digambara Jain Padmanna Pandita or Padmarasa, a pupil of Bhattākalanka; the work deals with the treatment of diseases of horses. Compare S. Srikanta Sastri (1984: 600): written by Padmana Pandita under the patronage of Cāmarāja of Mysore; Bhattākalanka is the author of a work on grammar, the Śabdānuśāsana, composed in A.D. 1604.

Edition: pālakāpyamuniviracito hastyāyurvedaļ...dādhīcapandita...badarīnāthātmajena śivadattaśarmaṇā saṃśodhital, Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series Nr. 26, Poona 1894; this edition is based on four MSS; the edited text contains numerous lacunae. See on the work: S.Ch. Baner ji (1972): 40-41; A. von den Driesch (1989): 47-49; R.C. Majumdar (1974): 353-354.

- 530 See on diseases in elephants: G.H. Evans (1901), *(1910); *J.H. Steel (1885).
- 531 The treatise contains more than 7,600 verses according to H. Zimmer (1976: 165); the number of ślokas is said to be 12,000 in the text itself (I.4.103cd-104ab). The portions in prose and those in verse do not form a unity, but point to at least two different sources for the Hastyāyurveda. One and the same subject is more than once dealt with in different chapters (see, e.g., III.9.100cd-135 and III.19 on the sirās).
- 532 Called paricarasthana at the end of the treatise (IV.36.49). The work is said to consist of 170 chapters (1.4.102).
- 533 See on Anga: N. Dey (1979): 7-8; B.C. Law (1979): 6-8; S. Saxena (1995): 258-262.
- A. Cunningham (see S.M. Sastri, 1924: 546–547; compare HIM II, 400) identified Campā with Patharghāta, twenty-four miles to the east of Bhāgalpur. Compare on Campā: N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 103; N. Dey (1979): 43; Dowson; HIM III, 577; B.C. Law (1979): 6–7, (1984): 214–215; M.R. Singh (1972): 222–223; Vettam Mani 168.
- 535 Chapter-headings are partially the same. Examples are I.6 (śiṣyopanayana; compare Su. Sū.2), III.1 (dvivranīya; compare Su.Ci.1), III.8 (garbhāvakrānti; compare Ca.Śā.3-4 and Su.Śā.3), III.9 (śarīravicaya; compare Ca.Śā.6), IV.3 (annapānavidhi; compare Ca.Sū.27 and Su.Sū.46), IV.15 (rtucaryā; compare Su.Sū.6).
- 536 R.C. Majumdar (1974: 353) says that it is written in kārikās, somewhat in the manner of Bharata's Nātyašāstra.
- 537 See on the contents also: HIM II, 402-423; H. Zimmer (1976): 163-209. H. Zimmer's translation of Nīlakantha's Mātangalīla contains translations of parts of the Hastyāyurveda.
- 538 Serious diseases are, however, also described in the kşudrarogasthāna.
- 539 Compare the chapters on this subject of the Carakasamhitā (Vi.8) and Suśrutasamhitā (Sū. 2).
- 540 The names of fever in various living beings are enumerated, as well as the differences between fever in human beings and elephants. Fever in elephants is called pākala; ten types of pākala are distinguished: śuddha, bāla, pakvala, mṛdugraha (also called rājayakṣman; see for a discussion and English translation: A. Krishnaswami Iyer, 1937), kukkuṭa, ekāngagraha, prasupta, kūṭa, puṇḍarīka, and mahāpākala; most of these types are connected with one or more of the doṣas and blood, some are caused by bhūtas, etc. One of the fevers described must be anthrax, the most dreaded disease in elephants; the most important symptoms are: a steep rise of body temperature, purplish blotches in the mouth, and a bloody discharge from mouth, anus and bladder (see R. Carrington, 1958: 50). The theory about the causation of the fevers is expounded in the verses at the end of the chapter.
- 541 Synonyms of this disease are śoṣaṇa and skandana; three types are distinguished: antarā-yāma, bahirāyāma, and vyāviddhaskanda, caused respectively by vāta, vāta and pitta, vāta and kapha; the two types of āyāma are vāta diseases in human medicine.

- 542 Also called purāṇakṛśa; three types, with predominance of one of the three doṣas; the vāta type is, according to some, the same as plīhodara. Compare on the treatment of pāṇduroga in elephants: Hastividyārṇava, pages 224, 225.
- 543 Five types, some of them subdivided.
- 544 Twelve types.
- 545 Seven types: by vāta, pitta, kapha, rakta, saṃnipāta, kṛmi (parasites), and abhighāta
- 546 Ten diseases according to some, twenty according to others, but thirty according to Pā-lakāpya. These diseases do not occur in wild elephants. Nine additional pādarogas are of exogenous origin (āgantuka). The same chapter deals with the preparation of caustics (kṣā-rakarman) and with cauterization (agnikarman).
- 547 Eight types
- 548 Seven types.
- 549 Twenty eye diseases are described. The same chapter deals with thirteen varieties of sveda (sudation), and with śāntirakṣā (religious rites to be performed at the beginning of treatment).
- 550 The kşudrarogas of the Hastyāyurveda are completely different from those in human āyurveda and comprise several serious diseases.
- 551 Four types caused by the dosas; several other types are also distinguished.
- 552 A disorder caused by the eating of koradūṣa, the fruits of madana, and harita, as well as by the drinking of madana water.
- 553 A disorder caused by unwholesome diet.
- 554 A disorder of overstrained elephants.
- 555 Chapter eight states that seven stages (vega) of poisoning are described by Kāśyapa, but that three stages only occur in elephants, due to their physiological peculiarities.
- 556 This chapter is about inauspicious tithis, muhūrtas and nakṣatras, on which wild elephants should not be captured, because, under these circumstances, they may suffer from the incurable disorder called apavādabaddha.
- 557 A mental disorder making elephants unfit for employment; it is incurable unless the elephant returns to the forest. See on mental disorders in elephants: G.J. Meulenbeld (1997): 217.
- 558 Doşic types and an additional one, called agnivisarpa, recognized by some authorities only. This agnivisarpa is also known in human medicine (A.h.Ni.13.50cd-56ab = Mādhavanidāna 52.8-13).
- 559 A mental disorder, caused by fear, in elephants newly brought from the forest.
- 560 A disease of the tail.
- 561 A disease of the penis, also called hastagrahana, caused by the doşas and blood, or of traumatic origin.
- 562 An incurable mental disorder. Aristas are described, which determine the span of life left to the elephant.
- 563 A disease which stiffens (stambhayati) certain parts of the body and causes many other symptoms; it also occurs in horses, in which, however, its symptomatology appears to be more restricted. G. Mukhopādhyāya (HIM II, 409) identifies it as farcy, which is a disease in horses, related to glanders.
- 564 A mental disorder.
- 565 Wryneck.

- 566 A type of weakness due to exessive activity of a male elephant during the state of must.
- 567 Thinning of the body despite adequate intake of food.
- 568 Loss of strength.
- 569 A disease caused by the excessive intake of foods which increase the amount of kapha in the body.
- 570 A disease of newly captured elephants, caused by the change of food.
- 571 Wounds of the soles of the feet.
- 572 Inflammation of the throat.
- 573 A disease of tongue and throat, caused by thirst.
- 574 Possession by evil spirits; the names of the grahas mentioned are: Bhāvabāhuka, Mṛga, Arati, Pratāra, Svapiti, Pramardanā, Kāmākhya, Vāṇijjaka, and Vinyastavyathavira. At another place (I.7.50-52ab) the names of the following ten grahas are given: Avabāhuka, Mṛgāksa, Ratika, Pratāra, Svapiti, Pramardana, Kāmāksa, Vāṇija, Sthavira and Unmāna.
- 575 Tentatively identified as acute rheumatism by G. Mukhopādhyāya (HIM II, 410), but it appears to be more related to the human type of mūtrāghāta also called vātakuņḍalikā (Su. U.58.5-6 = Mādhavanidāna 31.2-3).
- 576 A disorder caused by too heavy burdens.
- 577 Wasting of the muscles.
- 578 A disorder caused by the contact with hairy caterpillars or larvae abundantly found on the leaves of certain trees during the early rains.
- 579 This disease, also called urahstambha, is localised in the chest (uras) or lungs; a disease of the same name is found in human beings.
- 580 Probably haematocele, i.e., an extravasation of blood within the scrotum.
- 581 An inflammation of feet and nails.
- 582 A vāta disease, localized in the belly; it is said to be the same as asthīla in human beings; asthīlā is indeed one of the vāta diseases (see Su. Ni.1.90 and Mādhavanidāna 22.70cd-71).
- 583 A mental disorder which occurs during the night only; it is caused by grahas.
- 584 A cluster of diseases comprising the groups called mūtrakrcchra, mūtrāghāta and prameha in human beings; some of the types of mūtrasanga are: bhinnabasti, gāḍhamūtratā, parimūtrī, pistameha, śonitameha, aśmaśarkara, and tandulodakameha.
- 585 Diseases occurring during gestation and the puerperium.
- 586 A mental disorder in which the elephant is fearful.
- 587 This chapter deals with lupta (compare chapter 37) and śūla; a myth is told about the origin of śūla.
- 588 A disease in which the elephant has difficulty in drinking water; four types are distinguished: sthūla-, lṛśa-, prākṛta- and lohitaśārada. A disease of the same name occurs in horses
- 589 Skin diseases; eleven varieties: visarpikī, mandalī, dadrukī, mahādadrukī, jātasūkā, piţakā, phullikā, udgandikā, vicarcikā, tmapuspī, and kilāsī.
- 590 Disorders in tamed elephants caused by the habit of eating various kinds of earth; wild elephants are immune to these disorders. Compare on the habit of elephants eating earth: Hastividyārṇava, pages 220-222. See on this habit: R.C. Morris (1932); this author observed numerous marks of elephant tusks in banks (mostly red clay) and refers to a general idea that elephants eat earth to remove 'bots'; he was informed by the Director of Veterinary Services, Madras, that elephants often suffer from a condition known as 'pica', a depraved appetite probably due to over-acidity, and a desire for an alkaline substance to correct this.

- 591 A disorder caused by undigested remnants of the food which act as toxic substances. This very interesting chapter refers to Caraka's description of āma and distinguishes many varieties of the disorder (seven varieties when āma stays in one of the elements of the body, and three when it affects one of the dosas).
- 592 Compare Hastividyārņava, pages 222, 250, 256.
- 593 Four types of weakness (daurbalya) and ten types of wasting (seven types of dhātukṣaya and three of doṣakṣaya) are described; rājayakṣman, which is the main type of kṣaya in human āyurveda, is absent.
- 594 This chapter deals with the state of must and with mada, i.e., the juice flowing from a male elephant's temples during this state; fourteen causes of the discharge of mada are enumerated and five dosic varieties. A male elephant on must is called prabbinna; many disorders are mentioned resulting from this condition. Must is not completely restricted to male elephants, but may also develop in females (examples are described by N.L. Bor, 1927). Although it is generally believed that must has some connection with the sexual functions, the evidence is not conclusive (see R. Carrington, 1958: 40); in elephants on must, a dark strong-smelling oily substance is secreted by the temporal glands, lying midway between the elephant's eye and ear (see R. Carrington, 1958: 39).
 - Compare on must and rut in elephants: Hastividyārņava, pages 204-210.
- 595 This chapter deals with the digestive fire and its disorders.
- 596 This disease is characterized by swelling (sopha) of the belly.
- 597 This chapter deals with overstrained elephants.
- 598 A group of sixteen diseases (see the beginning of chapter 72), which may affect various parts of the elephant's body.
- 599 Some chapters resemble, as to their name and contents, chapters of the Suśrutasainhitā.
- 600 This chapter also deals with prognostics and with the digestive fire.
- 601 This chapter is about six surgical procedures.
- 602 This chapter is concerned with wounds and sores (vrana).
- 603 This chapter is about the five great elements (mahābhūta), the seven elements of the body (dhātu), the four categories of living beings, the five types of vāta, the other doṣas, the six tastes (rasa), āyus, bala, sattva, sātmya, prakṛti, etc., and anatomy.
- 604 This chapter is about fertilization and pregnancy; it also describes types of elephants and has many verses on the influence of the doşas.
- 605 See on this subject R.F.G. Müller (1943–52): 251–252. See on Indian veterinary instruments: A. Krishnaswamy (1939a), (1939b).
- 606 This chapter is concerned with the extraction of foreign bodies; it also describes the descent of āyurveda to earth.
- 607 Compare Hastividyārnava, pages 234, 236, 242.
- 608 This chapter describes the vessels of the body and deals with venesection.
- 609 This chapter deals with venesection and the vital points (marman).
- 610 The 107 vital points (marman) are described; their number is also 107 in human āyurveda. See on the marmans in elephants: V. Dharmalingam, M. Radhika and A.V. Balasubramanian (1990): Appendix III; these authors mention seventy marmans in an elephant (see the figure).
- 611 This chapter deals with dogs and their bites.
- 612 On fevers.
- 613 On the bites by the twenty-one kinds of spiders (lūtā) and their treatment.

- 614 On the regions (pradesa) of an elephant's body.
- 615 On the use of sharp instruments. See on this chapter: A. Krishnaswami Ayyar (1939a), (1939b).
- 616 On the extraction of teeth; on the different types of teeth in elephants and their development.
- 617 This chapter deals at the end with bathing (seka) an elephant, the cleansing of its head (śiromraksana), and cleansing (abhyanga) of its teeth and eyes.
- 618 Compare on stables: Hastividyārṇava, pages 98–100. Six types of stables for elephants are described in a text on architecture, the Aparājitapṛcchā by Bhuvanadevācārya (NCC I, 246; see L. Gopal, 1989: 119). See also O. Stein (1938): 183–184.
- 619 On grasses as food for elephants.
- 620 Six ways of pruning and ornamenting an elephant's tusks are described.
- 621 On the ban of drinking water immediately after a meal, and other prohibitions.
- 622 On the use of sour gruel.
- 623 On the effects of alcoholic drinks and counterdrinks (pratipāna).
- 624 Myths about the origin of elephants.
- 625 On the purpose of administering fatty food substances, milk, honey, etc., to elephants.
- 626 On the attendants and their duties.
- 627 On threefold and other classifications.
- 628 On the faeces and urine of various animals as medicinal substances.
- 629 On the origin of garlic (lasuna) and its medicinal use.
- 630 On the medicinal use of salts.
- 631 On giving sand to elephants.
- 632 On must and its seven stages.
- 633 On the Naga- and Tantukagraha, and the diseases caused by them.
- 634 On the fabulous elephant called jalahastin and the way it has to be propitiated with gifts of food.
- 635 The same twelve varieties are described as in human āyurveda.
- 636 This chapter deals with two severe types of fever (pākala), called raudra and vaiṣṇava, which occur when Śiva and Viṣṇu are not properly honoured.
- 637 This chapter is concerned with the nīrājanā rite, which preserves the health of elephants. Compare on the nīrājana of elephants: Arthaśāstra 2.32.21; the nīrājana of horses is mentioned at 2.30.46 and 51 (see also the notes and references in the translations of R.P. Kangle and J.J. Meyer). See on nīrājana in general, and the nīrājana (and śānti) of elephants and horses: H. Bakker (1986): 103; L.P. van den Bosch (1978): 80; J. Gonda (1965a); P.V. - 638 A Dīrgha is mentioned in the Mahābhārata (see Vettam Mani).
- 639 Gautama is also mentioned in Nīlakantha's Mātangalīlā and Somadeva's Yaśastila-kacampū (NCC VI, 222; L. Gopal, 1989: 118; K.K. Handiqui: 454); Godāvara's Hari-haracaturanga (1.173–174) and Umāpati's commentary on Nārada's Gajaśikṣā mention him as an authority on elephants. The Arthaśāstra refers to him as an authority on cattle breeding (NCC VI, 222).

See on these instruments: A. Krishnaswami Ayyar (1939a), (1939b) (with drawings illustrating the form of the instruments). The instruments called vatsadanta (a knife with a scoop resembling the tooth of a calf) and rampaka (a drawing knife) are absent from Su.Sū.8; śalākā is not a śastra in the Suśrutasaṃhitā. Other instruments mentioned are: phāla-, jāmbava-, tāpikā-, and darvyākṛti, followed by siṃhadaṇṣṭṭa, godhāmukha, kaṅkamukha, and kuliśamukha (see the drawings of the last four in A. Some scholars regard the Hastyāyurveda as a work that was written in Assam (see V. Raghavan, 1975: 29–30). The elephant-lore was well-developed in Assam, as appears from a finely illustrated Assamese text on the subject, the Hastividyārṇava, composed by the kāyastha Sukumāra Barkāth in A.D. 1734 on the request of the Ahom ruler Śivasiṇha (see on the Ahoms: S.K. Chatterji, 1974) and his queen (edited, with an English translation, with 171 colour plates and 80 monochrome plates, by Pratap Chandra Choudhury, Gauhati 1976). Some diseases, mentioned in the Śālihotra and unknown in human medicine, are: anusyanda (II.11), avāluki (IV.3; the same as Jayadatta's alāvūka), ghṛṇi (IV.5), lingita (II.8), niryānaka (IV.2; a disease of the corners of the eyes? the outer corner of an elephant's eye is called niryāṇa at Mātaṅgalilā 6.9 and 12.19; Gaṇa's Sārasaṃgraha describes a disease called nirāṇuka), pādolūka (II.30; the same as Jayadatta's ulūkapāda; compare Gaṇa's ulūkasthānaruj, which is a pādaroga), praskanna (II.7), rasaskandha (III.11; a disease of the shoulder-joint? tetanus?), śālukī ((IV.6; the same as Jayadatta's galaśālūka), sāradā ((I.17; accordingt oG. Mukhopadhyaya the name of a disease, in which there is difficulty in drinking; according to A.-M. Blondeau, 1972: 44 and 85–86, the chapter deals with tonics; compare śārada in elephants: Pālakāpya II.53), singhānaka (II.21; also mentioned in Gaṇa's Sārasaṃgraha), vālādakī (II.26; compare the disease called vālādaka in Gaṇa's Sārasaṃgraha), varta (II.6; probably the same as the types of varti, described by Jayadatta), and

- vyānaka (IV.1; a nervous disease?).
- The Sanskrit text of Śālihotra's Aśvāyurveda and its Tibetan version recognize the same eight angas as those of human āyurveda (see A.-M. Blondeau, 1972: 45-46). Cat. Mysore XIII records a MS called Śālihotrīya (Nr. 42841).

- 30 Compare Anandakanda I.7.1-49ab.
- 31 It is also quoted in a text on Yoga (see NCC II, 97).
- 32 Compare on special features of the Anandakanda the bhūmikā to ed. b.
- 33 The verse is almost identical with Rasārṇava 10.17, which has akampa instead of vikampa; Rasasāra 17.7 mentions sakampa as one of the five avasthās.
- 34 This is the usual series, but malagati is called kittanibhā gatiḥ in the Ānandakanda.
- 35 This long series is peculiar to the Ānandakanda; the bhūmikā toed. b (17) mentions a number of fifteen naisargikadoşas.
- 36 The majority of these names are not found elsewhere.
- 37 The yaugikadoşas are usually two in number: nāga and vanga; the Ānandakanda is the only treatise mentioning vişa as a yaugikadoşa.
- 38 Ānandakanda I.2.122-123 = Rasārṇava 2.57-58; the Krāmikā of the Ānandakanda is called Kṣārikā in the Rasārṇava. Compare Rasendracūḍāmaṇi 2.28-29.
- 39 See about them, for example: K.K. Handiqui (1949): 397–398. Cf. I B, 105, n.129.

- 61 Compare Revana's Vīrabhattī ya and Rasarā ja laksmī. See also: D.G. White (1996).
- 62 Probably the same as Kukkuripā, one of the eighty-four Siddhas (see: B. Bhattacharya, 1968: Sādhanamālā: II, Intr. CII-CIII; A. Hermann-Pfandt, 1992: 285-290; J.B. Robinson, 1979; Sempa Dorje, 1998: 99-100 and 139-141; D.L. Snellgrove, 1957: 297).
- 63 Compare Kanerī and Kanerī.
- 64 Ānandakanda I.6.21 = Rasaratnākara IV.1.5cd-6ab; 25 = IV.1.6cd-7ab.
- 65 The Rasārnava (6.40-48) distinguishes the same five types.
- 66 These formulae are absent from the Rasayogasāgara.
- 67 These pills are one of the distinctive elements of the Anandakanda.
- 68 Compare Rasaratnākara, Rasāyanakhanda 8, which is closely related to Ānandakanda 12.
- 69 The kalpas described are: brahmavṛkṣataila-, brahmavṛkṣapallava-, brahmavṛkṣapuṣpa-, brahmavṛkṣabī ja-, brahmavṛkṣavalkala-, brahmavṛkṣaniryāsa-, brahmavṛkṣapañcāṅga-, brahmavṛkṣamūlakalpa, and guptadhātrīkalpa. Compare the brahma(vṛkṣa)kalpa of the Kākacandī śvarakalpatantra (11) and Rasaratnākara (IV.4.44-59).
- 70 Śvetabrahmavṛkṣa is the same as śvetapalāśa (see the text). Compare the śvetapalāśakalpa of the Kākacaṇḍīśvarakalpatantra (12) and Rasaratnākara (IV.4.60-63).

- 89 Compare Rasārnavakalpa 261-301.
- 90 Four varieties of guggulu are distinguished: kumuda, padmaka, mahiṣākṣa and hemākhya (305cd-306).
- 91 This kalpa, the longest of the series, describes the origin of vijayā (Cannabis sativa Linn.), its varieties, names, characteristics and uses, nine disorders caused by its abuse, and the treatment of these disorders. The female and male plants are described; the author of the treatise was acquainted with the intoxicating properties of the female plants; gañjā is one of the synonyms of vijayā. See on the vijayākalpa of the Ānandakanda: Bhagwan Dash (1978): 141–157. See on the history of Cannabis in India: G.J. Meulenbeld (1989).
- 92 Twenty-four varieties of somalată are mentioned; several regions are enumerated where the plant grows; some of these localities are the mountains called Arbuda, Devagiri, Devasaha, Malaya, Mahendra, Prabhāsa (to the north of the river Vitastā), Sahya, Śrīparvata, Tuṣāra, and Vindhya, and the lakes called Devasūtahrada, Kṣudramānasa (in Kaśmīr) and Sindhuhrada (in Pāñcāla) (524 and 527–530). A complicated and protracted treatment is described, resulting in rasāyana; kuṭīpraveśa, known from the Carakasamhitā, is one of its essential elements.
- 93 Tuvaraka is said to grown near the western ocean (1.15.588).
- 94 Compare Kākacandīśvarakalpatantra (38) and Rasārņavakalpa 604-611.
- 95 Compare Kākacandī śvarakal patantra (4).
- 96 This vandākakalpa is one of the Dravidian elements of the Ānandakanda according to Rādhākṛṣṇaśāstrī (see his bhūmikā to the edition, 14). Compare the vandākalpa of the Kākacandīśvarakalpatantra.

- 118 Ānandakanda 23.417cd-428ab = Rasārņava 12.189-200. Compare Rasārņavakalpa 702-729
- 119 Ānandakanda 23.428cd-446ab = Rasārņava 12.212-231. Compare Rasārņavakalpa 730-745.
- 120 Ānandakanda 23.446cd-466 = Rasārņava 12.231-258.
- 121 Ānandakanda 23.467-480ab = Rasārņava 12.259-276.
- 122 Ākandakanda 23.480cd-527ab = Rasārnava 12.277-327. Compare the Kākacanḍīśvara-kalpatantra (8) and Rasārnavakalpa 746-756.
- 123 Ānandakanda 23.527cd-557 = Rasārnava 12.328-357.
- 124 Ānandakanda 23.558-584ab = Rasārnava 12.358-382.
- 125 Ānandakanda 23.584cd-597ab = Rasārņava 13.2-14; 597cd-599 = 13.16-17; 600-790ab = 14.1-174.

- 126 See Rasārnava 13 and 14.
- 127 See Rādhākrsnaśāstrī's bhūmikā to the edition (21).
- 128 Ānandakanda I.26.1–91ab = Rasendracūdāmaņi 5.5–94, but the descriptions of the khalvayantra and dolāyantra disagree with this source.
 - Compare Rasakāmadhenu I.1.8 and Rasendracūdāmani 5.5–10ab with Ānandakanda I.26. lcd–10ab (khalvayantra), Rasendracūdāmani 5.3–4 with Ānandakanda I.26.100–101ab.
- 129 Compare Ānandakanda I.26. 135cd-139ab.
- 130 This description is als found in the Rasakāmadhenu (I.1.29) and Rasaratnasamuccaya (9. 10).
- 131 Different from the kosthikāyantra described at 26.66-75.
- 132 Different from the garbhayantra described at 26.43-45ab. The description is reminiscent of Devendragiri's garbhayantra (see Rasakāmadhenu 1.1.58-60ab).
- 133 Ānandakanda I.26.107–108 = Rasārnava 4.28–29.
- 134 The description is attributed to Siddha Nāgārjuna.
- 135 Different from the vālukāyantra described at 26.76. The description agrees more or less with Rasakāmadhenu I.1.49-52ab and Rasaratnasamuccaya 9.33-35.
- 136 Different from I.26.77ab. The description is closely related to Rasaratnasamuccaya 9.37–39.
- 137 The description agrees with Rasaratnasamuccaya 9.41.
- 138 Different from I.26.90cd-91ab.
- 139 The description agrees with Rasaratnasamuccaya 9.42.
- 140 Different from the description at I.26.91cd-93ab.
- 141 Different from the description at I.26.77cd-84ab.
- 142 Two descriptions, which differ from I.26.22-23.
- 143 Ānandakanda I.26.148ab—178 = Rasendracūḍāmaṇi 5.95—126.
- 144 Compare I.26.156. The description resembles Rasakāmadhenu I.1.75.
- 145 Ānandakanda I.26.181–184ab = Rasārnava 4.38–41 (prakāša and andhamūsā).
- 146 \vec{A} nandakanda I.26.184cd–185ab = Ras \vec{a} rnava 4.42–43.
- 147 The description resembles Rasakāmadhenu I.1.76.
- 148 Ānandakanda I.26.201cd-218ab = Rasendracūdāmani 5.127-143.
- 149 Ānandakanda I.26.218cd-237 = Rasendracūdāmani 5.144-262.
- 150 Compare Rasendracūdāmani 3.22cd.
- 151 Ānandakanda 1.26.239 = Rasendracūdāmaņi 3.23 (caşakā instead of caşaka, kaţorī instead of kaţhorī, vāţikā instead of cāţikā, ghoţikā instead of khorikā, kacolī instead of kañcolī).
- 152 The presence of abhrasattva (probably aluminium) in this list is unique.
- 153 Kāntaka is the same as sphatika (see II.8.176ab).
- 154 This list presents some unusual features.
- 155 Unidentified.
- 156 I.e., ahiphena (opium).
- 157 The terms sābuna and sābunī are also found in the Rasaratnākara (IV.5.29 and III.8.118).
- 158 Mentioned in the Rasaratnākara (III.8.129).
- 159 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.305cd-306, where four varieties are mentioned (nīlaka is omitted).
- 160 Lonāra is also mentioned in the Rasārnavakalpa (470).

- 165 Probably the same as Śūrpāraka; see N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991: 282) and N. Dey (1979: 197–198).
- 166 The river Kāverī (see 8.52).
- 167 Compare Yuktikalpataru, hīrakaparīksā 40-41 (p.96).
- 168 Usually a name of the emerald.
- 169 This number is not accidental; compare the sixty-four Siddhas and Yoginīs.
- 170 The Ānandakanda gives a series of synonyms; 9.12 = Rasendraciidāmani 6.6.
- 171 Ānandakanda II.9.25cd-26ab = Rasendracūdāmaņi 6.7.
- 172 Compare Ānandakanda I.23.349-355 (sthalapadminīkalpa).
- 173 Ānandakanda II.9.31 (gonasā) = Rasendracūdāmani 6.11.
- 174 Compare Ānandakanda I.23.341cd-346 (uccatākalpa).
- 175 Ānandakanda II.9.35cd-36ab (īśvarī) = Rasendracūdāmani 6.13.
- 176 Ānandakanda II.9.36cd-37ab (bhūtakešī) = Rasendracūdāmani 6.14.
- 177 Ānandakanda II.9.37cd-38ab (kṛṣṇalatā) = Rasendracūḍāɪnaṇi 6.15.
- 178 Ānandakanda II.9.38cd-39ab (laśunavallī) = Rasendracūdāmani 6.16.
- 179 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.102-111 ab (rudantīkalpa).
- 180 Ānandakanda II.9.42 (vārāhī) = Rasendracūdāmani 6.18.
- 181 Ānandakanda II.9.43 (saptapattrī) = Rasendracūdāmani 6.19.
- 182 Ānandakanda II.9.44 (nāginī) = Rasendracūdāmani 6.20.
- 183 Ānandakanda II.9.45 (sarpiņī) = Rasendracūḍāmaņi 6.21.
- 184 Ānandakanda II.9.46 (chattrinī) = Rasendracūdāmaņi 6.22.
- 185 Ānandakanda II.9.47 (gośṛṇgī) = Rasendracū¢āmaṇi 6.23.
- 186 Ānandakanda II.9.48ab (jyotirlatā) = Rasendracūdāmaņi 6.24ab (raktavallī).
- 187 Ānandakanda II.9.49cd (raktavallī) = Rasendracūdāmani 6.24cd (raktavallī).
- 188 Ānandakanda II.9.50 (pattravallī) = Rasendracūdāmani 6.25.
- 189 Ānandakanda II.9.51 (kākinī) = Rasendracūdāmani 6.26.
- 190 Ānandakanda II.9.52 (cāṇḍālī) = Rasendracūḍāmaņi 6.27; the extra verse (II.9.53) is absent from the Rasendracūḍāmani.
- 191 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.313-499 (vi jayākalpa).
- 192 Compare a second plant of this name, described at II.9.65.
- 193 Compare Ānandakanda I.23.399-402.
- 194 Ānandakanda II.9.54-59 = Rasendracūdāmani 6.28-33.
- 195 Ānandakanda II.9.60 corresponds to Rasendracūdāmaņi 6.34, where this plant is called raktāngī. Compare Rasakāmadhenu I.3.86, which has garudavallī.
- 196 Ānandakanda II.9.61 agrees with Rasendracūdāmani 6.35, where this plant, however, is called lambinī. Compare Rasakāmadhenu I.3.87, which has tumbinī.
- 197 Ānandakanda II.9.65 (mahauşadhi) differs from II.9.57, which describes another plant, also called mahauşadhi.
- 198 Ānandakanda II.9.62-67 = Rasendracūdāmani 6.36-41.
- 199 Ānandakanda II.9.68 = Rasendracūdāmaņi 6.42, where this plant is called karasīvallikā. Compare Rasakāmadhenu I.3.93, which has karasīvallarī.
- 200 Ānandakanda II.9.69-73 = Rasendracūdāmaņi 6.43-47. Compare Ānandakanda II.9.73 (va iravallī) with I.15.621-623ab (va iravallīkalpa).

- 201 Ānandakanda II.9.74 corresponds to Rasendracūdimani 6.48, where this plant is called ksīravallī. The Rasakāmadhenu (1.3.99) has vīravallī or cīravallī.
- 202 Ānandakanda II.9.75-78 = Rasendracūdāmani 6.49-52.
- 203 Ānandakanda II.9.79 (akṣarā) corresponds to Rasendracūçlāmaņi 6.53, where this plant is called akṣīrā (a variant reads akṣarā). The Rasakimadhenu (I.3.103) describes it as ajarā.
- 204 Ānandakanda II.9.20 (apattrā) corresponds to Rasendracūdāmaņi 6.54, where this plant is called aparnā.
- 205 Ānandakanda II.9.81-97 = Rasendracūdāmani 6.55-72.
- 206 The synonyms, varieties, characteristics, properties and actions are listed. Curative properties and alchemical uses are mentioned. Rādhākṛṣṛṇaśāstrī (bhūmikā to the edition, 14) supposes that chapter ten has been interpolated; it is absent from some of the MSS.
- 207 Three varieties are described (II.10.23).
- 208 Indravārunī and mahendravārunī are described (II.10.27-34ab).
- 209 Three varieties are mentioned. Compare Ānandakanda I.15.209cd-218 (punarnavākalpa), where two varieties are distinguished.
- 210 Three varieties are described which differ in the colour of their flowers, and one called kantapurikhā (II.20.54-56).
- 211 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.229-227 (bhringarājakalpa). Two varieties are described; bhringarāja and mahābringa.
- 212 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.579cd-587 (gudūcīkalpa). Two varieties are distinguished: a form with tubers (kanda) and one without them (II.10.62-66). Kandagudūci is also described in the Dhanvantarī yanighantu.
- 213 Two varieties, a large and a small one (II.10.67cd).
- 214 Two varieties: śatāvarī and mahāśatāvarī (II.10.74cd-78ab).
- 215 Nākulī and gandhanākulī are described (II.10.83cd-85).
- 216 Compare Ānandakanda I.23.387-392ab (ksīrakandakalpa). Two varieties are described.
- 217 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.111cd-130 (nirguṇḍīkalpa); nirguṇḍī is one of the two varieties of sinduvāra (II.10.90).
- 218 Three varieties (II. 10. 106).
- 219 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.599cd-620 (vṛddhadārukakalpa). Two varieties are described: vṛddhadāruka and irmadāru (II.10.108cd-110 ab).
- 220 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.597–599ab (somarājīkalpa); somarājī is one of the names of bākucī (II.10.111cd).
- 221 Compare Ānandakanda I. 15.623cd-626 (tilakṣīrinikākalpa); tilakṣīrinikā is one of the synonyms of goraksadugdhī (II.10.127cd-128ab).
- 222 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.97cd-101 (hastikarnīkalpa).
- 223 Three varieties: jīvantī, mahajjīvantī, svarņajīvantī (II.10.161-166).
- 224 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.60cd-70ab (muṇḍīkalpa). Four varieties of muṇḍī are described, which differ in the colour of their flowers, and mahāmundī (II.10.171-174ab).
- 225 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.228-245ab (kumārīkalpa).
- 226 Compare Ānandakanda I.15.628-634 (brāhmīkalpa). Two varieties are described: brāhmī and laghu- or jalabrāhmī (II.10.183-186).
- 227 Three varieties are distinguished (II.10.201).
- 228 Two varieties are described: dronapuṣpī and mahādronī (II.10.211-216).
- 229 The work is by some scholars ascribed to Mahābhairava, Bhairavanātha (S.K. Śarmā, 1992; 18) or Manthānabhairava (ABI 326; S. Ārya, 1984; 122; AVI 467; C. Dwarkanath, 1991; 43).

- 230 Rādhākr snaśāstrī's bhūmikā (10-11) to the edition. B. Rama Rao (1971c).
- 231 See chapter twelve of the amṛtīkaraṇaviśrānti; this chapter has a parallel in the Rasaratnā-kara and need not be regarded as an original contribution by the author of the Ānanda-kanda.
- 232 Dates assigned to the Ānandakanda are: between A.D. 850-950 and 1150-1250 (Rādhā-kṛṣṇaśāstrī's bhūmikā, 12, to the edition; B. Rama Rao, 1971c); tenth century (Bhagwan Dash, 1978: 142); twelfth century (C. Dwarkanath, 1991: 43; S.K. Śarmā, 1992: 18).
- 233 Ānandakanda I.15.337.
- 234 See Rādhākṛṣṇaśāstrī's bhūmikā (12–13) to the edition of the Ānandakanda. Examples of verses common to Ānandakanda and Rasaratnākara are: kriyākaraṇaviśrānti 1.14–15 = Rasaratnākara, Rasakhaṇḍa 5.5–6; 1.52cd–54ab = 7.2–3; 1.57–58 = 7.6–7; 1.94–100ab = 7.20–26

- pāka) and 179 (jātīpattrīpāka); pakārādi 209 (pūgapāka).
- 13 This verse was borrowed from the Rasendracintāmaņi according to Somadevaśarman's commentary.
- 14 This verse was borrowed from the Rasendracintāmaņi according to Somadevaśarman's commentary.
- 15 This verse was borrowed from the Rasendracintämani according to Somadevaśarman's commentary.
- 16 A quotation from the Hārītasamhitā, as indicated: hārītam praty ātreyah.
- 17 Äyurvedaprakāśa 1.418–425 and 436-449 are also from the Bhāvaprakāśa according to Somadevaśarman's commentary.
- 18 Äyurvedaprakāśa 1.108–112 forms also part of Rasārņava and Rasendracintāmaņi according to Somadevaśarman's commentary.
- 19 Āyurve aprakāśa 1.335-350 is also from the Rasacintāmaņi according to Somadevaśarman.
- 20 Äyurvedaprakāśa 1.25cd–27ab, 162cd–163, 164, 166, 172, 181 and 396 are also from the Rasamañiarī according to Somadevaśarman.
- 21 Äyurvedaprakāśa 1.161 is also from the Rasapaddhati according to Somadevaśarman.
- 22 Many more verses are from this source according to Somadevasarman, for example, 1. 18cd, 21cd−22, 29ab, 33-34, 45, 50-51, 75, 357-362, 366-374, 376-390, etc.
- 23 Äyurvedaprakāśa 1.140-148 has also been borrowed from Śārngadhara according to Somadevaśarman.
- 24 This verse is from the Rasendracintāmaņi according to Somadevaśarman.
- 25 Somadevasarman indicates that 1.118-121ab is from the Rasendracintāmaņi, 1.181 from the Rasamañjarī.
- 26 These quotations are from the Rasaratnasamuccaya.
- 27 Äyurvedaprakäśa 1.409-414 is also from the Yogatarangini according to Somadevaśarman.
- 28 P.K. Gode (1935a), who refers to *ed. b.
- 29 The Sanskrit commentary ad 1.133-134ab quotes Brhadvāsistha.
- 30 Somadevaśarman's references should be used with some caution, due to the uncertain chronology of many rasaśāstra texts. The Rasendracintāmani, for example, regarded as Mādhava's main source by Somadeva, has borrowed from earlier works. Fortunately, Somadevaśarınan is well aware of this problem and indicates in several instances that verses, taken from the Rasendracintāmani, ultimately derive from earlier texts, such as the Rasārnava and Rasahrdaya.
- 31 The Rasendracintāmani is left unmentioned as one of Mādhava's sources in Gulrāiśarmamiśra's commentary.
- 32 Numbered in agreement with ed. d.
- 33 Mādhava does not describe his treatise as a compilation, which it clearly is.
- 34 Äyurvedaprakāśa 1.16–18ab = Rasaratnākara I.1.27–29ab (not indicated in the commentaries); the same eight doşas are found in the Rasamañjarī.
- 35 This classification is found in the Rasaratnasamuccaya.
- 36 These descriptions are from the Rasendracintāmaņi and Rasacintāmaņi according to Somadevaśarman.
- 37 Defined as a qualitative change in the commentary of Gulrājśarmamiśra (pūrvarūpasya rūpāntaraprāptih).

- 38 See on these terms the Sanskrit commentary of Gulrā jśarmamiśra.
- 39 These verses are from the Rasendracintāmani according to Somadevaśarman.
- 40 These dhātus are not the metals, but abhraka, etc. (see the commentaries).
- 41 See the Sanskrit commentary of Gulrā jśarmamiśra ad 1.324-325 on these terms.
- 42 Somadeva
 śarman indicates that this verse is also found in the Rasahrdaya and Rasendracint ämani.
- 43 The poṭabandha of the Rasaratnasamuccaya (11.72) is called pāṭabandha in the Āyurve-daprakāśa (1.373).
- 44 This verse is found in the Rasasamketakalikā and Rasakāmadhenu according to Somadevasarman.
- 45 Used in the preparation of rasaparpaţikā according to the commentary of Gulrājśarmamiśra.
- 46 The preparation of a khota is described at 1.313-318.
- 47 Jalaukābandha is an additional type, not employed in the transformation of the body, but to allure women (strīdrāvaṇa; 1.362); see on this bandha 1.464–469ab.
- 48 This verse is from the Rasasamketakalikā (see Somadevaśarman's commentaries).
- 49 This verse is from the Rasasamketakalikā. Compare Āyurvedaprakāśa 1.397-435.
- 50 Nityanātha is quoted on this subject.
- 51 The twenty uparasas of the Rasamañ jarī (3.1-3ab) differ from those of the Äyurvedaprakāśa.
- 52 Dhanvantarī yanighantu 6, rasāh 1. The order and the names used are identical.
- 53 This variety does not occur in other works on alchemy.
- 54 Some plant names are uncommon: gobhī, hulahula, kāgadīnimbū.
- 55 The items constituting this group are not specified.
- 56 This group consists of medoroga, vrddhi, arbuda, gandamālā, etc.
- 57 This group comprises āmavāta, grdhrasī, etc.
- 58 These disorders are not enumerated.
- 59 Bāṇa is a term designating a rocket. See on fireworks in India: P.K. Gode (1953b); B.V. Subbarayappa (1971): 345–346.
- 60 Not described in the Āyurvedaprakāśa; probably the same as rudhira, i.e., carnelian.
- 61 The interpretation of haridrākaksālı is uncertain.
- 62 See on the Brahmagiri: N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 100; N. Dey (1979): 40.
- 63 See, for example, the glosses ad 1.47-48 and 401-403.

Chapter 3 Goraksasamhitā

NCC VI, 178. Check-list Nr. 306. Cat. BHUNr. 38: completed in A.D. 1660/61. AVI 307–308. T\u00e4ntrika S\u00e4hitva 193.

Edition: Gorakşasamhitā, edited by Janārdana Pāṇḍeya, Sarasvatī-bhavana-granthamālā, vol. 110, 1 st ed., 2 vols., Vārāṇasī 1976 and 1977; both volumes contain an upodghāta by the editor and are provided with useful (although incomplete) indexes; the edition is mainly based on a MS of the Sarasvati Bhavan Library (*MS Nr. 25572; see the upodghāta to vol. I, pages tha and da). The author refers to the Bhūtiprakaraṇa as Śivasūtra (9.132). The colophons call the treatise Svacchanda Gorakṣasaṇhitā (chapters one to five), and Svacchandaśaktyāvatāra Śatasāhasrī Gorakṣasaṃhitā (chapters six, seven and nine). See on references to Svacchanda in the work: D.G. White (1996): 156; this author regards the Bhūtiprakaraṇa as belonging to the Svacchandabhairava canon; he refers to the fact that its opening chapter calls the treatise an abridgment of a much longer rasatantra revealed by Svacchanda. See on Svacchanda texts: Tāntrika Sāhitya 720–721.

- 2 The full text of the Gorakṣasaṃhitā consists of five sections (khaṇḍa), as indicated at the end of the Bhūtiprakaraṇa (9.133); the Yogakhaṇḍa has been *edited by Prasannakumār Kaviratna (see the upodghāta to vol. 1, page ṭa) or P.K. Bandyopadhyay (see S.C. Banerji, 1992: 34 and 96) in 1897; the fifth khaṇḍa is identical with the Avadhūtagītā (NCC I, 415–416: list of editions and translations) or Dattātreyagītā (NCC VI, 178; see G. Tucci, 1930: 134–136). A Nādījāānadīpikā on yoga forms part of the Goraksasamhitā (NCC X, 28).
- 3 Tantras are divided into Kādi and Hādi works (see S.C. Banerji, 1992: 34–35; J. Pāndeya's upodghāta to the edition, page tha). See on the contents of the Kādiprakarana the upodghāta to vol. 1, pages tha to tha; the contents are related to those of the Kub jikāmatatantra; they are also remarkably similar to the Śrīmatottara (S.C. Banerji, 1992: 35; J. Pāndeya's upodghāta to the edition, page da). See on the Śrīmatottara: Tāntrika Sāhitya 657. Compare D.G. White (1996): 156 and 432.
- 4 See on the Bhūtiprakaraṇa: D.G. White (1996): 155–158. Bhūti is a shortening of vibhūti, a synonym for the siddhis that are the goal of the work (D.G. White, 1996: 432).
- 5 The term khāne pāne (4.77) is used as a synonym for siddhi. This expression is also known from the Dattātreyatantra, Rasendramangala and Matsyendra's Akulavīratantra (see D.G. White, 1996: 158). See on the Ākulavīratantra: D. Sensharma (1994): 40–41.
- 6 Verses 278cd-313 and 327-349 were missing in the MS used for the edition.
- 7 Verses 11-37a, the last part of the chapter, and its colophon, have not been preserved.
- 8 Verses 1-73 were missing in the MS used for the edition.
- 9 See the references in Bhāgīrathaprasāda Tripāthī's Prāstāvika (2-3) to vol. 2 of the edition.
- 10 See Bhāgīrathaprasāda Tripāṭhī's Prāstāvika (7-8) to vol. 2.
- 11 E.g., khāne pāne (4.77).
- 12 The Bhūtiprakarana actually consists of about 2,100 verses.
- 13 Usually four varieties are distinguished.
- 14 Mica is not regarded as a mahārasa in the Rasārnava and Rasahrdaya.
- 15 Usually three varieties are distinguished.

- 16 This type is usually called carmara (e.g., Rasārnava 7.46).
- 17 The same series is mentioned in the Rasahrdaya and Rasendracūḍāmaṇi.
- 18 Usually two or three varieties are distinguished.
- 19 Kāsīsa is usually of two types.
- 20 Varieties of anjana are not described.
- 21 The term rasaloha has another meaning in the Rasopanisad (4.8).
- 22 Sattvas are repeatedly referred to in the verses describing the rasalohas.
- 23 Mentioned as khurāyasa at 2.30 and 3.46.
- 24 Compare Gorakşasamhitā II.6.443, where nṛpa (= rājāvarta), vaidambaka and tuttha are mentioned together.
- 25 The bile (pitta) of fishes is mentioned at 2.90; 6.297 and 311. The bile of peacocks is mentioned at 2.90; 4.66; 6.278 and 439; 8.83. The excrements (purīṣa) of flies (makṣikā) are mentioned at 5.155, the droppings of a crow (dhvānkṣaviṣ or -viṣṭhā) at 3.18 and 6.11, 538, 541
- 26 The same as devadālī.
- 27 Dīpana is usually the eighth saṃskāra; the repetition of pātana is unique; bāhyadruti is not mentioned.
- 28 Compare Rasakāmadhenu I.3.44-45 and Rasārņava 5.22-23ab.
- 29 Golaka- and bhasmabandha are described in chapter six (see 6.476).
- 30 Probably the same as sarpāksī.
- 31 One of the names of trivit (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 1199).
- 32 One of the names of prśniparnī (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1666, 1667).
- 33 Probably an error for jalapūrvāmbuśītā (see Rasahṛdaya 3.4).
- 34 Probably the same as matsyākṣī.
- 35 Sixty-eight plants are enumerated if my analysis is correct. The Rasaprakāśasudhākara lists groups of sixty-eight plants. Compare the list of rasauṣadhis of the Rasaprakāśasudhākara (9.13-22) and that of vāsanauṣadhis of Caturbhuja's commentary on the Rasahṛdaya.
- 36 Compare Rasārņava 11.50-54, where six types are described.
- 37 The same classification is found in the Rasopanisad (17.213cd).
- 38 The majority are called mahausadhi, some are referred to as rasausadhi or divyausadhi.
- 39 Probably identical with somavallī.
- 40 Sixty-four plants are said to be described (7.106), but their actual number is larger. Compare the plants described in the Rasopanisad (17.218cd-300).
- 41 The terms aravinda and kūrpa are employed in the Rasopaniṣad; the loharasas of the Gorakṣasaɪnhitā are called rasalohas in the Rasopaniṣad; many plant names are found in both treatises.
- 42 Some examples are 6.412; 7.1, 54, 79; 8.43.
- 43 Examples are 6.370 and 400.
- 44 Examples are 6.131, 133, 137, 226, 229, 272.
- 45 Examples are 6.303, 330, 376, 460, 546.
- 46 Examples are: cakrasveda (6.500; 7.204), cakravahni (6.256), and cakrayoga (3.27; 6.82, 505, 514).
- 47 Examples are 3.19, 21, 28; 4.56; 6.138, 146, 350, 387, 474, 543. See on these terms: Ānandakanda, paribhāṣā 114-115 (together with the commentary) and Āyurvedaprakāśa 1.88.
- 48 Examples are: indīvara (6.296, 431, 444), kūrpa (6.42), vaidambaka (2.47; 6.443), vidambaka (3.44), vidruşa (5.67), vipluşa (5.114), and viśrāma (6.87, 88).

- 49 See 6.275 and 313; 7.251. It may be jyotismatītaila.
- 50 See 3.89 and 91; 4.45 and 52; 5.213 and 215, etc.
- 51 See 4.12, 24, 39; 5.211; 6.135, 144, etc.
- 52 See 5.210; 6.86, 98, etc.
- 53 See Ānandakanda I.4.437-440.
- 54 See, for example, 6.312 (rubūkasneha) and 340 (raktāpāmārgasneha).
- 55 See, for example, 6.508 (mīnasneha).
- 56 The authorship of Gorakşa is very doubtful; many verses of the Yogakhanda occur verbatim in other works atributed to Gorakşa and in treatises like the Haṭhayogapradī pikā, etc. (see S.C. Banerji, 1992: 34).
- 57 This king is identified as Sirnhana or Singhana, the Yādava king of Devagiri, who reigned in the first half of the thirteenth century (AVI 307-308).
- 58 AVI 468. P. Rāy (1956): 128. This otherwise unknown work may be the Bauddhasarvasva, quoted in Trimalla's Yogataraṅgiṇī (17.62–69: rasakarpūra; 17.79–84: on lohamāraṇa; 29. 13–16: a formula against hikkā; 64.6: a prescription against amlapitta) and Bṛhadyogataraṅgiṇī (42.13–15ab: on the doṣas of mercury; 79.33–36: a formula against hikkā; 90.232–234: the formula of Dhanvantari's daśavidhaśatāvarītaila), and in the Yogaratnākara (366: a formula against hikkā). The Bauddhasarvasva, ascribed to Saugatasiṛnha (see: Trimalla), is much later than Gorakṣa(nātha), because it mentions phiraṅgaroga as a disease to be treated with rasakarpūra.
- 59 NCC III, 357: in eight adhikāras; on divination and pharmacology as applied to sexual relations; *edited, with Hindītranslation, Moradabad 1899. This work contains no reference to Gorakşa anywhere (Mohan Singh, 1937: 11).

Chapter 4

Kākacaņdeśvarīmatatantra to Rasahrdayatantra

1 CC I, 89; II, 17 and 101. NCC III, 295. Check-list Nr. 361. STMI 93. An alternative title of the work is Kākacaṇḍīśvarī(mata)tantra. The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram records a Kākacandīśvaratantra (Nr. 970) as a work on rasāyana.

Edition: ed., together with the Rasaprakāśasudhākara, under the title of Bhāratī-ya-rasāyana-śāstra, by Viśveśvaradayālu Vaidyarāja, Harihara Press, Etawah 1930 [IO.San.B.986(c)]. References are to the extracts in P. Rāy (1956): 345–350. Compare Kākacandīśvarakalpatantra.

- 2 See on Kākacandī and other avicephalic goddesses: D.G. White (1996): 152.
- 3 The Kākacaņḍeśvarīmatatantra is Śākta in its orientation according to D.G. White (1996: 152).

- 17 See Bṛhadrasarājasundara 138 (on the māraṇa of abhrakasattva).
- 18 S.K. Śarmā (1992: 18) assigns the work to the twelfth century. Satyaprakāś (1960: 424) places it in the twelfth or thirteenth century. D.G. White (1996: 154-155) remarks that some version of the text was already extant in the twelfth century, as it is cited in, for example, the Dattātreyatantra, while other evidence makes clear that it was reworked over a period of several centuries.

- 85 The commentary (ad 8-11) explains that Kankālayayogin was acquainted with a total of 252 alchemical processes and products, consisting of eighty-four varieties of rasakriyā, gutikā and añjana respectively.
- 86 The subjects of the chapters are indicated at the end of the commentary.
- 87 The term rāji is not employed in other treatises; it may be the same as what is usually called bīja.
- 88 Khāpara is the same as kharpara; khāparasattva is zinc.
- 89 See on the kañcukas: D.G. White (1996): 213–214. Kañcuka is also the term used for the long, close-fitting coat worn by the Kuṣāṇa kings and seen in images of Sūrya made during the Kuṣāṇa and Gupta periods (see on this garment: U.P. Thapliyal, 1979: 59–60). Other meanings ofkañcuka are: a tunic-like garment (Moti Chandra, 1973: 12, 14, 107), a female bodice (Moti Chandra, 1973: 172) and the skin of a snake.
- 90 Compare the kañcukas according to the Bauddhasarvasva in the Bṛḥadyogatarangiṇī (42. 13–15ab).
- 91 Identical with vātāsthīlā according to the Hindī commentary.
- 92 A variety of kustha according to the Sanskrit commentary.
- 93 Probably a misprint for durbhita, which is the same as sidhma (see the commentary ad Haramekhalā 4.140).
- 94 The same as bhrama according to the Hindī commentary; compare ghūrmi (Hitopadeśa 4.107: = tandrā).
- 95 The term paṭasāraṛa is employed in the Āyurvedaprakāśa (1.54ab), Bṛhadyogatarangiṇī (42.17-18) and Rasamārtaṇḍa (see the bhūmikā to the edition of the Ānandakanda, 20, and the commentary ad Āyurvedaprakāśa 1.24ab); a variant of the term is pattasārana.
- 96 This series is unusual; dīpana (jāraņa includes dīpana; see 113–115), garbhadruti, bāhyadruti and cāraņa are absent; pratisāraņa is a distinct saiņskāra; śodhana, mukhakaraņa and māraņa are uncommon saiņskāras; mukhakaraņa is also a saiņskāra in the Bṛhadyogataranginī (42.17–18).
- 97 Eleven different herbs are used to remove the seven kañcukas and five doşas: arka, aśvagandhā, bīyā, brahmavṛkṣa, citraka, kaṭutumbī, kudhya, nāhī, triphalā, va jrakanda, and va jrī; citraka is mentioned twice; the process consists of twelve steps.
- 98 See on pakşaccheda: J.R. Gaur and H.S. Śarmā (1992); Purohit Cetanā (1992); Yoginee Mulay (1992).

- 99 The sarnskāra called dīpana is included (113-115).
- 100 No varieties of bandha are mentioned.
- 101 An unidentified substance.
- 102 This may be the same as dugdhikā, a name applied to some species of Euphorbia (see WIRM III, 225). WIRM (III, 194) mentions dudhali as the vernacular name of Eryngium caeruleum Bieb
- 103 Probably the same as pātālagarudī.
- 104 This term may mean: heated.
- 105 The Hindī commentary explains kaṭāhabundha as ardhaghaṭasadṛśapātra; compare the Sanskrit commentary.
- 106 Explained as clay (mrttikā).
- 107 Probably: to pound, reduce to powder, as Hindī chāmṭṇā.
- 108 Explained as a piece of cloth (kapṛā) in the Hindī commentary.
- 109 A lid or cover.110 A suspended jug.
- 111 Explained as a synonym of bhrama; compare ghūrma (22).
- 112 Explained as coal (koyalā).
- 113 Explained as gypsum (Hinclī: śvet khariyām).
- 114 A tortoise (Hindī commentary: kacchapa; Sanskrit commentary: kaccolaka).
- 115 A synonym of manaháilā.
- 116 A type of vessel (pātraviśesa).

- 144 JAI 104 (two non-medical works by the same Merutunga are mentioned, the Kā-madevacarita, completed in A.D. 1352/53, and the Saṃbhavanāthacarita, written in A.D. 1356/57; these works are absent from the CC).
- 145 S.K. Śarmā (1992: 18) assigns the author of the Rasādhyāya, called Kankālīśiṣya by him, to the thirteenth century.
- 146 The year mentioned is 1443, usually interpreted as the year 1443 of the Vikrama era (= A.D. 1386/87).
- 147 CC I, 467. Krishnamachariar (1989): 207. Winternitz II, 332. A.K. Chatter jee (1978: 158) mentions A.D. 1302.
- 148 CC: not recorded. Krishnamachariar 365.
- 149 The date of the Berlin MS appears to be uncertain; is is therefore not impossible that this Merutunga wrote the vrtti on the Rasādhyāya.

References are to a, ed. 1927. P. Rāy (1956: 330–344) gives the Sanskrit text of extracts from the Rasahrdaya and its commentary (with variants), based on three MSS (from Benares, Kāthmāndū, and the India Office); a few passages were translated by him (1956: 147–149). The title of the work, Rasahrdayatantra, is mentioned in the last verse (19.80). It is a mistake to call it Astādaśasamskāra.

- 152 Cat. München Nr. 402 is divided into twenty-one chapters (paṭala), Cat. Mysore Nr. 42370 into thirty-one chapters (paṭala). Gopīnāth Kavirāj (Tāntrika Sāhitya 550) refers to a version in nineteen avabodhas and one in eighteen paṭalas. The extracts from the Rasahṛdaya in P. Rāy (1956: 330–344) are from a version divided into paṭalas. All three editions have nineteen chapters (avabodha).
- 153 Compare on chapter one: D.G. White (1996): 146-147.
- 154 D.G. White (1996: 146-147) remarks that Govinda follows the soteriology of the Māheśvara Siddhas in regarding mukti more important than the power of flight. See on the Māheśvara Siddhas: D.G. White (1996): 101-103.
- 155 Anuvāsana is not mentioned as a separate samskāra.
- 156 The commentator quotes the Śaktyavatāra on this subject. Compare Rasahrdaya 3.5 and 4.20, where the term sṛṣṭitraya is found. See on definitions of sṛṣṭi and sṛṣṭitraya: Ānandakanda, paribhāṣā 114-115; Rasakāmadhenu I.5, prose between 6 and 7. See also the commentary ad Āyurvedaprakāśa 1.88 (ṣṛṣṭyambuja).
- 157 A synonym of niścandrika is sthūlatārakārahita (4.1). Niścandrika abhraka is the same as dhānyābhraka (see the Hindī commentary of ed. b ad 3.13).
- 158 Compare 5.6-7, where four colours are mentioned: white, red, yellow and black.
- 159 Abhrakasattva, i.e., aluminium, is described as lohanibha (4.10).
- 160 Sulba is one of the names of copper.
- 161 Compare, for example, the varieties described in the Rasārnava (11.51cd-54).
- 162 These are usually called the five avasthās; see, for example, Rasārnava 10.17.
- 163 The description of the kacchapayantra is different in other texts (see ed. b, p.122).
- 164 These substances are called mahārasa in other texts. The presence of cinnabar (darada) in this group is noteworthy, as well as the absence of mica (abhraka) and capala.
- 165 See the commentary on these varieties.
- 166 A number of varieties of this yantra are described.
- 167 A double amount of bīja is added in pratisāraņā, a threefold amount in anusāraņā.
- 168 The recommended procedures resemble the pañcakarman of āyurveda.
- 169 See on the health risks of the use of mercurial preparations: J.C. Aschoff (1997). The safety of these preparations is defended by P.K. Prajāpati and C. Jhā (1999).
- 170 Some verses of the Rasahrdaya form also part of the Rasārņava and Rasendracintāmaņi; examples are 15.12, 18.7 and 15–16, 19.9 (see the Hindī commentary of ed. b).
- 171 According to P.V. Sharma (AVI 188-189; 1972a: 73-74).

- 172 Raseśvaradarśana 20–22 (20–21 = Rasahrdaya 1.20 and 29); Rasahrdaya 1.21–23 is quoted anonymously (= Raseśvaradarśana 31–33).
- 173 According to Atrideva (ABI 403), Satyaprakāś (1960: 322), and D.G. White (1996: 417, n.145).
- 174 Govindabhagavatpādācārya is quoted (p.20: the verses is identical with Rasahrdaya 1.27; p.21: the two verses are identical with Rasahrdaya 1.18 and 15).
- 175 Brhady ogataranginī 42.126 (bhagavatpādāh; Rasahrdaya 6.13 is quoted).
- 176 According to G.N. Mukherjee (1934b): 324.
- 177 The author of the Rasahrdaya is distinct from the Govinda who wrote the Rasasāra, but the two are sometimes confused (CC I, 167; R.C. Majumdar, 1971; 264–265; STMI 440).
- 178 The colophons refer to him as paramaharnsaparivrājakācāryaśrīmadgovindabhagavatpūjyapāda. Bhikṣu Govinda is sometimes referred to as Govinda Vāgbhaṭa (R.C. Majumdar, 1971: 233). A Samnipātamañjarī is ascribed to Govinda Vāpaṭa.
- 179 He is sometimes called Madanaratha (NCC VI, 203; Hindī commentary of ed. b).
- 180 The Kirātas lived in the area of modern Sikkim and Bhutan (P. Rāy, 1956: 122), Bhutan and Assam (AVI 458), or the hill regions of Northeastern India and Nepal (N.N. Bhattacharyya, 1991). Tryambaka Kāle (bhūmikā to ed. a) advanced that the Vindhyas should be regarded as the region inhabited by the Kirātas; he based this assumption on a verse found in the Śivaśaktisangamatantra (absent from CC; compare Tāntrika Sāhitya 611–612: Śaktisangamatantra). See also on the Kirātas: E. Balfour (1967): II, 575–576; S.K. Chatterji (1974); B.C. Law (1984): 98–99; F.E. Pargiter (1969): I, 322–323; K. Rönnow (1936); A.M. Shastri (1996): II, 78–79; M.R. Singh (1972): 180–182; M. and J. Stutley (1977); U.P. Thapliyal (1979): 39–40.
- 181 The verse has śītāmśuvarnśa.
- 182 The Haihayas were an ancient ruling family in eastern India. N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991) locates them in the Vindhya region. See on Haihaya and the Haihayas: Hopkins; F.E. Pargiter (1922; see index); Sanyal's translation of the Bhāgavatapurāṇa, M. and J. Stutley (1977); Vettam Mani; D.G. White (1996): 147; Wilson's translation of the Viṣṇupurāṇa.
- 183 The Kalachuris ruled, from the ninth to thirteenth centuries, from Tripura (modern Tewar, north of Jabalpur) over a kingdom whose borders more or less correspond to those of modern-day Madhya Pradesh; their influence, however, extended well to the west and east of their boundaries (see D.G. White, 1996: 147–148).
- 184 NCC VI, 203. This verse, absent from all three editions, is reproduced in P. Rāy (1956: 343). V. Śukla (I, 149) regards it as spurious.
- 185 Govinda was a Hindu according to S. Ārya (1984: 57-58), Atrideva (ABI 404-405), G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 458), Tryambaka Kāle (bhūmikā to ed. a), G.N. Mukher jee (1934b), and V. Śukla (I, 148-149). Satyaprakāś (1960: 321) suspends judgment.
- 186 P. Rāy (1956: 149) expressed as his opinion that Govinda was a Buddhist by religion; this view was repeated by O. P. Jaggi (V, 133) and G.P. Srivastava (1954: 112). The subject is discussed by G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 307-311).
- 187 See, for example, 1.2 (Hariand Hara), 4,7 (Haraand Gaurī), 13 (paramātman), 14 (Hara), 15 (brahmapada), 16, 19 (yajña, vedādhyayana); 19.49 (paramam brahma, trivarga) and 64 (Visnu, Rudra).
- 188 See the bhūmikā to ed. a.
- 189 This verse, said to be from Śaṃkarācārya's Carpaṭapañjarī (see CC I, 184 and 626), is quoted by Kāle (bhūmikā to ed. a) and Satyaprakāś (1960: 322). G.N. Mukher jee (1934b:

- 325) claimed that tenets of Śaṃkara can be traced in Govindapāda's writings; in support of this he quotes a verse from Śaṃkara's Mohamudgara (see CC I, 468: wrongly attributed to Śaṃkarācārya).
- 190 Prose passage following upon verse 17 of the Raseśvaradarśana chapter. Some works refer to the author of the Rasahrdaya as ācārya Śrīmadgovindapāda (beginning of Caturbhuja's commentary on the Rasahrdaya) and Bhagavadgovindapāda (Rasendracintāmani 3).
- 191 Authors agreeing with K\u00e4le are Daulatar\u00e4m Rasa\u00e4\u00e4str\u00e4 (pr\u00e4kathan to ed. c), G. H\u00e4ld\u00e4r (Vr\u00e4dhatray\u00e4 458), Bhudeb Mookerjee (Preface to Rasajalanidhi V, XXXIII-XXXVI), G.N. Mukherjee (1934b), Satyaprak\u00e4\u00e4 (1960: 321-323), Somadeva\u00e4arman (commentary ad \u00e4yurvedaprak\u00e4\u00e4sa 1.262), and V. \u00e9ukla (I, 148-149). Atrideva (ABI 403-404; 1978: 203) rejects his hypothesis.
- 192 This vamśāvalī was published by A. Cunningham (1884): 78.
- 193 Dates assigned to the Rasahrdaya by authors who disagree with Kāle are: ninth century (S. Ārya, 1984: 52; Bhagwan Dash, 1986: 13), tenth century (AVI 458; S.K. Śarmā, 1992: 18), eleventh century (R.C. Majumdar, 1971: 233; O.P. Jaggi V, 133; P. Rāy, 1956: 122; P. Rāy, 1967: 17; G.P. Srivastava, 1954: 112), ninth to eleventh centuries (C. Dwarkanath, 1991: 43), earlier than the thirteenth century (Atrideva, 1978: 203), and thirteenth century (R.C. Majumdar, 1971: 264–265).
- 194 D.G. White (1996): 148.
- 195 The title is mentioned in the introductory verses.
- 196 Editions: see the editions of the Rasahrdaya. References are to ed. a (1927).
- 197 Svātmārāma's Hathayogapradī pikā.
- 198 The Rasamañjarī is quoted (7.2 and 2.52-53ab).
- 199 Śrīśailanātha's work of this title.
- 200 Cāmurida's Rasasamketakalikā.
- 201 The Vedāntasūtra is probably quoted ad 1.7, a grammatical work ad 1.13.
- 202 Dharmadāsa's work of this title (see CC I, 268 and 572-573). Dharmadāsa lived about the end of the twelfth or the beginning of the thirteenth century (Krishnamachariar, 1989: 776-767).
- 203 Variant: Allama. Allama is a Mahāsiddha in the Hathayogapradī pikā (1.8). See on Allama: D.G. White (1996).
- 204 Also mentioned in the Pāradasamhitā (1.102). Bindunātha is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭha-yogapradī pikā (1.7).
- 205 Not elsewhere mentioned.
- 206 He is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭhayogapradī pikā (1.8). The Ānandakanda mentions Ghodācūli. The Yogataranginī (20.36–37) refers to Ghodācolī as a Yogin who came from the West (pāścātyadeśāgatayogin). See on him: D.G. White (1996).
- 207 Kanerī or Āryadeva is sometimes regarded as a pupil of Nāgārjuna (V. Pāndeya and M. Uniyāl, 1992: 7). Kanerī is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭhayogapradī pikā (1.7). Kānera (or Āryadeva) is a Siddha in the Tibetan tradition (S. Das Gupta, 1969: 203). See on Kanerī or Kānha-pā: D.G. White (1996).
- 208 Also mentioned in the Pāradasaṃhitā (1.100). Kanthadi is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭha-yogapradī pikā (1.6) and a Siddha in the Tibetan tradition (S. Das Gupta, 1969: 203–204). Todara's Āyurvedasaukhya (III: 4.407) contains a recipe attributed to Kathaṇḍinātha. A Kaṇthaḍnāth is worshipped by the Kaṇthaḍnāthīs, who belong to the Kāṇphaṭas (see G.W. Briggs, 1973).

- 209 A Rasasiddha called Khanda is mentioned in several texts (see, for example, the Rasaratnasamuccaya).
- 210 He is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭhayogapradī pikā (1.6). Koraṇḍa is a Siddha in the Ānandakanda (1.3.49); Korandaka is a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasamhitā (1.100).
- 211 Not mentioned alsewhere.
- 212 Also mentioned in the Pāradasamhitā (1.102). He is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭhayogapradī-pikā (1.7).
- 213 Also mentioned in the Pāradasanhitā (1.102). He is a Mahāsiddha in the Hathayogapradīpikā (1.7).
- 214 Also mentioned in the Pāradasaṣṇḥitā (1.102). He is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭḥayogapradī-pikā (1.7).
- 215 Also mentioned in the Pāradasaṃhitā (1.100). A Siddhibuddha is a Mahāsiddha in the Hathayogapradī pikā (1.6).
- 216 Alsomentioned in the Pāradasaṃhitā (1.100). He is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭhayogapradīpikā (1.6).
- 217 Ținținī is a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasaṃhitā (1.103). Țințini is a Mahāsiddha in the Hathayogapradī pikā (1.8). He may be the same as Tanti-pā (see D.G. White, 1996).
- 218 Not mentioned elsewhere. Yogin may be an epithet of Manthanabhairava.
- 219 Caturbhu ja does not refer to his source. Compare the Rasasiddhas of the Rasaratnasamuccaya.
- 220 Compare the closely related list of Gorakṣasaṇhitā, Bhūtiprakaraṇa 5.46–56. Caturbhuja's source is left unmentioned.
- 221 Ardhacandrā in the Goraksasamhitā.
- 222 Jalaparvāmbuśītā in the Goraksasamhitā.
- 223 Saracandraukasa in the Goraksasamhitā.
- 224 The list mentions both varāhī and vārāhī.
- 225 The list also mentions a jala jā samangā, but the corresponding list in the Gorakşasannhitā has sthala jā in stead of jala jā.
- 226 The list consists of sixty-eight plants if my analysis is correct. The group is said to be composed of sixty-four items, but a number of sixty-eight is mentioned as well.
- 227 Not mentioned alsewhere.
- 228 Some quotations are from the Rasaratnasamuccaya, for example the descriptions of the dolāyantra (ad 2.3) and pātanāyantra (ad 2.7).

Chapter 5 Rasajalanidhi

- 1 Edition: Rasa-jala-nidhi or Ocean of Indian chemistry, medicine and alchemy, compiled in Sanskrit by Bhudeb Mookerjee, with English translation by the author; rasajalanidhih, mukhopādhyāyopādhikena siddhavaidya-śrībhūdeva devaśarmmanā rasācāryema...viracital, vols. I–V, published by the author, Calcutta 1926, 1927, 1929, 1936, 1938 [Vols. I–III: IO.San.D.418/1–3]; *repr., Chowkhamba Orientalia, Kashi Ayurveda Series 15, Varanasi 1984. Reviews: J. Filliozat, JA 223, 1933, 110–112; *Nature 126, 1930, 467. References are to page numbers of the edition. The English translation has been reprinted: *The wealth of Indian alchemy and its medicinal uses, Indian Medical Science Series 63–64, Sri Satguru, Delhi 1998.
- 2 More often called utthapana.
- 3 Usually called bida.
- 4 Compare I, 91, where nine poisons are listed.
- 5 Compare I, 91, where seven upavisas are enumerated.
- 6 Described as a pupil of Śukrācārya.
- 7 Brahmajyotis described a particular method of killing diamonds.
- 8 Candrasena described a particular method of killing diamonds.
- 9 King Candrasena's description of the topaz (puṣparāga) is quoted. Candrasena, to whom the Rasacandrodaya is attributed, is one of the Rasasiddhas; he is also quoted in the Yogaratnākara.
- 10 A Siddha, referred to on the subject of rasabhasman. Lakṣmīśvara and Kālanātha were Rāma's teachers in alchemy according to Bhudeb Mookerjee (see Vol. V, Intr. XXII).
- 11 He distinguished eight kinds of iron.
- 12 The author of the Rasendracūdāmani.
- 13 The formula of śukralauha, employed in the treatment of haemorrhoids, is ascribed to the alchemist Śukrācārya, who is one of the Rasasiddhas and the teacher of Ādima in the Rasaialanidhi.
- 14 The author of the Rasacintāmani; not mentioned as a Rasasiddha in any other list.
- 15 The author of the Rasajalanidhi.
- 16 Referred to as an alchemical author by G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 322–323) and P. Rāy (1956: 128); not classified as a Rasasiddha in any other list; mentioned in the Rasendracūḍāmaṇi and Rasaratnasamuccaya. Brahma jyotis described the killing of diamonds (III, 181).
- 17 Not mentioned as a Rasasiddha in any other list.
- 18 The author of the Rasaratnākara. Also mentioned as a Rasasiddha in Caturbhuja's commentary on the Rasahrdaya (1.7) and in the Pāradasamhitā (1.102).
- 19 Not mentioned as a Rasasiddha in any other list; he is referred to as Rāvaṇa's enemy. Bhudeb Mooker jee claims that Rāma, the hero of the Rāmāyaṇa, was an expert in alchemy and the author of a treatise on this subject, called Rāmarājīya; the Rasaratnasamuccaya and Bhāvaprakāśa are said to be much indebted to this work; B. Mookerjee regards the Rasendracintāmani too as a work of king Rāma (Vol. V, Intr. XXII–XXV).
- 20 The author of the Rasendracūdāmani; not mentioned as a Rasasiddha in any other list.

- 21 Compare Rasa jalanidhi III, 65.
- 22 The author of the Rasaratnasamuccaya; not mentioned as a Rasasiddha in any other list.
- 23 1, 89 (see Rasakāmadhenu III.3.147–150ab); I, 95–96 (see Rasakāmadhenu III.3.169cd–175); I, 97 (see Rasakāmadhenu III.3.189–192).
- 24 II. 253 (see Rasakāmadhenu II.1.111cd-113).
- 25 I, 37, verse one = Rasaratnākara I. 1.27; I, 71-72 (see Rasakāmadhenu I.3.1-7ab); I.216 = Rasaratnākara I.2.15-20; I, 218-219 = I.3.34-41.
- 26 I, 250-281 = Rasaratnasamuccaya 9; I, 285-293 = 10.1-31; I, 293-298 = 10.47-63; I, 311-320 = 11.60-92; II, 3-12 = 2.2-25; II, 45-46 = 2.26-33; II, 49 = 2.34-35; II, 51-52 = 2.37-49, etc.
- 27 I, 223 = Rasārnava 8.80-85; III, 14-16 = 6.40-50ab.
- 28 I, 61 (see Rasakāmadhenu III.3.91-95).
- 29 I, 60 (see Rasakāmadhenu III.3.87cd-90); I, 63 (see Rasakāmadhenu III.3.120cd-122ab).
- 30 I, 12-13 = Rasendracūdāmaņi 3.3-11ab; I, 14 = 3.16-20ab; I, 248 = 4.1-7cd-111; III, 384 (śulvanāga) = 4.22-25; I, 385 (ghoṣākṛṣṭatāmra) = 4.43; I, 386 (varanāga) = 4.52cd-53ab; I, 386 (patangirāga) = 4.74cd-75; I, 387 (āvāpa) = 4.76; I, 387 (abhiṣeka, nirvāpa) = 4.77-78ab.
- 31 III, $41-48 = Rasendras\bar{a}rasamgraha 1.300-335$.
- 32 The presence of śodhana is unusual; anuvāsana is regarded as a separate samskāra in this series; mūrchana is almost always the third samskāra; bāhyadruti is omitted; māraņa and bhasmīkaraņa are rarely mentioned as samskāras; sāraņa, krāmaņa and sevā are absent from the list.
- 33 The description is borrowed from the Rasaratnasamuccaya (9.5), which calls it svedanī-yantra. A second svedanī- or kandukayantra, described in the Rasaratnasamuccaya (9.74-75), is absent from the Rasa jalanidhi.
- 34 The Rasaratnasamuccaya describes these yantras as two distinct types (9.6-8 and 24-25).
- 35 See D. Joshi (1986: 173) on nāgasindūra.
- 36 It is called āmānī in the vernacular.
- 37 The treatment of the diseases is incomplete, it is not known to me whether volumes six to eight, planned by the author (see AIAD, 1937: 102) have ever been published.
- 38 See the mangala of volume I and AIAD (1937): 102.

Chapter 6 Rasakāmadhenu to Rasāmrta

- 1 CC: not recorded. NCC VII, 70. Check-list Nr. 613. Editions:
 - a vaidyavaraśrīcūdāmaņisamgṛhītā rasakāmadhenuḥ (upakaraṇapāda-dhātusaṃgraha-pāda-sūtakriyāpādeti pādatrayātmakaḥ prathamo bhāgaḥ), vaidya jādavajī trikama-jī ācārya ityena saṃśodhitā prakāśitā ca, Āyurvedīyagranthamālā ṣodaśaṇ puṣpam, Nirṇaya Sāgar Press, Bombay 1925; repr., Vidyāvilāsa Āyurveda Granthamālā 5, Vārāṇasī/Dillī 1988; this edition is based on two MSS from private collections (see Yādavaśarman's Nivedana to the edition).
 - b vaidyavaraśrīcūdāmaņimiśrasanngrhītā rasakāmadhenuņ, prathamopakaranapādaḥ 'suvivṛti' hindī vyākhyāsarnvalitā, vyākhyākārau ācārya śrīgularājaśarmamiśra, Dr. santoṣakumāra śarmā āyurvedācārya, Jayakṛṣṇadāsa Āyurveda Granthamālā 76, Caukhambā Orientalia, Vārāṇasī/Dillī 1992; this edition contains a number of interpolations, especially in chapter one (see: contents).

The fourth section of the Rasakāmadhenu, the Cikitsāpāda, has been *edited by Jīvrām Kālidās, Gondal 1925; reprinted: śrī cūdāmaniracita rasakāmadhenu saṃhitā, tadantargataś caturthaś cikitsāpādal), saṃśodhakaḥ: rasavaidya jīvrām kālidās śāstrī, Vidyāvilās Āyurveda Granthamālā 6, Caukhambā Orientalia, Vārānasī 1992.

References are to ed. a and the edition of the Cikitsāpāda (1992).

The title of the treatise is mentioned in the introductory verses.

- 2 Compare V. Śukła I, 184–185. Edition b contains a considerable number of additions to the text; these interpolations are particularly numerous in chapter one; sources of these additions are: Atrisamhitā (1.21, 44–50, 166), Rasaratnākara (1.115–118ab), Rasaratnasamuccaya (1.25–26, 81–87, 133–135, 145–149, 158, 165), and Rasendracūdāmaņi (1.27–28, 128–129).
- 3 Chapters 46 and 47 are absent.
- 4 Compare the list in P.K. Gode (1951d).
- 5 Kāśīnātha's Ajīrnamañjarī (58) is quoted.
- 6 Mādhava Upādhyāya's Āyurvedaprakāśa is quoted; Rasakāmadhenu 4.241-242 = Āyurvedaprakāśa 4.45-46.
- 7 NCC VI, 353: Candra jñāna. Tāntrika Sāhitya 204: Candra jñāna and Candra jñānatantra.
- 8 Caraka is referred to as one of the authorities distinguishing six varieties of tīkṣṇaloha.
- 9 Devanāthamiśra was Cūdāmani's teacher.
- 10 Compare Rasā yanasārasamgraha.
- 11 Probably Devendragiri's Rasāyanasārasanngraha.
- 12 NCC IX, 151; Täntrika Sähitya 316. Some subjects covered by the quotations from the Devī yāmala are: the jalakūrmayantra (I.1.66–69ab), the characteristics of the culhikā (I.2.1–4), the jāraņa of gold (I.4, 311), the preparation of tīkṣṇasindūra (II.1.874–879), abrakasattva (II.3.149–153ab), and sattvasindūra (II.3.153cd–157ab), aurifaction (II.4.57–60ab), the purification of kāsīsa (II.4.230–23 lab), and thejāraṇa of mercury (III. 2.39–47).

- 13 It is not clear which text is quoted (the verse is about the killing of gold).
- 14 The Kaksāputīquoted remains unidentified.
- 15 The quotations are partly found in Sureśvara's Lohapaddhati, also called Lohasarvasva: Rasakāmadhenu II.1.685 = Lohapaddhati 15cd-16ab; II.1.723-724 = 21-22; 11.1.758-790ab largely agrees with Lohapaddhati 23-48.
- 16 The quotation is absent from the Rājanighanţu, compare Rājanighanţu, miśrakādivarga 24 and 28.
- 17 Anantadeva's Rasacintāmaņi is cited (see Rasakāmadhenu I.4, prose between 239 and 240).
- 18 Devendragiri's work of this title.
- 19 The author of the Rasendracūdāmani.
- 20 An iatrochemical formula is quoted.
- 21 See, for example, I.1.8 (granthantare), 9cd (anyatra), 18 (kyacid).
- 22 See, for example, the comments ad I.3.34-36 and 37-38ab; 4.243; II.2.128.
- 23 See, for example, Rasakāmadhenu I.2.65-73 (from the Rasasāra).
- 24 Ānandakanda, prakīrņaka 102-107.
- 25 Probably the same as somala (see the prose between II.4.3 and 4-5).
- 26 Cūḍāmaṇi does not recognize añjana as a mahārasa (see the glosses between II.3.4 and 5).
- 27 See, for example, Rasakāmadhenu I.6.26-34; II.3.84-85; III.4, prose between 39cd and 40.
- 28 He mentions, for example, that he follows Susruta in his enumeration of poisonous substances of vegetable origin (I.4.9-11); he gives his own series of (mahā)rasas: abhra, vaikrānta, mākṣīka, vimala, adrija, sasyaka, capala, and rasaka (II.3.4), and defends his choices (prose between II.3.4 and 5).
- 29 Examples are the prose between II.3.3 and 4 (rejection of a statement made in the Rasā-rṇava) and between 4 and 5 (rejection of a statement made in the Rasarāja lakşmi).
- 30 E.g., the prose between I. 1.30ab and cd, 37ab and cd, 45 and 46.
- 31 See, for example, the glosses between I.1.23 and 24 (damaruyantra = vidyādharayantra), 46 and 47 (saikatayantra = cakrayantra), 69ab and d (jalakūrma = somānalayantra).
- 32 See, for example, the glosses ad I.1.74 (gāra) and 132 (chāyā), 2.22cd (kokila), 4.219 (cūllikā), 5.1 (sṛṣṭitraya); II.1.31 (laddi) and 47-48 (devadeveśvara, nāgeśa, yama); III.3.107 (haiyaṅgavīna).
- 33 See the comments ad I.7.
- 34 Rasakāmadhenu I.3.12cd-16ab = Rasārņava 16.89cd-92; 3.16cd-22 = Rasārņava 5.2-7; 3.38cd-43 = Rasārnava 5.17-21.
- 35 These verses, which I could not trace in the Rasasāra, enumerate eight plants to be employed in bandhana (brahmadandī, mudgaparnī, rudantī, śankhī, tridandī, triśūlī, vajrī, and vānarī), and eight plants helpful in mārana (kākāhvā, kākamācī, kākatundī, kālikā, kañcukī, karkotī, kaṭutumbī, and kolamañ jarikā).
- 36 Compare Rasasāra 21.
- 37 Compare Rasendracūdāmani 6.
- 38 Identified as Cucumis melo Linn. var. melo and C. pseudo-coloc ynthis Royle = C. trigonus Roxb. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 523 and 526).
- 39 Identified as Euphorbia antiquorum Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 700).
- 40 Compare this list with the related one in the commentary ad Rasa paddhati 85-87.
- 41 An almost identical list is found in the Dharanīdhara samhitā.

- 42 The verse on the symptoms of urograha is not found in Vangasena's description of this disorder; the verses on treatment, however, do occur in Vangasena's treatise.
- 43 The nidāna verses are the same as those found in Vangasena's treatise.
- 44 This series has fourteen instead of thirteen members.
- 45 This series has fourteen members again.
- 46 See Rasakāmadhenu 11.5.60 and III.9.329.

References are to ed. a. The title of the treatise is mentioned in the introductory verses.

- 53 The footnotes of ed. a contain corrections.
- 54 The meaning of the term pāṣāṇa is not elucidated; the mahārasas and uparasas may be meant (compare, for example, Rasaprakāśasudhākara 6.10).
- 55 See on this group of goddesses: N. Gutschow (1996); G. Toffin (1996).
- 56 This gutikā (pill) makes one invisible, cures diseases, turns mercury into gold and copper into silver.
- 57 Six rasas of chapter four (jaganmohanarasa, şanmukharasa, sārvabhaumarasa, navagraharasa, viśvambhararasa, and brahmāstrarasa) are also found in a Ratnākarauşadhayoga (according to the Rasayogasāgara). The remaining seven rasas of chapter four are not found in other rasaśāstra texts (according to the Rasayogasāgara).
- 58 Samśosanarasa (4.118cd-124).
- 59 Şanmukharasa (4.27-33ab).
- 60 Brahmāstrarasa (4.93-105).
- 61 Compare, for example, the accounts of the Rasaratnasamuccaya and Rasārnava.
- 62 The same as the doşa called cāpalya in the Rasaratnasamuccaya (see the footnote to the ed.).
- 63 Also called anivartaka (2.16).
- 64 The doşas called uddinatva, kautilya, anāvarta, samkara, şamdatva and gurutva are not known under these names in other rasaśāstra texts.
- 65 This series of nine sarnskāras is unusual.
- 66 Dīpana is described a second time (3.68-71ab).
- 67 Sāraņa is not described.
- 68 Grāsapradāna is also described at 3.71cd-78ab.

- 69 This use of the term is not found in other treatises. The Rasa jalanidhi (III, 152) describes triloha as an alloy of gold, silver and copper.
- 70 See the bhūmikā to the edition.
- 71 The śyāma and karbura varieties are unusual (compare, for example, Rasasamketakalikā 1.28cd-33).
- 72 A mandala is a period of forty-eight days (see the footnote to the ed.).
- 73 This variety of grahanī is unknown from āyurvedic literature.
- 74 Sindura is used as a synonym of bhasman (see the footnote to the ed.).
- 75 Takrameha is found in the Hārītasamhitā (III.28).
- 76 Gorakṣī is identified as Adansonia digitata Linn. (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nr. 40), a tree that is not indigenous to India.
- 77 See the introductory verses.
- 78 Bhagwan Dash (1986: 15) places the work in the sixteenth century. S.K. Śarmā (1992: 19) assigns it to the fifteenth century.

- 82 The number of verses is 875 in CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 197; ed. b has 934 verses.
- 83 Editions a and b have twelve chapters. CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 196 and Cat. Oxford Nr. 1603 have ten chapters (the Bālatantra seems to be missing; the last chapter describes kālajñāna and the chāyāpuruṣa); Samaratha's commentary on the Rasamañjarī is also divided into ten chapters.
- 84 See, e.g., 7.1-7.
- 85 Compare on the contents: V. Śukla I, 170-171; this author gives the contents of a version in ten chapters (the Bālatantra belongs to chapter nine; chapter ten describes kālajñāna and the chāyāpuruşa) and a pariśiṣṭa chapter with recipes against some diseases (this chapter contains an arka against bahumūtra, i.e., polyuria).

- 104 See JAI 149-151 and R. Jain (1981): 88. The (incomplete) MS of Samaratha's commentary is kept in the Abhaya jain Library in Bīkāner.
- 105 This second series consists of the kañcukas of other treatises; the term kañcuka occurs at Rasamañ jarī 1.28 and 36.
- 106 This long series is unusual.
- 107 Other texts adding karbura to the more usual seven varieties of vaikrānta are the Rasaprakāśasudhākara and Rasendracūdāmani.
- 108 Formulae, not found in the Rasayogasāgara, are, for example: rā jamrgānkarasa (36-40),

- ratnagirirasa (141–144), dvitīya śītabhañjīnasa (52cd–55), śītārirasa (56–58), mahājvarānkuśarasa (65–68), pañcānanarasa (80–81).
- 109 Formulae, absent from the Rasayogasāgara, are makaradhvajarasa (9–12), kāminīmadabhañjanarasa (32–33), kāmeśvararasa (41–44), mṛtasarnjīvanī guṭikā (45–53), and vīryarodhinī gutikā (54–60).
- 110 Compare Rāvana's Kumāratantra.
- 111 Patikā is translated by tukaḍā (a piece, fragment) in the Hindī commentary.
- 112 Translated by phatkarī (alum) in the Hindī commentary.
- 113 Rasamañjarī 1.3 and 12.16. Śālinātha's father is sometimes called Meghanātha (Check-list Nr. 619; STMI 459).
- 114 STMI 459. R. Saraswat (1979, Nr. 958) described a MS dating from A.D. 1578/79.
- 115 This date would be confirmed by the reference in Vaidyarāja's Sukhabodha, if this work dates from A.D. 1567/68, which is not certain.
- 116 A. Rahman (STMI 459) considers Śālinātha to be earlier than Bhāvamiśra, who does not quote the Rasamañjarī. S.K. Śarmā (1992: 19) regards him as belonging to the fifteenth century. P.C. Choudhury (Introduction to the edition of the Vaidyakasāroddhāra, 9) mentions A.D. 1733/34 as the year of completion.
- 117 Edition: Rasamitra (kriyātmaka rasaśāstra; Practical Rasa Shastra) by Tryambakanātha Śarmā, Vārāṇasī 1965. This edition is accompanied by translations into Hindī and English; the translations contain additional material. References are to page numbers of the edition. See on the work S. Ārya (1984): 120.
- 118 The system described by the author differs in some respects from those current in other treatises.
- 119 Twelve yantras are described.
- 120 Eight types of puta are described.
- 121 Some of these formulae are: rasaparpatī, rasasindūra, makaradhvaja, and svarnasindūra.
- 122 These types are: nirgandhā and sagandhā mūrchanā, subdivided each into sāgnikā and niragnikā varieties; the sāgnikā variety again is either antardhūmā or bahirdhūmā.
- 123 Many treatises mention rājāvarta instead of capala.
- 124 Edition: rasāmṛtam, lekhaka vaidya yādavajī trikamajī ācārya, Motīlāl, Banāras 1951; this edition is accompanied by a Hindī commentary by the author. An *English translation by Damodar Joshi has been published in 1998. See on the author: Siddhayogasaṃgraha.
- 125 Compare on the contents: S. Ārya (1984): 116-118; V. Śukla I, 177-178.
- 126 Three naisargikadoşas are mentioned: vişa, vahni, mala; the yaugikadoşas (= kañcukas) are not enumerated.
- 127 The red oxide of mercury.
- 128 Dhātu, upadhātu, mahārasa and uparasa are not distinguished in the Rasamitra.
- 129 This substance, called jangāl or jangār in Hindī, is described in the Rasaprakāśasudhākara (1.106–107ab).
- 130 The carbonate of lead, white lead ore, PbCO3.

- 9 The recipe called sudhāpippalīyoga is attributed to Ātreyasūri.
- 10 A mantra is said to derive from Bhāluki.
- 11 Candraśikhara (= Śiva) is credited with the formula of muktārā jamīgānkarasa.
- 12 The ātankāntakarasa is ascribed to Nāgārjuna.
- 13 Visnu is credited with the nava ivaraharī vatikā.
- 14 See STMI 438.
- 15 See CBORI XVI, I, Nr. 224.
- 16 Anuvāsana is mentioned by Mahādeva in his commentary ad 14.

- 17 Explained as a type of brass (pittalajātibheda) in the commentary. Different from varta (see next note).
- 18 Explained as pañcarasa by the commentator; pañcarasa is the same as vartaloha, also called pañcaloha (see the commentary ad 37).
- 19 It is remarkable that a relatively late text like the Rasapaddhati does not describe zinc.
- 20 Compare Rasa jalanidhi III, 227-228.
- 21 This type, originating from mountains, is found in numerous treatises.
- 22 Originating from uṣā, i.e., a saline earth. Compare Rasa jalanidhi II, 104: ūṣaraka, a white caustic substance, identified as carbonate of potash (sora).
- 23 See D. Joshi (1991a): 76. Compare Rasa jalanidhi II, 115-116.
- 24 Mākṣika with red tints is called vimala (Rasajalanidhi II, 77).
- 25 See D. Joshi (1991a): 73. Compare Rasa jalanidhi II, 77-78.
- 26 The same three varieties are found in the Rasārṇava. Some treatises mention a fourth type, black in colour (see Rasajalanidhi II, 130–131).
- 27 Compare Rasa jalanidhi II, 131: the white variety resembles khaṭī (chalk).
- 28 Some treatises, for example the Rasaratnasamuccaya, distinguish a third variety, called khandākhyā.
- 29 Compare Arthaśāstra 2.11.41; Rasajalanidhi III, 168.
- 30 A site in Mahārāstra (see N.N. Bhattacharyya, 1991: 277-278).
- 31 Called Vairagara in the commentary; see N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991: 301) on Vairagara.
- 32 Compare Arthaśāstra 2.11.37-38.
- 33 See N.N. Bhattacharyya (1991): 88.
- 34 See Rasayogasāgara, akārādi 289 and 441. Many rasayogas of the Rasapaddhati are absent from the Rasayogasāgara.
- 35 Called tavă in the vernacular according to the commentary. Hindī tavă designates a round plate, made of metal, on which bread is baked.
- 36 A synonym of jambīra.
- 37 A synonym of arka and jambīra (see M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 301 and 419).
- 38 Vānīra is a synonym of vetasa; nīravānīra may therefore be the same as jalavetasa, identified as Salix caprea Linn. and S. tetrasperma Roxb. (M. Abdul Kareem, 1997, Nrs. 1426 and 1427).
- 39 Bodleian c.308(5); see D. Wujastyk (1990): 100.
- 40 Dates assigned to the Rasapaddhati are: thirteenth century (S.K. Śarmā, 1992: 18), fourteenth century (C. Dwarkanath, 1991: 43), fifteenth century (S. Ārya, 1984: 107; AVI 462; Bhagwan Dash, 1986: 15; Siddhinandana Miśra's prākkathan to ed. b), first quarter of the seventeenth century (P.K. Gode, 1936d), and seventeenth century (ABI 414-415). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 462) regards the author of the Rasapaddhati as identical with Bindunātha or Bindubhaṭṭa, who wrote the Bindusāra or Bindusangraha in the ninth or tenth century; G. Hāldār claims that Bindu was a haṭhayogin and the author of the Bandhutrayavidhāna (see CC I, 367: an anonymous treatise on yoga).
- 41 The Rasārṇava is quoted ad Rasapaddhati 46-47. The Rasendracūdāmaṇi (5.59 and 103) is quoted ad Rasapaddhati 9 and 16; the sādhāraṇarasas, mentioned in the comments ad 58, agree with those of the Rasendracūdāmaṇi.
- 42 An almost identical list, from an unknown source, is found in the Rasakāmadhenu (I.3. 7cd-12).
- 43 The spinel or balas ruby.

- 44 See Yādavaśarman's Nivedanam to ed. a; Yādavaśarman based his opinion on the colophon of the Bīkāner MS. Compare S. Ārya (1984: 107) and AVI 462.
- 45 The kṣmāśigru, mentioned by Bindu (verse 10), is interpreted by Mahādeva as an item peculiar to Mahārāṣṭra. Mahādeva's commentary contains a few vernacular names of plants (ad 157 and 165) which may also be of Marāthī origin.
- 46 CC 1, 495; III, 106. AVI 469. V. Śukla I, 169–170. An anonymous Rasapradīpa, accompanied by a Hindī ţīkā, is recorded by R. Mitra (Notices I, Nr. 148: a collection of prescriptions; compare STMI 179: by Sarasvatī?).
 - Edition: rasapradīpaḥ (anekagranthasanngrhītaḥ), verīgrāmanivāsiśivasahāyaputraravidattaśāstrikrta bhāṣāṭikāsahitaḥ, Laksmīvenkaṭeśvar Steam Press, Bombay 1935.
- 47 The majority are also found in other works; compare the Rasayogasāgara.
- 48 Zinc is not mentioned.
- 49 The same series of seven upadhātus is found in the Śārngadharasannhitā (II.11.53cd-54ab).

- 57 A parpatī is a preparation of mercury and sulphur, made by melting a kajjalī on a slow fire and pressing it into thin flakes (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 328).
- 58 Its essence is identical with copper (tamrarupa; 5.77).
- 59 The ghanasāraka variety is omitted in many treatises.
- 60 S.K. Śarmā (1992: 211) remarks that karpūrašilājatu is identified as potassium nitrate, called kalmī sorā in Hindī

- 61 Compare Rasajalanidhi II, 118-119. Dardura is laminated, kāravellaka non-laminated (P.C. Rāv. 1956: 171).
- 62 The essence of rasaka is said to resemble lead (sīsopama; 5.115); it consists of zinc.
- 63 Its essence has the colour of the indragopa (5.130).
- 64 The dala variety is the same as the pattra type, which occurs in the form of bright and thin laminae; the asma variety is the pinda type, which occurs in dull masses and contains more impurities (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 119).
- 65 The pītikā variety may be the same as the type called phaṭakī, which is heavy, brilliant and yellowish (pīta); the phullikā variety is light, brilliant and white (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 119). See on saurāṣṭrī = tuvarī = kāṅkṣī = sphaṭikā (alum, a double sulphate of potassium and aluminium) in general and on its sources: D. Joshi (1991a): 118-119.
- 66 The raktā variety is usually called kanavīrikā.
- 67 See on these kinds of añjana D. Joshi (1991a: 121-122), who argues that all kinds consist of galena (PbS, lead sulphide), which is beneficial to the eyes, whereas stibnite, an antimony compound, is toxic; he mentions that others regard sauvīra and sroto'ñjana as antimony sulphide (Sb₂S₃), rasāñjana as the yellow oxide of mercury, puṣpāñjana as zinc oxide, and nīlāñjana as lead sulphide.
- 68 Gandhakataila is also described (40cd-46ab).
- 69 See on karikustha: D. Joshi (1991a): 122-123.
- 70 The saikata variety is the same as dhātu-, pāṃśu-, or vālukākāsīsa, which is granular and greenish; the puṣpa variety is yellowish (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 117).
- 71 The păşăna type is hard and copper-coloured, the svarna type is red, soft and smooth (see Rasa jalanidhi II, 146).
- 72 The five defects of gems are called gharşa, bindu, rekhā, trāsa and pānīyakṛtā sagarbhatā (28)
- 73 Types are not distinguished.
- 74 Synonyms of nīla mentioned are indranīla, vārinīlaka and śakranīla.

- 90 Some consider the jalayantra to be identical with what is usually called thek acchapayantra (see the Hindī commentary ofed. d; Satyaprakāś, 1960: 441). Yaśodhara does not mention the kacchapayantra in his list of yantras of chapter ten. Compare on the jalayantra: Pāradasamhitā 6.95-109.

- 91 A shallow iron cup according to the Hindī commentary of ed. d.
- 92 Vahnimṛtsnā is described in several texts; it is a heatresistant mixture made of khaţikā (chalk), salt and mandūra powder in equal parts, pasted with buffalo milk; this preparation is recommended for sealing the joints of a mūsā (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 329).
- 93 Defined, for example, in the Rasaratnasamuccaya (8.40) and Rasendracūdāmani (4.43).
- 94 Compare on these types of vedha: Rasa jalanidhi I, 248-249.
- 95 The karbura variety is also mentioned in the Rasamañ jarī and Rasendracūdāmani.
- 96 See P. Rav (1956): 122.
- 97 The term sādhāranarasa is absent from the Rasaprakiisasudhākara.
- 98 Agnijāra is described as the desiccated jarāyu of an agninakra living in the ocean. Agnijāra is ambergris (see J. André and J. Filliozat, 1986: 370, n.211).
- 99 Mṛddāraśṛṅgaka, a substance of yellow colour, is found near the Arbuda mountain in Guiarāt (6.89).

- 104 P.V. Sharma (AVI 459) supposes that the Sod halanighantu was one of Yasodhara's sources. The list of rasausadhis is related to that found in chapter seven of the Rasendracūdāmani.
- 105 The cipiṭayantra is described in the Rasoddhāratantra according to the Hindī commentary of ed. b.
- 106 See its description in chapter one (1.128-140ab).
- 107 Described in the Pāradasamhitā (6.133–136; quoted from the Rasapaddhati).
- 108 See D. Joshi (1986): 258.
- 109 Regarded as identical with copacīnī in the Hindī commentary of ed. d.

- 8 A synonym of mayūratuttha.
- 9 Dhānyābhraka is made in the following way: powdered mica, mixed with śāli rice (dhānya), is tied in a piece of cloth; this bundle is to be kept immersed in kānjika for three days; on rubbing and pressing the bundle in the liquid, very minute particles of mica will come out and deposit themselves at the bottom of the vessel holding the kānjika; the mica in this form is called dhānyābhraka (see Rasa jalanidhi II, 9).
- 10 Bhāvanā is a procedure in which powdered drugs are ground or pasted with liquids to dryness (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 328).
- II The literal meaning of this term is: burnt diamond, but D. Joshi (1991a: 176) remarks that it is one of the names of vaikrānta.

- 13 The Rasendrakhanda has twenty chapters in the Wellcome MS. The titles of chapters one to sixteen are: (1) sarvarogasādhyāsādhyasādhāraṇalakṣaṇa; (2) atisāracikitsā; (3) trayoda-śasaṇnipātacikitsā; (4) dehaśodhanavamanavirekavastinasyarasapathyāpathyavidhi; (5) rājarogacikitsā; (6) kāsaśvāsahidhmānivāraṇa; (7) pāṇduśobhananivāraṇa; (8) vātavyādhinivāraṇa; (9) aśmarīmūtrakṛcchranidānanivāraṇa; (10) sarvakuṣṭhanidānanivāraṇa; (11) visarpinivāraṇa; (12) mehacikitsā; (13) udarādiśūlacikitsā; (14) bhagandarādigaṇḍalūtādinivāraṇa; (15) arśonivāraṇa; (16) grahaṇīcikitsā (see D. Wujastyk, 1984a: 72).
- 14 Many of the āyurvedic recipes are found in earlier works; a few examples are: cāngerīghṛta (grahaṇī 122–125 = Vṛnda's Siddhayoga 4.27cd–29), kalyāṇaguḍa (grahaṇī 117–121 = Siddhayoga 4.38–42), navāyasalauha (pāṇduroga 27.28 = Ca.Ci.16.70–71).
- 15 Many of these verses are from Ca.Sū.9 and 10, but they begin here with a mangala addressed to Śiva and his Śakti.

- 37 The Mantrakhanda is called Mantrakhanda Nāgārjuna (colophons of chapters four and eight) and (Nāgārjuna's) Kakṣapuṭa (colophons of chapters one to three and seven) in Cat. Berlin Nr. 1745. The introductory verse of CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 209 calls the treatise Śrināgārjunī vidyā. Siddhakhanda, Siddhikhanda, Mantrasāra and Mantrasāroddhāra are alternative titles of the Mantrakhanda (see CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 214; J. Filliozat, Liste Nr. 133; the three Wellcome MSS in D. Wujastyk, 1984a: 82). Mantrasāra is a typically Tantric colophon (see T. Goudriaan and S. Gupta, 1981: 24).

- 51 See on this subject T. Goudriaan (1978).
- 52 See D. Wujastyk (1984a): 75. D. Wujastyk regards the Mantrakhanda as an epitome of the Kaksaputa, amounting to about one third of its length (this estimate is based on the relative length of two Wellcome MSS); some MSS of the Mantrakhanda, however, contain a text that is much longer than the Kakṣapuṭa (see Tantrika Sāhitya 549). Compare the Kakṣapuṭa. Compare on the relationship between Mantrakhanda and Kakṣapuṭa. D.G. White (1996): 161.

- 79 See E. Haas (1876a): 634. The Ma'din al-Shifā'-i-Sikandar-Shāhī, also called Tibb-i-Sikandarī, was composed in A.D. 1512 by Miyān Bhūwah, son of Khawās Khān, who dedicated his work to Sultan Sikandar Lodī (A.D. 1489–1517; see on him: Hameed-ud-Din, 1980a: 142–147). This medical treatise, written in Persian, was based on several Sanskrit works (since the author held Greek medicine to be unsuitable to the constitutions of Indians). Suśruta, Caraka, Jāmīkaran (probably Jatūkarna), Bhoja, Bheḍa, Vāgbhaṭa, Rasaratnākara, Śārngadhara, Vangasena, Cintāmani, Mādhavanidāna, Cakradatta, and Gayadatta are mentioned in the introduction; the author refers in the body of his work to a Yogamuktāvalī and a treatise called Rasmotajarbati. Absent are Rasendracūḍāmaṇi 10.21cd-28, 34-36, 55-60, 69cd-70ab, 142-147. Verses added are 2.21, 26, 37-44, 56-63, 65-68, 73-74, 83, 88, 92c-f, 96-97, 110-111, 123, 124ab, 126-127, 135-141, 146, 154-156.

The order in which the mahārasas are described differs from their arrangement in the Rasendracūdāmaņi. In addition, rājāvarta is not regarded as a mahārasa in the Rasaratnasamuccaya; it is replaced by capala (2.135–141; 2.135–137ab = Rasārṇava 7.23–24 and 27cd).

Rasaratnasamuccaya 3.14–27ab = Rasendracūḍāmaṇi 11.2–14; 28.–42 = 15–31; 46–47ab = 85; 48–51 = 86–89; 52–56 = 78–80; 58–61 = 81–84; 62–68 = 49–53; 70–74 = 32–35; 80–83 = 36–39; 84–90 = 41–48; 91–94 = 54–57; 96 = 58; 98–108 = 59–68; 113–118 = 69–74ab; 121–125 = 74cd–77; 126–130ab = 90–94ab; 133–140 = 94cd–101; 141–152 = 102cd–110; 155–158 = 111–114. Absent are Rasendracūḍāmaṇi 11.40 and 102ab. Verses added are 3.2–13, 27cd, 43–45, 47cd, 57, 69, 75–79, 95, 97, 109–112, 119–120, 130cd–132, 153–154. The order differs again from that in the Rasendracūḍāmaṇi. Capala has been added to the list of sādhāraṇarasas (3.126 = 11.90), although it is described as one of the mahārasas in chapter two.

Rasaratnasamuccaya 4.6–14 = Rasendracūḍāmaṇi 12.1–8; 16–34 = 9–28ab; 35–68 = 29–63ab; 83 = 66. Absent are Rasendracūḍāmaṇi 12.28cd, 63cd–65 and 67–68. Verses added are 4.1–5, 15, 69–82, 84. Rasaratnasamuccaya 4.75–81 deals with rājāvarta, regarded as a mahārasa in the Rasendracūḍāmaṇi (4.75–77 = Rasendracūḍāmaṇi 10.55–57; 79 = 58; 78 and 80–81 do not occur in the Rasendracūḍāmaṇi, Rasendracūḍāmaṇi 10.59–60 is absent from the Rasaratnasamuccaya).

Rasaratnasamuccaya 5.1–2 = Rasendracūḍāmaṇi 14.1–2; 4–9 = 3–8; 12–15 = 13–17; 19 = 23; 21–26 = 26–31; 32–36 = 32–37ab; 41–44 = 39–42; 48–51 = 44–48ab; 58–60 = 66cd–68; 61 = 70; 67–72 = 77–79; 74–75 = 80–81; 77–80 = 82–85; 81 = 87; 82 = 86; 95–96 = 93–94; 100–101 = 95–96; 104–108 = 97–101ab; 110–113 = 101–105ab; 118–125 = 105cd–113; 131 = 114; 153–157 = 131–136; 159 = 137; 163–179 = 140–154; 184–200 = 155–170; 202–210 = 171–179; 212–231 = 180–198; 232–237 = 223cd–229. Rasaratnasamuccaya 9.14-20 = Rasārṇava 4.8-14; 27-30 = 16-19; 31-32 = 28-29.
- 35 Rasaratnasamuccaya 10.1-65 = Rasendracūḍāmaņi 5.96-163; 10.82-84 = 11-13; 85-86 = 16cd-18ab; 87-97 = 21-31.
- 36 Rasaratnasamuccaya 11.1-3 = Rasārṇava 10.32-34; 11.53-59 is from the Rasaratnākara (see Rasakāmadhenu I.3.1-7ab).
- 37 According to P.V Sharma (AVI 188-189; 1972a: 73-74).
- 38 Erroneously catalogued as a MS of the Rasaratnasamuccaya.
- 39 D.Ch. Bhattacharyya's implausible assertion (1947a: 122) that Rasavāgbhaṭa is quoted in Candrata's Yogaratnasamuccaya is not confirmed by other scholars.
- 40 The number of Rasasiddhas is often twenty-seven, but differs in some rasaśāstra texts.
- 41 See on the lists of Rasasiddhas: D.G. White (1996): 81-86.
- 42 Ādima is either Śiva (Ādideva, Ādinātha, Śaṃkara), who first expounded the rasaśāstra, or it is the name of some rasācārya (S. Ārya, 1984: 27-29; Vrddhatrayī 302). An Ādimasiddhānta is recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasticipatram (Nr. 975; compare NCC II, 86). Ādinātha is one of the Mahāsiddhas in Svātmārāma's Haṭhayogapradīpikā, a work probably dating from the fifteenth century according to C. Bouy (1994: 85) (1.5; identified as Śiva in Brahmānanda's commentary); he is the first guru of the Nātha lineage (see G.W. Briggs, 1973); the Ānandakanda (I.3.47) mentions him as one of the Nāthas. See on Ādinātha: C. Bouy (1994): 11-12; D.G. White (1996; see index). A Rasasiddha Ādima is mentioned in the Pāradasaṃhitā (1.96) and Rasa jalanidhi (III, 389-390); the Rasajalanidhi (III, 65) describes him as a pupil of Śukrācārya (see also V, Intr. XVI-XVIII).
- 43 Bhāskara is mentioned as a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasamhitā (1.96), Rasa jalanidhi (III, 389-390), Rasataranginī (1.29-32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses). A Bhāskarasiddhānta is recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 981) as a rasāyanasiddhānta. See also on Bhāskara: commentators on the Susrutasamhitā.
- 44 Brahmā is a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasamhitā (1.98), Rasajalanidhi (III, 389-390), Rasataranginī (1.29-32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses). See on the presence of Brahmā in the list: D.G. White (1996): 124. The Kavīndrācāryasticipatram records a Brahmasiddhānta (Nr. 994) as a work on rasāyana.
- 45 See: Candrasenasiddhānta and Rasacandrodaya.

- 46 G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 307) identifies the Rasasiddha Gomukha with a minister Gomukha of Naravāhana, king of the Vatsas, who lived somewhat later than the sixth century B.C. A Gomukhasiddhānta is recorded in the Kavindrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 986; compare NCC II, 86 and Vrddhatrayī 307). Gomukha is also mentioned as a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasanhitā (1.97) and Rasajalanidhi (III, 389-390).
- 47 Govinda is mentioned as a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasamhitā (1.98), Rasajalanidhi (III, 389-390), Rasataranginī (1.29-32), and Rasendrasamhhava (introductory verses). This Rasasiddha Govinda is either the author of the Rasahrdaya or the author of the Rasasāra. See Vṛddhatrayī 307-311. A Govindasiddhānta, dealing with rasāyana, is recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 995; compare NCC VI, 208 and Vṛddhatrayī 307). A Rasagovinda by Govinda is also mentioned by some authors (see Rasagovinda).
- 48 A Rasasiddha called Hari is also mentioned in the Pāradasamhitā (1.98) and Rasa jalanidhi (III, 389–390). Compare: Harīšvara.
- 49 A Rasasiddha called Indrada is also mentioned in the Pāradasannhitā (1.97) and Rasa-jalanidhi (III, 389-390). The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram mentions the rasāyanaprakarana of an Indradagrantha (Nr. 1053). Indradhūma is the name of a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasannhitā (1.104) and Rasaratnasamuccaya (6.52); a Rasasiddha called Indradyumna is known to the Rasaratnākara (III.1.66-70).
- 50 Kambali is also mentioned as a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasanhitā (1.97) and Rasajalanidhi (III, 389-390). He is sometimes regarded as one of the eighty-four Siddhas and as belonging to the lineage of Kanhapā (V. Pāṇdey and M. Uniyāl, 1992: 7). See on Siddhas called Kambala, Kambhala, Kānhā and Kāṇhapa: A. Bareau (1964): 174, 175; L. Chimpa and A. Chattopadhyaya (1970): 152, 408, 412-413; A. Grünwedel (1916): 163-165, 175-177; A. Hermann-Pfandt (1992): 198-202; J.B. Robinson (1979); D.G. White (1996): 124. Ed. i reads Kalambi and mentions Kāmbali and Kapila as variants.
- 51 See: Kāpālikatantra.
- 52 See: Kāpālīsiddhānta.
- 53 Khaṇḍa also figures as a Rasasiddha in the list of Rasaratnasamuccaya 6.51–55, in the Pāradasaṇḥitā (1.98), Rasa jalanidhi (III, 389–390), and Rasaratnākara (III.1.66–70); he is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭhayogapradī pikā (1.8). A Khaṇḍasiddhānta is recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (NCC V, 179; Vṛddhatrayī 307). Khaṇḍin (v.l. Khaṇḍa) is a Rasasiddha in Caturbhu ja's commentary on the Rasahrdaya (1.7).
- 54 See: Lampatatantra. See on an ācārya called Lambaka: D. George (1991): 13-14.
- 55 I.e, Rāvaṇa. Laṅkeśa is also one of the Rasasiddhas in the Pāradasaṃhitā (1.96), Rasa-jalanidhi (III, 389-390), Rasataraṅgiṇī (1.29-32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses); Laṅkā is a Rasasiddha in the second list of the Rasaratnasamuccaya (6.53); his name is replaced by Loka in the Rasaratnākara (III.1.66-70). A Laṅkeśasiddhānta is recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 977). Noteworthy is the fact that Rāvaṇa's daughters are the wives of the eighteen Tamil Cittars in Kampan's Irāmāvatāram (see D.G. White, 1996: 58, 125).
- 56 See: authorities mentioned by Vāgbhaṭa.
- 57 Matta is also a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasaṇhitā (1.96), Rasajalanidhi (III, 389-390), Rasatarangiṇī (1.29-32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses). A Mattamāndavyasiddhānta is recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 980).
- 58 Nāgabodhi is also a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasanhitā (1.98), Rasajalanidhi (III, 389-390), Rasataranginī (1.29-32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses). He is regarded as a pupil of Nāgārjuna (A. Bareau, 1964: 173; L. Chimpa and A. Chattopadhyaya, 1970: 127,

- 152; A. Grünwedel, 1916: 214–215; V. Pāṇḍey and M. Uniyāl, 1992: 7; D. Seyfort Ruegg, 1982: 512). His name is on some of the lists of eighty-four Siddhas (see H.W. Schumann, 1986: 306–307; Sempa Dorje, 1998: 188–180 and 314; D.K. Snellgrove, 1957: 297). See on Nāgabodhi, his biography, and his works: H. von Glasenapp (1940): 51–53; J.B. Robinson (1979): 233–235 and 305. Nāgabodhi's name is replaced by Nāgabuddhi in the second list of the Rasaratnasamuccaya (6.52) and in the Rasaratnākara (III. 1.66–70); Nāgabuddhi also figures in the Rasandramangala. Nāgadeva is a Rasasiddha in Caturbhuja's commentary on the Rasahrdaya (1.7). A Nāgabodhīsiddhānta is recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 991; compare NCC X, 7 and Vṛddhatrayī314). The formula ofkanakasundararasa is ascribed to Nāgabodhi (Rasaratnasamuccaya 15.50–61; Rasayogasāgara, kakārādi 17).
- 59 See: Nāgārjuna.
- 60 A Naravāhanasiddhānta is recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 985). Compare: Rasānandakautuka.
- 61 Ratnakośa is also one of the Rasasiddhas in the Pāradasamhitā (1.97), Rasajalanidhi (III, 389–390), Rasataranginī (1.29–32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 338) is of the opinion that Ratnakośa is an error for Ratnaghoṣa; the latter is a Rasasiddha in the second list of the Rasaratnasamuccaya (6.51), in the Pāradasamhitā (1.103), and in the Rasaratnākara (III.1.66–70). Ratnaghoṣa also figures in the Rasendramangala. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 338) refers to him as the author of a lost Ratnaghoṣasiddhānta. The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram mentions a Ratnakośa in its list of works on rasāyana.
- 62 Śambhu is also mentioned in the second list of the Rasaratnasamuccaya (6.53), and in the Pāradasamhitā (1.97), Rasajalanidhi (I, 280; III, 389–390; V, Intr. XXVI-XXVIII), Rasaratnākara (III.1.66–70), Rasataranginī (1.29–32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses). The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram records a Śambhusiddhānta (Nr. 984) as a work on rasāyana. Compare the names of Brahmā and Hari as Rasasiddhas.
- 63 Sāttvika is also a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasanhitā (1.97) and Rasa jalanidhi (III, 389–390). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 344) regards Sāttvika as one of Viṣnu's names. Sāttvika is replaced by Tāntrika in the second list of the Rasaratnasamuccaya (6.53), and by Tāttvika in the Rasaratnākara (III.1.66–70). The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram records a work on rasāyana, called Tāttvikasiddhānta (Nr. 999).
- 64 Surānanda is also a Rasasiddha in Caturbhuja's commentary on the Rasahrdaya (1.7), the Pāradasarnhitā (1.98), Rasa jalanidhi (III, 389–390), Rasaratnākara (III.1.66–70), and the second list of the Rasaratnasamuccaya (6.51). Surānanda is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭhayogapradī pikā (1.6). The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram records a Surānandasiddhānta (Nr. 990) as a work on rasāyana.
- 65 The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram mentions a Surasenasiddhānta (Nr. 982) as a work on rasāyana. See: Rasendrasuraprabhāva.
- 66 Viśārada is also a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasamhitā (1.96), Rasataranginī (1.29-32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses); his name is Śārada in the Rasaratnākara (III.1. 66-70) and the second list of the Rasaratnasamuccaya (6.53). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 341) supposes him to be the author of the Viśāradasiddhānta; this work is recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 978).
- 67 See: Various ancient authorities.
- 68 Yaśodhana is also one of the Rasasiddhas in the Pāradasannhitā (1.98), the second list of the Rasaratnasamuccaya (6.51), the Rasataranginī (1.29-32), and the Rasendrasambhava

- (introductory verses). His name is Yaśodhara in the Rasa jalanidhi (III, 389–390) and the Rasaratnākara (III. 1.66–70). A Yaśodhanasiddhānta is recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 992; compare Vrddhatrayī 334).
- 69 The list is incomplete; 'others' are mentioned at the end.
- 70 Bhairava is a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasaṃhitā (1.99), Rasatarangiṇī (1.29–32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses). He is a Mahāsiddha in the Haṭhayogapradīpikā (1.6). Compare: Rasabhairava.
- 71 See: Various ancient authorities.
- 72 Harīśvara is one of the Rasasiddhas in the Pāradasaṃnhitā (1.100). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 350) regards him as a king of Trigarta (= Jālandhara), who lived in the second or third century A.D. Compare Hari, who is one of the Rasasiddhas.
- 73 See: Kākacaņdīśvarakalpatantra.
- 74 Mahādeva is a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasannhitā (1.100).
- 75 Eds. e, h, i and k have Maithilāhvaya, ed. d. has Maryalāhvaya. Maithilāhvaya follows upon Bhāluki and is regarded as an epithet of the latter by G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 325). The majority of the editors of the Rasaratnasamuccayaconsider Maithilāhvaya as the name of an author who is distinct from Bhāluki.
- 76 See: Manthānabhairava.
- 77 Nandin is a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasaṃhitā (1.99), Rasajalanidhi (I, 265 and 271; II, 147), Rasatarangiṇī (1.29–32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses). See on Nandin commentators on the Suśrutasaṃhitā.
- 78 Narendra is also a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasanhitā (1.100), Rasataranginī (1.29-32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses). Narendra is sometimes regarded as an epithet of the second Vāsudeva mentioned in the list (Vrddhatrayī 341).
- 79 Rasānkuśa is also a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasanhitā (1.99). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 338) reads Rasānkuśabhairava and regards him as a Rasasiddha who wrote a work called Rasānkuśa, recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 961). Compare: Mahārasānkuśa.
- 80 Rasendratilaka is also mentioned as a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasannhitā (1.101). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 340) regards him as the author of a work on rasāyana called Rasendratilaka, recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 962). The word Yogin, which follows upon Rasendratilaka in the Rasaratnasannuccaya, may be his epithet; Rasendratilaka Yogin is supposed to be the author of the Rasasāratilaka.
- 81 Rsiḥśringa is by some (eds. e and i) regarded as identical with Rsyaśringa. The Pāradasaṇihitā (1.101) reads Rsyaśringa instead of Rsiḥśringa; editions d and h read Rsi and Śringa. Rsiḥśringa is called Kriyātantrasamuccayin, which probably means that he wrote the Kriyātantrasamuccaya; ed. h considers Śringa as the author of the Kriyātantrasamuccayin, which makes Vāsudeva its author. G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 303-305) refers to Rsyaśringa as the author of a rasagrantha called Rsyaśringatantra (see Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram Nr. 972: Rsiśringatantra).
- 82 Svacchandabhairava is also one of the Rasasiddhas in the Pāradasanhitā (1.99), Rasataranginī (1.29–32), and Rasendrasambhava (introductory verses). Eleven different formulae of a svacchandabhairavarasa are quoted in the Rasayogasāgara (śakārādi 584–594). A work called Svacchandabhairava is ascribed to Balabhadra.
- 83 Vāsudeva is also a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasamhitā (1.101). Vāsudeva is mentioned twice in the list of the Rasaratnasamuccaya, which may be the reason that edition d and the Pāradasamhitā (1.100) read Ratnākara instead of the second Vāsudeva; the commentator of edition e, which has Vāsudeva, prefers the reading Ratnākara. G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 341) distinguishes two Vāsudevas; the first Vāsudeva is identified as the son of Kṣemāditya; he was the author of the Vāsudevatantra and Rasasarvasva, and is placed in the thirteenth century; the second Vāsudeva, called king (narendra) in the Rasaratnasamuccaya, is regarded as a grandson of Kaniṣka and the author of the Vāsudevasaṇhitā. The Vāsudevatantra and Vāsudevasaṇhitā are recorded in the Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram (Nr. 948: Vāsudevasaṇhitā and Nr. 971: Vāsudevatantra). Compare Rasasarveśvara by Vāsudeva.

- 84 Yogin is an epithet of Rasendratilaka according to edition e; he is a distinct authority in editions h, i, k, and probably as well in Caturbhuja's commentary on the Rasahṛdaya (1. 7).
- 85 The Rasaratnākara has a list of twenty-eight names; Hara is added.
- 86 Āgama is also a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasaṃhitā (1.104); his name is replaced by that of Vādava in the Rasaratnākara.
- 87 Bali is also a Rasasiddha in the Pāradasamhitā (1.104).
- 88 Also mentioned in the Pāradasannhitā (1.104). Bāna is the name of a mighty Asura, known from the Mahābhārata and several Purānas (see Vettam Mani). The Kavīndrācāryasūcipatram mentions a work on rasāyana, called Bānāsurasiddhānta (Nr. 1000; compare NCC XIII, 254).

- 200 The author's father is sometimes called Sanghagupta (Cat. IO Nr. 2724; ed. k), which may be due to a confusion with Nityanātha, the author of the Rasaratnākara, who is occasionally referred to as the son of Śańkhagupta or Sangagupta (P. Cordier, 1896: 8). The Rasaratnasamuccaya is in some of the MSS attributed to Aśvinīkumāra (J. Jolly, 1901: 4, C.G. Kashikar 4; A.B. Keith, 1973: 512; M. Winternitz III, 553), Nityanātha (CC I, 496; P. Cordier, 1896: 8; A. Roşu, 1989: XCIX), and Somadeva (P. Cordier, 1901d: 149; A. Roşu, 1989: XCIX).
- 201 The colophons of many editions call the author Vagbhata.
- 202 S. Ārya (1984: 76-77) gives a list of a number of authors accepting or rejecting this identity. See also Atrideva (1978): 208; N. Kumār and B. Pāndey (1982). 203 See Jaggi IV, 135; P. Ray (1956): 165.
- 204 G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 299-300) was even convinced that the original version of the Rasaratnasamuccaya belongs to the third century.
- 205 P. Cordier (1901d): 149-150.
- 206 See his Pratyakşaśārīra I, 54-55. Gaņanāthasena noticed the borrowings from Rasendracüdāmaņi and Rasahrdaya.
- 207 AVI 459-461. P.V. Sharma argues that the Rasaratnasamuccaya may date from the middle of the thirteenth century, because one of the formulae (16.120-126: vaiśvānarapoṭalīrasa) is ascribed to Singhana, one of the Yadava kings of Devagiri (first half thirteenth century); this formula, however, is attributed to a king of Simhala in ed. d, and a king of Simhala is also referred to at 16.137; a Kālayavana, mentioned in another formula (26.38), is identified by P.V. Sharma as a Muslim fakīr.
- 208 S. Ārya (1984): 76-79. This author adduces that the plant names hiyāvalī and gopālakarkațī, found in the Rasaratnasamuccaya, are absent from the Astangahrdayasamhitā

- and Aṣṭāṅgasaṃgraha; gopālakarkaṭī is a plant mentioned by Sodhala (Gadanigraha, kāya 29.61), hiyāvalī is a name occurring in Dalhaṇa's commentary on the Suśrutasaṃhitā (see Bāpālāl Vaidya, 1982: 222).
- Dates assigned to the Rasaratnasamuccaya are: eleventh or twelfth century (Bhudeb Mookerjee, Rasajalanidhi V, Intr. XXXVI-XXXVII: the author is the Vāgbhaṭa who is mentioned in Kalhaṇa's Rājataraṅgiṇī, who lived during the reign of king Jayasiṇṇha, A.D. 1199-1211), twelfth century (K.R. Srikanta Murthy, Intr. to his translation of the Aṣṭāṇgaḥṛdayasaṃḥitā, XVII), thirteenth century (ABI 411-412; Atrideva, 1961: 110; AVI 459-461; C. Dwarkanath, 1991: 43; Gaṇaṇātha Sena, 1924; 54-55; Satyaprakāś, 1960: 464; V. Śulka I, 178), about A.D. 1300 (J. Filliozat in L. Renou et J. Filliozat, 1953: 169), thirteenth to fourteenth century (D.G. White, 1996: 167), fourteenth century (S.K. Śarmā, 1992: 18), thirteenth to fifteenth century (S. Ārya, 1984: 67), and the period 1300-1550 (P. Rāy, 1956: 158; said to be coeval with the Rasendracintāmaṇi). G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 299-300) regards the Rasaratnasamuccaya as the revised version of an earlier work; the revision is in his view due to Somadeva, the author of the Rasendracūdāmani, who lived in the thirteenth century.
- 210 This plant, called mahābharī (18.19), is described for the first time in the Bhāvaprakāśanighantu (harītakyādi 105). The mahābherī (30.64) may be the same plant as the mahābharī

Chapter 10 Rasārnava and Rasārnavakalpa

- 1 CC I, 497; II, 116; III, 106. Check-list Nr. 650. STMI 456. R.G. Bhandarkar (1893), Nr. 242. Cat. Madras Nr. 13209: the introductory verses differ, the titles of the chapters, their order, and the verses quoted agree with the Rasārņava. Cat. Mysore XIII, Nr. 42382. CBORI XVI, 1, Nr. 225. J. Filliozat, Liste Nrs. 141–142. Editions:
 - a Rasārņava, edited by Praphulla Candra Rāy and Hariś Candra Kaviratna, Bibliotheca Indica, New Series, No. 174, Calcutta 1910 [BL. 14002.a (vol.174); IO.Bibl.Ind.174]; reprinted, Bibliotheca Indica Series, Work No. 175, Calcutta 1985; this edition is based on five MSS (the Madras, Mysore and Poona MSS, one from the Raghunātha Temple Library, Kaśmīr, and one from the Bīkāner collection); variants are given in footnotes.
 - b rasārṇavain nāma rasatantram, pārvatīparameśvarasamvādātmakam, sāhityāyurvedācāryavyākaraṇatīrtha-darśanaśāstrinā pandita tārādatta pantena bhāgīrathyā tippaṇyā vibhūṣitaṇi sampāditañ ca, Haridās Saṃskṛt Granthamālā 88, Caukhambā Saṃskṛt Series Office, Banāras 1939; the text is that of edition a; 2nd ed., with the addition of the Rasacandrikā Hindī commentary by Dr. Indradeva Tripāṭhī, Vārāṇasī 1978.

References are to a. Parts of the Rasārņava were translated into English by P.C. Rāy (P. Rāy, 1956: 135–140; text: 321–329).

The title, mentioned in the colophons, is Śrīpārvatīparameśvarasannāda Rasānnava Rasasannitā.

- 10 These oils (taila) can form a dividing layer between pure molten metal and atmospheric oxygen, thus reducing the possibility of further oxidation (V. Deshpande, 1994: 317).
- II Animal faeces (viş) may be able to form soluble salts from the respective insoluble salts and thus have a cleansing effect on metals (V. Deshpande, 1994: 317).
- 12 These five substances, consisting of guñ jā, ṭankana (borax), honey, ghee and guḍa (5.41), remove oxides as surface contaminants, thus making the metal soft and miscible with other metals; borax can combine with metal oxides to form a flux, which floats on the surface

- of molten metals and can thus be removed (V. Deshpande, 1994: 317, 318).
- 13 The mṛttikā type has been regarded as zinc oxide, the guɨdabha type as zinc sulphide, the pāsānābha type as zinc silicate or carbonate (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 77).
- 14 Carmāra is coloured like a parrot (śuka), śukaturidaka is yellowish, hamsapāda is red (see Rasa ialanidhi II. 225).
- 15 D.G. White (1996: 148) notes that the Rasārņava is the earliest text to deal with this subject.
- 16 The white variety is due to an admixture of chalk, the black variety to a mixture of black soil and kāsīsa, the yellow variety is the same as puspakāsīsa (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 117).
- 17 Varna is the technical term for the colour of the streak of the touchstone and came to designate the degree of fineness of gold, which was graded into sixteen varnas (see on this subject: M.K. Pal, 1978: 255; S.R. Sarma, 1983a).

- 20 Compare Pāradasamhitā 14.27-32.
- 21 The malagati is present when mercury, mixed with metallic impurities, converts itself into oxides, sulphides, etc., which are considered as malas (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 33).
- 22 The harpsagati is present when very fine mercury (due to the effect of murchana) floats on the surface of water (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 33).
- 23 The dhūmagati is present when heated mercury is converted into fumes (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 33).
- 24 This divine gati is invisible (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 33).
- 25 Malagati is mentioned twice. The first occurrence of the term is probably an error for jalagati, which is missing. When washed with water, mercury goes with the water; this is called ialagati (see D. Joshi. 1991a: 33).
- 26 Compare 11.75, where the fourth avasthā is called sakampa.
- 27 The traditional eighteen saṃskāras are nowhere described in the Rasārṇava. D.G. White (1996: 148 and 428) remarks that the first eight of the series are reduced to two: śodhana and mardana; he suggests that this may be due to the fact that the Rasārṇava follows a rapid kānālika method.
- 28 See on these types: Pāradasamhitā 18.94-100.

- 31 Compare Pāradasamhitā 36.6-9.
- 32 Compare Pāradasaiņhitā 36.13-17.
- 33 Pattabandha is a less usual term, also found in the Rasopanisad. Pattabaddha mercury is described as resembling wax; it is white or yellow in colour and heatresistant.
- 34 Dāna corresponds to what is usually called sevana, i.e., the consumption of mercurial preparations.
- 35 Compare the description of the Rasārņavakalpa.
- 36 The same as somalatā (Satyaprakāś, 1960: 400).
- 37 The same as kālī kapās according to Satyaprakāś (1990: 391).
- 38 Absent from the Rasārnavakalpa.
- 39 Compare the ksamāpālī of Rasārnava 5.28.
- 40 Called vartulaparņī in the Rasārņavakalpa.
- 41 Omitted in the Rasārnavakalpa, which inserts jyotismatī and dagdhārohā here.

- 42 Padminī and kumudinī are omitted in the Rasārnavakalpa.
- 43 The same as nāgadantī (Satyaprakāś, 1960: 399).
- 44 Omitted in the Rasārnavakalpa.

- 202 CC: not recorded. Tāntrika Sāhitya 550. Edition: Rasārņavakalpa (Manifold powers of the ocean of rasa); text, edited and translated into English by Mira Roy, in collaboration with B.V. Subbarayappa, Indian National Science Academy, Monograph No. 5, New Delhi 1976. This edition is based on a MS of the Library of the Asiatic Society at Calcutta (described by *Haraprasad Shastri, Descriptive Catalogue of the Sanskrit MSS on Tantra, vol. 8, Calcutta 1940; see on this MS. B.V. Subbarayappa's Introduction to the edition); the verses dealing with religious and related aspects have, unfortunately, not been edited and translated, but their gist is found in footnotes; the edition is accompanied by an appendix (plant names and their identifications) and a glossary.
- 203 See the colophon.
- B.V. Subbarayappa, the author of the Introduction to the edition, calls these parts rasā-yanotpatti, rasaprakriyā, and kalpaprabhāga. Mira Roy mentioned, in an article written before the publication of the edition of the text, another division in three parts: 1–5 (on dhātu-, ratna- and rasasiddhi), 56–230 (on a variety of alchemical processes), and 231 to the end (on kalpas) (Mira Roy, 1967: 138).

- 229 Compare the erandakalpa of the Kākacandīśvarakalpatantra.
- 230 Nārada is reported to be acquainted with the names of aparājitā.
- 231 The relationship between Rasārṇavakalpa 78-207 and Rasārṇava 12.8-182 is mentioned by M. Roy (1967) and B.V. Subbarayappa (Intr. to the edition); these authors did not notice that a candrodaka-, viṣodaka- and śailodakakalpa also form part of chapter twelve of the Rasārnava.
- 232 Compare Rasārṇavakalpa 239cd-240 and Kākacaṇḍīśvarakalpatantra, brahmadaṇḍī 11cd-12ab; 255-256 and musalīkalpa 4cd-6; 373ab and gandhaka 20cd; 492cd-493 and tṛṇajyotis 1cd-2; 591-592 and rudantī 2cd-4ab; 597ab and rudantī 6cd; 762-776 and aṅkola 9-11; 770ab and śālmalī 7ab; 774-775 and śālmalī 13cd-14; 777cd-780 and śālmalī 19-22; 784-787 and śīphala 2-5; 792cd-797 and eraṇḍa 1-6ab; 807ab and eraṇḍa 12cd; 808-809 and eraṇḍa 13cd-14cd; 810-813 and eraṇḍa 16ab-19ab. On some occasions both texts disagree; īśvarī and nāgadamanī are synonyms in the Rasārṇavakalpa (451-452), whereas the two plants are different in the Kākacaṇḍī-śvarakalpatantra.

Edition: śrīgovindācāryaviracito rasasāraḥ tathā kāyasthacāmuṇḍaviracitā rasasanketakalikā, saṇiśodhakaḥ prakāśakaś ca ācāryopāhvas trivikramātmajo yādavaśarmā vaidyaḥ, Āyurvedīyagranthamālā, ṣaṣthaṇ saptamaṇ ca puṣpam, Nirṇaya Sāgar Press, Bombay 1912 [BL.14044.bb.5(1); IO.San.C.303 and 26.C.38]; this edition is based on four MSS: one from the Mysore Oriental Research Institute collection, and three from private collections (see the bhūmikā to the edition); variants are recorded in footnotes. The title of the treatise is mentioned at 1.4 and 26.36 and 43.

- 35 Compare on the contents and special features of the Rasasāra: Atrideva (1961): 108–109; Satyaprakās (1960): 415–423.
- 36 The three mantras of chapter one are the bahurūpamanu, raseśvaramanu and rasāńkuśī mahāvidyā.
- 37 The earthworms (bhūnāga) used in alchemy are not those found in ordinary soil, but those present near gold, silver, iron, and copper mines; the first three varieties are difficult to procure (see Rasa jalanidhi II, 234).
- 38 Quoted in the Rasakāmadhenu (I.4.92-94ab).
- 39 Quoted in the Rasakāmadhenu (I.4.89-90).
- 40 Quoted anonymously.
- 41 Todara III: 4.950-955; IX: 1.507-517; 2.170; 3.164-166.
- 42 The alloy called vartaloha is absent.
- 43 The same as marakata, the emerald.
- 44 The same as gomeda.
- 45 Compare chapter ten on the gems.
- 46 A stone slab for grinding herbs.
- 47 A mortar made of iron.
- 48 An instrument for pounding iron. The Rasasāra also employs the verb retayati (7.6) and the noun retana (11.50).

- 49 A variant of this word is hatthodī (22.16); see 22.16 for a description.
- 50 An implement used for straining (cālana; 22.15). See on sieves (cālanī): Rasa jalanidhi I, 13-14.
- 51 Probably the same as the chinnaka (22.15); the chinnī is an iron instrument employed for splitting pieces of metal.
- 52 An instrument for pounding metals, used in combination with the ghana (2.9).
- 53 Probably the same as the ghanī (22.17).
- 54 A pair of tongs; two types are mentioned, formed like the beak of a parrot and that of a crow.
- 55 A large pair of tongs.
- 56 This list is more or less, in conformity with the title of chapter three (anukramanikā), a table of contents of the Rasasāra.
- 57 The extraction of an essence of an uparasa (6.6) and the preparation of a druti (8.15) also take twenty-one days. Other operations have to be repeated twenty-one times (8.57).
- 58 The correct reading is kanta, which is mentioned a number of times in this chapter.
- 59 This may be (manah)śilā.
- 60 This series of uparasas is very unusual. A closely related series is enumerated at 2.1 and 6.2cd-3ab: vaikrānta, sasyaka, tāpya, darada, rasaka, giri, vimala, kāntaka.
- 61 See 7.10. Caura is a frequent term; see, for example, 7.5 and 11; 9.14; 11.7, 9, 12, 13.
- 62 Kbarparikā designates zinc in this context. Kharpara and kharparikā are synonyms of rasaka in many treatises.
- 63 Quoted in the Rasakāmadhenu (I.3.34-35ab).
- 64 Ouoted in the Rasakāmadhenu (I.3.35cd-36).
- 65 Rasasāra 11.15–18: rā; 11.16 and 21: rirī. Rā is one of the synonyms of gold (see Rasakā-madhenu II.1.69ab).
- 66 Compare, for example, Rasahrdaya 6.11-12.
- 67 The fat of the animal called chucchundarī.
- 68 Either the menstrual fluid or, more probably, the female equivalent of the male seed, believed to be secreted at the time of intercourse. See on the use of this fluid in Śākta rituals: F.A. Marglin (1982): 309-310.
- 69 Šata-, sahasra-, laksa-, koti-, dhūma-, sparša-, avalokana-, and šabdavedha.
- 70 Powdered bricks.
- 71 This may be the same as nir jīvabandha.
- 72 Mercury becomes vedhin (able to transmute other metals) when it is freed from the avasthās.
- 73 Adding too large an amount of grāsa.
- 74 Adding a deficient amount of bida.
- 75 Adding too large an amount of bida.
- 76 Ouoted in the Rasakāmadhenu (I.4.12-14ab).
- 77 This ahiphena of the Rasasāra is distinct from opium, also called ahiphena. The Rasasaṇ-ketakalikā expresses the alternative view referred to. See the quotations on the subject in the Rasakāmadhenu (1.4.77–81).
- 78 Examples are the heart of an owl (20.16), a black pigeon (20.21), and a black cat (20.23); see, in particular, 20.26–28, where a series of animals (called siddhadravya) is enumerated
- 79 This may not be a plant name. Variously interpreted: a bright yellow substance prepared from the bile of cattle (MW); a bezoar (W. Ainslie, 1826: I, 35–37). Compare VŚS

- (gorocana). See on bezoar: Hobson-Jobson; B. Laufer (1967): 525-528; Moodeen Sheriff (1978): 68-71.
- 80 This list is also found in the Pāradasaiņhitā (between 7.86 and 87), which quotes it from the Rasarājasundara.
- 81 See on this yantra: Rasajalanidhi I, 283.
- 82 Rasasāra 18.1; 23.1; 26.32.
- 83 The same as Madhyadeśa, the country between the Gangā and Yamunā (N.N. Bhattacharyya, 1991). Compare B.C. Law (1984): 66, 141.
- 84 Rasasāra 26.30cd-35.
- 85 Referred to as kirāteśa śrīyukta.
- 86 Śiva may be meant.
- 87 Vrddhatrayī 469.

- 98 A Capalanimayab y Narendranāthamitra is appended to this chapter; the author identifies capala as the element selenium. See on capala, which has always been rare and very difficult to identify: D. Joshi (1991a): 76: it is regarded as a bismuth or tin ore, by a few as selenium. P.C. Rāy (1956: 171): capala is possibly a sulphidic mineral. Sources quoted in this section are: Rasakāmadhenu, Rasamangala, Rasaratnasamuccaya, Rasārṇava and Rasendractīdāmani. Narendranātha was Sadānanda's teacher (see 6.37–38).
- 99 This process aims at the removal of remnants of impurities (doşa); it is only required for particular bhasmans, such as those of mica and copper (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 326). See on the use of the term amṛtīkaraṇa in Tantrism: K.R. van Kooij (1972; see index).

 3; hinguleśvararasa (98) = jvara 2; śītabhaījīrasa (99) = jvara 128-130; navajvarebhasinharasa (9) = jvara 55-57; candraśekhararasa (99) = jvara 173-175; mahājvarānkuśa (100)
 = jvara 46-48; meghanādarasa (100) = jvara 293-294; siddhaprāneśvararasa (101-102) =
 jvara 11-15.

Some formulae carry the same name as formulae of the Rasendrasārasamgraha without being identical; examples are tripurabhairavarasa (96; compare Rasendrasārasamgraha, śūla 51–52) and śītārirasa (98; compare jvara 73–75 and vātavyādhi 57–58).

Rāy (1956: 201): kańkuṣṭha may be an efflorescence of magnesium sulphate or sodium sulphate; the yellow colour might be due to an admixture with ferruginous dirt.

- 250 Rasendracūḍamaṇi 6.3 refers to Bhairava's fourfold classification of plants used in alchemy (rasauṣadhi, mahauṣadhi, siddhauṣadhi, divyauṣadhi); 12.25 quotes a bhairavanyāya, derived from a Rasasiddha of this name according to the Hindī commentary; 12.28 is about Bhairava's opinion on the blemishes of gems. Bhairava is one of the Rasasiddhas listed in the Rasaratnasamuccaya (1.4-8).
- 251 Bhāluki was of the opinion that mercury is purified by means of ūrdhva- and adhalpātana (15.33), and that mercury can digest all the metals after being subjected to svedana and samnyāsa, which provide it with a mouth (mukha) (15.54-57). See on samnyāsa: Rasendracūdāmaņi 4.114-115 and 15.57.
- 252 Bhāskara regarded mercury as completely pure and siddhikara after having been subjected seven times to svedana, mardana and vimūrchana. Bhāskara is one of the Rasasiddhas in the Rasaratnasamuccaya. The Rasendrabhāskara is attributed to him.
- 253 Brahmajyotis was one of those who knew about vahnimrtsnā.
- 254 One of the methods of peparing ankolataila was devised by Devasūnu, i.e., Somadeva himself (see the Hindī commentary).
- 255 Mercury is purified by means of mardana, svedana and samnyāsa according to Dineśvara.
- 256 The formula of a rasāyana containing lohabhasman was given by Girīśa, i.e., Śiva, to the father of Kālayavana.
- 257 Govindabhagavant (the author of the Rasahrdaya) is convinced that mercury is purified when successfully subjected to svedana, mardana, mūrchā, pratyutthāna, pātana, nirodha and niyama.
- 258 A method of preparing capala from tin derives from a king (lokanātha) called Kharpaṇa (the Hindī commentary has Kharvaṇa). Kharpaṇalokanātha was a rasācārya of the Gorakṣapurīya Navanāthasampradāya according to G. Hāldār (Vṛddhatrayī 307).
- 259 Manthānabhairava is credited with verses describing the fate of the person who despises mercury (1.44). Somadeva asserts that the chapter on the divine herbs (divyauşadhi; 6) is based on the teachings of Manthānabhairava, one of the Rasasiddhas.
- 260 The description of samukhajāraņā derives from Mṛgacārin.
- 261 Nāgārjuna was one of those who were acquainted with vahnimṛtsnā (5.61) and the sādhā-raṇarasas (11.91).
- 262 Nandin is mentioned in connection with the eulogy of mercury (1.35); the omniscient (sarvavedin) Nandin devised the nābhiyantra (5.54-57ab); he was acquainted with vahnimrtsnā (5.59-61), and described the koṣṭhikāyantra (5.67cd-77ab) and pātālakoṣṭhikā (5.134-138ab); he was of the opinion that purified iron (or its bhasman) is like amṛta (sudhā; 14.128cd); he had his own views on the removal of the doṣas and kañcukas from mercury (15.29 and 35), and on its complete purification (15.66). Nandin belongs to the group of Rasasiddhas.

- 263 The raktashuhyādigaņa was expounded by Śambhu.
- 264 The medicinal properties of the bhasman of copper (14.70–71) were described by Somanātha
- 265 The description of the rasausadhis (chapter seven) is based on the teachings of Śrīkantha.
- 266 Svacchandabhairava, one of the Rasasiddhas, described the preparation of guhyanāga (4. 50cd-52ab). D.G. White (1996: 434) suggests that this may be a reference to the Bhūtiorakarana of the Goraksasamhitā.

- 308 An alloy made by mixing tīkṣṇaloha and nīlāñjana (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 318). See on its preparation: 4.52cd-53ab.
- 309 Utthāpana of metals is described, which means that they recover their original form (4. 53cd). See D. Joshi (1991a): 318.
- 310 Pouring liquefied materials into other materials. See Bhagwan Dash (1986): 185; D. Joshi (1986): 304, (1991a): 318.
- 311 The preparation of capala from lead (4.54cd-56ab) and tin (4.56cd-58ab) is described, followed by a rasa formula by Somadeva (4.58cd-71). See D. Joshi (1986): 304, (1991a): 76 and 319.
- 312 See D. Joshi (1986): 304, (1991a): 319.
- 313 Alloying or mixing two substances. See Atrideva (1961): 148; D. Joshi (1986): 304, (1991a): 319.
- 314 The colour of gold, slightly changed by adding some silver. See D. Joshi (1991a): 319.
- 315 Throwing some sand or water into the fire in order to subdue it is called bhañjinī (4.74ab). See D. Joshi (1991a): 319.

- 316 The power of some plants to give the colour of gold or silver to other metals (4.74cd). See D. Joshi (1991a): 319.
- 317 The process which makes the pataing colour disappear again after a few days (4.75ab). This process is called cullakā in the Rasaratnasamuccaya (8.52).
- 318 Patangīrāga is a patangīcolour that stays for a longer time (4.75c-f). See D. Joshi (1991a): 320.
- 319 Āvāpa is the throwing of other materials into a molten metal. See Bhagwan Dash (1986): 185; D. Joshi (1986): 295, (1991a): 320.
- 320 Throwing a hot substance into a liquid. See Bhagwan Dash (1986): 185; D. Joshi (1986): 295, (1991a): 320.
- 321 The appearance of a white flame during sattvapātana, which indicates the melting of metals. See Bhagwan Dash (1986): 185; D. Joshi (1986): 294, (1991a): 320.
- 322 The stage of sattvapātana in which the flame acquires the colour of the metal to be extracted, which indicates that the material is about to melt. See Bhagwan Dash (1986): 185; D. Joshi (1986): 294, (1991a): 7 and 320.
- 323 Cooled by itself, without being removed from the furnace. See D. Joshi (1991a): 320.
- 324 Cooled after removal from the fireplace. See on svāngašīta and bahiḥšīta: Bhagwan Dash (1986): 186; D. Joshi (1986): 295, (1991a): 321.

 321. Svedana results in loosening of the impurities.
- 326 See Atrideva (1961): 142; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 53–54; D. Joshi (1986): 296, (1991a):
 321. Mardana destroys impurities of external origin.
- 327 Mürchana makes mercury acquire the naştapişta state. See Atrideva (1961): 141-143; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 54-56; D. Joshi (1986): 296, (1991a): 321. Mürchana destroys some of the kañcukas.
- 328 Mercury in a very finely dispersed state. See D. Joshi (1986): 296, (1991a): 321.
- 329 Restoration of the original state of mercury after making it naṣṭapiṣṭa. See Atrideva (1961): 143; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 56-58; D. Joshi (1986): 296, (1991a): 321.
- 330 See Atrideva (1961): 143; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 58-62; D. Joshi (1986): 296, (1991a): 321. Pātana removes the vanga and nāga impurities.
- 331 Removal of the slackness of mercury or its potentiation. See Atrideva (1961): 143–144; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 62–63; D. Joshi (1986): 296–297, (1991a): 322.
- 332 Removal of the capalatva of mercury, acquired through rodhana. See Atrideva (1961): 144; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 63–64; D. Joshi (1986): 297, (1991a): 322.
- 333 Inducing hunger in mercury for the consumption of a grasa. See Atrideva (1961): 144; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 64; D. Joshi (1986): 297, (1991a): 322.
- 334 The amount of metal that can be consumed by mercury. See Atrideva (1961): 144; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 65–66; D. Joshi (1986): 297, (1991a): 322.
- 335 Jāraṇā leads to the complete digestion and assimilation of a grāsa by mercury. Jāraṇā usually follows upon cāraṇā and druti; Somadeva gives the traditional order (cāraṇa, druti, jāraṇā) in chapter fifteen (15.28). See on the process: Atrideva (1961): 146; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 73-75; D. Joshi (1986): 298, (1991a): 322. The stages of jāraṇācalled grāsa, piṇḍa and pariṇāma are mentioned, as well as samukha-and nirmukhajāraṇā (4.92-97). Addition of the prescribed amount of bīja is called nirmukhajāraṇā; when only 1/64th part of the bīja is taken, mercury acquires a mukha, which it makes greedy to consume a grāsa, even one consisting of hard metals; the latter process is called samukhajāraṇā (see D. Joshi,

- 1991a: 322–323). Somadeva also describes the rākṣasavaktra (the ability to consume all the metals) of mercury, which it acquires when heated, in combination with divine herbs, in an open furnace (prakaṭakoṣṭhī) (4.97; compare 15.62–64) (see D. Joshi, 1986: 298–299; 1991a: 323).
- Putting a grāsa inside mercury. See Atrideva (1961): 145; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 67–71;
 D. Joshi (1986): 297, (1991a): 323.
- 337 Garbha- and bāhyadruti are described (4.98cd-101). Liquefaction of a substance inside mercury is called garbhadruti; when this takes place outside, it is called bāhyadruti. See Atrideva (1961): 145-146; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 71-73; D. Joshi (1986): 297, (1991a): 8, 323. Compare Pāradasamhitā 16 (garbhadruti) and 17 (bāhyadruti).
- 338 A bida is a mixture ●f substances (salts, acids, caustics, etc.) that enhance the metal-consuming power of mercury. See Atrideva (1961): 146–147; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 71; D. Joshi (1986): 299, (1991a): 324. Compare Pāradasarnhitā 14.
- 339 Induction of a yellow or another colour. See Atrideva (1961): 147; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 75–77; D. Joshi (1986): 299, (1991a): 324.
- 340 Sāranā prepares mercury for the process of transmutation. See Atrideva (1961): 147; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 77-81; D. Joshi (1986): 299. (1991a): 324. Somadeva does not mention pratisāranā and anusāranā.
- 341 Vedha designates the proces of transmutation. Somadeva distinguishes lepa-, ksepa-, kunta-, dhtima- and śabdavedha (4.106-111). See on vedha: Atrideva (1961): 147-148; Bhagwan Dash (1986): 82. See on its varieties: D. Joshi (1986): 299-300, (1991a): 324-325.
- 342 A process that removes discoloration and improves the brightness. See D. Joshi (1986): 300, (1991a): 325.
- 343 Compare 15.57-58. Saṇṇṇyāsa is mild heating of mercury with particular drugs inside a sealed vessel. See D. Joshi (1986): 300-301, (1991a): 325.

- 401 Chapter six is quoted in the Rasakāmadhenu (I.3.54-123), which differs in some of its readings: akṣīrā is called akṣarā; bhṛṅgavallī is called kṣīravallī; bhūtumbinī is called tumbinī; gonasā is called sarpiņī; kṣīravallī is called vīravallī; lambinī is omitted; mraṅkṣanagandhinī is replaced by navanītakagandhā; pattravallī is called qaruḍavallī; pītavallikā is omitted; raktavallī is called jyotirnāmnī; raktāṅgī is called garuḍavallī; saptapattrī is replaced by saptaparnī; the verse on somakalā belongs to the description of somavallī = somalatā; tāɪnravallikā is omitted; tilakandā is absent; added are mallikā, mayūrikā and višalyā.

- 402 Compare the related list of Rasārnava 5.2-7.
- 403 The total number amounts to eighty-two instead of eighty-four.
- 404 Compare Rasārņava 5.17-21.
- 405 Compare Rasārņava 5.22—23.
- 406 Compare Rasārnava 5.24-25.
- 407 The Rasakāmadhenu (I.4.14cd-16) quotes the following list of eighteen visas from the Rasendracūdāmaņi: binduka, cakra, hāridra, harita, kālakūta, kardama, markataka, mayūrākhya, musta, puṣkara, saktuka, śankhanābha, śikhi, śmgī, sumangala, vāluka, and vatsanābha.
- 408 Compare the Hindī commentary.
- 409 The Hindī commentary mentions lead and manaḥśilā as the enemies (ari) of gold; haritāla is the enemy of silver, tāla the enemy of tin, sulphur the enemy of copper.
- 410 The preparation of antimony was discovered first in Europe by Basil Valentine (1605); see P. Ray (1986a): 148–149. Varanāga is also mentioned in the Rasahrdaya (5.37) and Rasasāra (7.5).
- 411 O.P. Jaggi (V, 133-134) calls the Rasendracūdāmani a Buddhist Tantra.
- 412 According to the colophon of the last chapter of ed. a (absent from edition b), reproduced by Siddhinandana Miśra (prākkathan 13 to ed. b) and V. Śukla (I.153). Somadeva once calls himself Devasūnu, i.e., son of Nārāyaṇa (according to Siddhinandana Miśra) and a mahāmātya (14.199). G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 347; compare 466) asserts that Somadeva was the son of Rāghavadeva, the father of Śrīkṛṣṇaśārṅgadhara, and the pupil of Acyuta, son of Gonikā.
- 413 This is not the name of some lineage according to Siddhinandana Miśra (commentary ad 1.2); others (S. Ārya, 1984: 104; AVI 459) regard it as the name of some vamśa.
- 414 Some regard him as a king of Karavālabhairavapura (Atrideva, 1961: 104; AVI 459; CBORI XVI, I, Nr. 229; Siddhinandana Miśra's prākkathan and the Hindī commentary ad 2.1); G. Hāldār (Vrddhatrayī 347) considers him to be a sāmanta.
- 415 D.G. White (1996: 158) remarks that this name corresponds to no known Indian toponym, either mediaeval or modern.

Jammu (M.A. Stein, 1894: 187), Nr. 3153: Rasaratnākara by Nāgārjuna. Cat. Punyavijayaji *Nr. 6498. J. Filliozat, Liste Nr. 146 (a copy of the Bikaner MS, with a number of corrections on the original). A.P. Shah (Ed.) (1968: 166–167): Vaidyaka 1285 (Accession Nr. 9442): Rasendramangala by Nāgārjuna. M. Vinayasagar and J. Baldwa (1984): 448–449 (Serial Nr. 4024, Accession Nr. 4080: anonymous). See on the MSS: D.G. White (1996): 164 and 435; D. Wujastyk (1984a).
 - An edition of the Rasendramangala by Jīvrām Kālidās (Gondal 1924) is mentioned by Atrideva (ABI 400; 1961: 97), but copies of this edition are nowhere traceable (D. Wujastyk, personal communication; D. Wujastyk searched for a copy in Gondal, even in the library of the late Jīvrām Kālidās, but was unable to find one).
- 2 The Rasaratnākara and Rasendramangala are still sometimes mentioned as two separate works by Nāgārjuna (see, for example: AVI 457, 470, 472; NCC X, 18-19; GP. Srivastava, 1954: 89-90 and 215; STMI 153 and 450). Nāgārjuna is considered to be the author of a Rasaratnākara by R.C. Majumdar (1971: 233).
- 3 P. Cordier (1903b): 347-348.
- 4 See Atrideva (1961: 96–97), who also refers to Jīvrām Kālidās's bhūmikā to his edition of the Rasendramangala.
- 5 Atrideva (1961): 96-97.
- 6 See, for example: S. Ārya (1984): 102; Satyaprakāś (1960): 309-313.
- 7 D. Wujastyk (1984a).
- 8 The description of the contents is based on a transcript of the Paris MS (Collection P. Cordier), kindly made available to me by D. Wujastyk (The Wellcome Institute for the History of Medicine, London); this MS contains chapters one to four. Compare on the contents: ABI 400–402; Atrideva (1901): 96–100; D. Joshi (1986): 11, 17; Satyaprakāś (1960): 309–320; D.G. White (1996): 164–167.
- 9 The two MSS consulted by D.G. White (1996: 164) give in their opening verses the contents of eight chapters.
- 10 It is not clear which of the substances are rasas and which uparasas.
- 11 Rasendramangala 1.40-44 = P. Rāy's Rasaratnākara 1.2-6.
- 12 Rasendramangala 1.49-51 = P. Rāy's Rasaratnākara 9-11; 1.53-54 = 13-14.
- 13 P. Rāy's Rasaratnākara 23-32 and 35-38 are from this part of chapter two.
- 14 P. Rāy's Rasaratnākara 50-51 belongs to this part of chapter two.
- 15 P. Rāy's Rasaratnākara 52-55 is from this part of chapter two.

- 45 Compare Rasayogasāgara, yakārādi 600 and 601; the second formula of vaikrāntaguţikā is absent from the Rasayogasāgara.
- 46 Compare Pāradasamhitā 36.77-78.
- 47 Compare Rasayogasāgara, kakārādi 185.
- 48 P. Cordier (1903b: 347) asserted that, next to Ratnaghoşa, Śūrasena (one of the Rasasiddhas) is mentioned (he interpreted sūtasena of the Paris MS as Śūrasena).
- 49 P. Cordier (1903b: 347) was of the opinion that Śālivāhana's spouse, called Madasundarī, is mentioned too; the reading of the Paris MS, mama sundarī, more probably refers to the Vatavaksinī.
- 50 Compare P. Ray (1956): 132-133 and 317-318. See also P. Cordier (1903b): 347-348.
- 51 P. Rāy (1956: 134 and 318) presents a reading in which Nāgārjuna says "I shall convey to you what has been experimented upon by Sākan a", the Paris MS has kathayāmi na saindeho mārtanda yena yat krtam, in which Mārtanda may refer to Ratnaghoşa.
- 52 See P. Ray (1956): 134 and 318-319.
- 53 The section of chapter three on mercurial bhasman refers to the jvarādhikāra, which undoubtedly forms part of chapter five.
- 54 See P. Ray (1956): 134 and 319.
- 55 Āḍhamalla presents a closely related list in his comments a d Śārngadhara II.12.4cd-13ab.
 See: Ādhamalla.

- 56 The vaṃśa- and nalikāyantra are absent from the tippaṇa. Āḍhamalla mentions a vaṃśanalikāyantra.
- 57 Absent from the ţippaṇa and Āḍhamalla's list, which have the ḍamaruyantra instead of the gamanayantra.
- 58 Absent from the tippana. Ādhamalla mentions a gandhakatahikāvantra.
- 59 The tippana reāds kāmsabhā jana; Ādhamalla's commentary has kāmsyabhā jana.
- 60 The tippana has ghānavantra: Ādhamalla reads bānavantra.
- 61 Absent from the tippana and Āḍhamalla's list; the tippana has a gadakayantra; Ādhamalla mentions a garudayantra.
- 62 Also mentioned by Ādhamalla. The tippana has jālūkāyantra.
- 63 The tippana has vāraņayantra.
- 64 According to P.V. Sharma (1972a): 73-74.
- 65 Apart from those already referred to, the Rasayogasāgara contains the following formulae from the Rasendramangala: akārādi 142 (abhrabaddhaguṭikā), 157 (abhravaṭī); kakārādi 63 (karnarogahara), 557 (ghanasanhkocarasa); cakārādi 81–84 (capalarasa); takārādi 169 (tṛṣṇāchardihararasa), 301–302 (dardurarasa); pakārādi 67 and 71 (pañcāmṛtarasa), 138 (pāradādivaṭī), 237 (pratāpalankeśvararasa, different from 242); yakārādi 27 (yonidoṣahararasa), 210 (lankeśvararasa), 367 (vajrabaddhaguṭikā), 568 (visarpanāśanarasa), 603 (vaikrāntabaddharasa), 610 (vaikrāntasūtakarasa); śakārādi 239 (saṇkocagolarasa), 324 (sarvamukhāmayahararasa), 349 (sarvāpasmārahararasa), 485 (sūtabhasmayoga).
 - Many of these formulae are probably from chapters three and four, but part of them may also be from chapter five. Obviously, Hariprapanna, the compiler of the Rasayogasāgara, had access to a good MS of the Rasandramangala.
- 66 Todara IX: 4.154 (sulphur has the same nature as a sattva; for that reason, it is described along with mercury).
- 67 D.G. White (1996: 164) remarks that the Rasendramangala freely copies from the Rasārnava and a number of other Tantric alchemical works.

- 87 Compare the reflections of D.G. White (1996: 165–166) on the author and the Nāgārjuna to whom he refers.
- 88 P. Cordier (1930b: 348) was also convinced that the Rasendramangala cannot be by Nā-gārjuna himself.
- 89 He is called karunāvesita and preaches maitrīkarunādi.
- 90 P. Cordier (1903b: 348) was the first to point to the Buddhist elements in the Rasendramangala. P. Rāy (1956: 116) regarded the work as a Mahāyāna Tantra. G.P. Srivastava (1954: 11) also describes it as a Mahāyāna Tantra, but adds that some characteristics of a Śaiva Tantra are perceptibly included in it.
- 91 A kāpālikayoga, employed in the liquefaction of diamonds, is described in chapter two.
- 92 See Rasayogasāgara, yakārādi 380.
- 93 P. Rāy (1956: 117): seventh or eighth century at the latest. S. Ārya (1984: 102), C. Dwarkanath (1991: 43), and G.P. Srivastava (1954: 111): seventh or eighth century. Satyaprakāś (1960: 309): eighth century. See also J. Filliozat in L. Renou et J. Filliozat (1953): 168-169; J. Filliozat (1975): 10.
- 94 D.G. White (1996: 164) dates it to the late thirteenth or early fourteenth century.
- 95 ABI 400-401. Atrideva (1961): 100.
- 96 The vālukāyantra is mentioned in the Rasendracūḍāmaṇi, usually dated to the twelfth or thirteenth century.
- 97 See the description of the contents of the Rasendramangala.
- 98 Compare Āḍhamalla ad Śārngadharasamhitā II.11.44-45 and Kāśīrāma ad II.11.40cd-53ab. The types called madhyasāra, cakramarda, bandha, kalinga and bhadra cannot be traced in the tippana.
- 99 D. Wujastyk (1948a: 77), who refers to *H.D. Velankar (1930): 494.
- 100 Edition: paṭiyālārājyāntargata-ṭakasālanivāsī paṭiyālāke rājyavaidya vaidyaratna pandit rāmprasād vaidyopādhyāy pranīt rasendrapurān, Lakṣmīvenkaṭeśvar Press, Bombay 1926/27. Rāmaprasāda planned to write a work in three volumes; volume I was published in 1926/27; volume II, containing rasayogas against various diseases, has, to my knowledge, not been published; no information is available on volume III (see Rāmaprasāda's bhūmikā to the edition of vol. I).
- 101 Rāmaprasāda tells a story about Vīrabhadra's wish to receive instruction in the medical science from Brahmā, who rejected him as a pupil on account of the unsteadiness of his mind; Vīrabhadra, in his anger at the insult, cut off Brahmā's head; later, he repented, went to the Aśvins who replaced Brahmā's head, and turned to Śiva who taught him the science of alchemy. See on several stories about Vīrabhadra: Vettam Mani.
- 102 These five kinds are red, black, somewhat yellow, white, and coloured like a peacock's feather respectively (see Rasajalanidhi I, 33-34).
- 103 Compare Pāradasamhitā 33.1-53.
- 104 Some ofthepills described are: siddha-, khageśvarī- (compare Pāradasaṃhitā 37.123–130 and p.306–307), brahmāṇḍa- (compare Pāradasaṃhitā 37.115–122 and p.307), and khecarīguṭikā (compare Pāradasaṃhitā 37.100–109 and p.302, 308).
- 105 The sattva is described as white in colour and resembling copper (7.140).
- 106 See, for instance, 20.55 (the drāvaņa of the essence of mākṣika); 23.26–27 (the māraṇa of tutthasattva).

- 107 Rasendrapurāṇa 3.250-251 = Rasasaṃketakalikā 1.17-18; 3.253-254 = 1.27-29ab.
- 108 Rasendrapurāna 3.10 = Rasaratnasamuccaya 11.25; 3.52-55 = 11.30-33; 3.58-59 = 11. 34-35; 3.210-237 = 11.60-86; 3.247-249 = 11.87-89.
- 109 Rasendrapurāṇa 3.6-9 = Rasendrasārasaṃgraha 1.10-13ab; 3.70-71 = 1.37-38; 3.75-76 = 1.42-43; 3.79-81 = 1.44-46; 3.195-196 = 1.74-75; 3.180-185 = 1.76-81.

- III The actual use of mercurial preparations.
- 112 Well-purified mercury, suitable to internal use, is called arota (see D. Joshi, 1991a: 329).
- 113 Baddharasa is also defined at 3,249.
- 114 Anonymously quoted from the Rasasamketakalikā.

Sāmbaśiva Śāstrī, Trivandrum Sanskrit Series No. XCII, Śrī Setu Lakşmī Prasādamālā No. IV, Trivandrum 1928; this edition is based on two MSS from private collections; the edition comprises eighteen chapters; variants are given in footnotes and in a pāṭhabheda at the end; this ed. was reviewed by L.D. Barnett (JRAS 1930, 445–446).
 - b rasopanişat (prathama-khanda) ("śaraccandraprabhā" bhāṣāṭīkā saha), anuvādaka: vaidya badrīnārāyaṇa śarmā (vijayanagarastha), Kṛṣṇa-Gopāla Granthamālā Nr. 28, Ajmer 1959; this edition comprises chapters one to sixteen; the MSS on which it is based are not indicated; the Hindī commentary is useful; two indexes (vargānukramaṇikā and vanauṣadhināmasūcī) are found at the end.

- 206 D.G. White (1996: 155) classifies the Rasopanişad as a Māheśvara Siddha work. See on the Māheśvara Siddhas: D.G. White (1996): 101-103.
- 207 The treatise begins with Pārvatī requesting Śiva to expound the Rasopaniṣad to her (1.3); complying with her request, he asks her to listen to his exposé on the Mahodadhi (1.9). The names Mahodadhi and Rasopaniṣad figure next to each other in the chapter colophons, which may indicate that both titles refer to the same work. The work itself is referred to as Mahodadhi (1.56); another Mahodadhi is also mentioned (12.26). The editors of editions a and b, Atrideva (ABI 328), and V. Śukla (I, 158) assume that the Rasopaniṣad forms part of a larger work called Mahodadhi.
- 208 Edition a, however, has at the end: samāptā ceyam rasopanisat.
- 209 Prose is found between 16.101ab and 101cd, 17.208 and 209 (a mantra), 18.117 and 118, 464 and 465, 466 and 467, 467 and 468, 475 and 476, 477 and 478, 479 and 480, 481ab and 481cd, 489ab and 489cd, 494ab and 494cd, 501ab and 501cd, 505ab and 505cd, 506ab and 506cd.

- 224 See 1.31cd-32ab. Compare about this chapter: V. Deshpande (1994). Dirt or grease was removed by using hot water (12.11) or an alcoholic fluid, surface tarnishes were removed by cleansing with a suitable reagent, for example acidic plant juices (see the amlagana of 4.30-31); whenever the surface layer was insoluble in the reagent, it was converted into a soluble salt and then washed away (V. Deshpande, 1994: 316-317).

- 231 Śodhana is described at 1.67-69 and 11.15. Śodhana removes the impurities called kālikā,
- 232 Tejana is described at 1.70, where the Hindī commentator of ed. b equates it with dīpana; the Hindī commentary ad 1.20cd-21ab regards tejana as a combination of svedana, mardana, mūrchana and utthāpana (saṃskāras not separately mentioned in the list of the Rasopanisad; svedana and mardana are referred to at 1.65).
- 233 Pācana is described at 1.71-72, pāśana at 1.73. The Hindī commentator of ed. b remarks that 1.71-73 actually are about pāśana, which is probably correct, because pācana is not a common term in the Rasopaniṣad. Pāśana removes impurities of external origin; it is also described at 11.14.
- 234 Dāśana, which frees mercury from the internal impurities called mala, agni and vişa (see the Hindī commentary of ed. b), is described at 1.74-75 and 11.13.
- 235 Cārana is described at 1.83-84. This process makes mercury into a pinda.
- 236 Pātana is described at 1.76-77; this process frees mercury from the vangaja and nāgaja kañcukas (see the Hindī commentary of ed. b).
- 237 Nigraha is described at 1.85-86; it is probably the same as niyāmana. The Hindī commentator of ed. b interprets it as a process diminishing the cañcalatā of mercury (ad 1.21cd), or as paksaccheda (ad 1.85 and 86).
- 238 Described at 1.88.
- 239 Described at 1.89-90. Interpreted by the Hindī commentator of ed. b (ad 1.21cd) as the process which increases the ability of mercury to combine with other substances, in particular with metals (bubhukṣitakaraṇa, usually called mukhakaraṇa). The secret (guhya) aṅkuśa (used to control mercury, in the same way as the aṅkuśa controls the elephant), consists of bandhana, krāmaṇa, rañjana, and vedhana (1.91).
- 240 Described at 1.82 (gatiksaya = paksaccheda) and 1.105 (paksaghātana).
- 241 The same as agnikarman. Interpreted as garbhadruti by the Hindī commentator of ed. b (ad 1.22).
- 242 Interpreted as jārana by the Hindī commentator of ed. b (ad 1.22).
- 243 The eight pākas are not enumerated; the Hindī commentator of ed. b considers them to consist of svedana, mardana, mūrchana, utthāpana, pātana, rodhana, niyamana and dīpana.

- 244 The Rasopanisad omits kankustha.
- 245 Zinc is not mentioned.
- 246 Vaikrnta is the same as vaikrānta.

- 265 It is also described as a dialogue between Hara and Gaurī (Tāntrika Sāhitya 195). Bhairava is sometimes mentioned as its author (AVI 467). Some regard the work as a rasaśāstra text (S. Ārya, 1984: 122; AVI 467).
- 266 Some versions contain 300, 330 or 360 verses (see Tantrika Sahitya 195).

- 391 A.K. and S. Biswas (1996: 81–85) argue that vaidūrya, which is a beryl, has been confused with the gem called cat's eye. A.K. Biswas (1994: 145–146) declares unequivocally that the ancient scholars of India understood that vaidūrya meant white, sea-green, and sometimes blue beryl and nothing else (herefers to Arthaśāstra 2.11.30, a text setting vaidūrya apart from cat's eye or mārjārākṣaka at 2.11.39). A.K. and S. Biswas (1996: 83) identify the mārjārākṣaka as milky white chrysoberyl cat's eye and quartz cat's eye. See on this subject also: D. Joshi (1986): 204–206; K. Karttunen (1997): 237–238; A. - 525 CC: not recorded. S. Ārya (1984): 124. AVI 469. A Revaņasiddhabhāṣya and Revaṇakalpaka are quoted in the Basavarājīya. Revaṇasiddha is also the author of a Vīrabhatṭīya; this work mentions a Rasadarpaṇa. Some rasayogas are ascribed to him:

- Rasayogasāgara, śakārādi 145 (śītāṃśurasa; from Basavarājīya 64-65), 393 and 394 (sindūrabhūṣaṇarasa; this formula mentions three hundred kinds of śūla). Th. Aufrecht (CC I, 496 and 534) records a Rasaratnākara by Revaṇasiddha. See also Rasarājalakṣɪnī, Rasarājaśiromani, Revanasiddhakalpa.
- 526 Edition: Rasadhātuprakāśa (Rasaśāstra viṣayāvarīla abhinava grantha), compiled and edited, with a commentary in Marāthī, by Vaidya P.D. Mule, Amarāvatī 1956.

- Cat. Sarasvati Bhavan XII, Nr. 45226. There appears to be confusion with regard to this author. Th. Aufrecht records a Bhaiṣajyaṣārāmṛtaṣamhitā and a Vaidyadarpaṇa by the same Prāṇanātha who wrote the Rasapradīpa, adding that the Vaidyadarpaṇa dates from A.D. 1827 (CC I, 361 and 495; II, 212). V. Śukla (I, 163–164) claims that, apart from the Rasapradīpa, no other works by Prāṇanātha are known. A. Rahman (STMI 452) mentions threeworks by Prāṇanātha: Bhaiṣajyaṣārāmṛtaṣamhitā, Vaidyadarpaṇa, and a commentary on Rāmacandra's Rasapradīpa. The NCC (XIII, 147) refers to Prāṇanāthavaidya, son of Kātyāyana Bhaṭṭa, as the author of either a Rasapradīpa or a commentary on Rāmacandra Guha's work of that title.
 - Prāṇanātha's Rasapradīpa was *edited, with a Hindī commentary by Paṇḍit Śivasahāya Caturvedin, by Paṇḍit Śyāmsundar Śāstrī, Iṭāvā 1938. Some extracts from the treatise are found in P. Rāy (1956): 411-413: verses on śankhadrāvarasa and formulae against phirangavyādhi.

Sikdar, Prākṛta Bhāratī Puṣpa 38, Prākṛta Bhāratī Akādemī, Jaipur 1986; this edition is based on *MS Nr. 5668 of the library of the L.D. Institute of Indology at Ahmed-

- abad; the text of this edition is very corrupt; the translation is unreliable and full of incorrect interpretations.
- 813 See J.C. Sikdar's Introduction (11–16) on the metres employed by the author.
- 814 The meaning of ahi is not clear in this context; it may be capala or rasaka, which often form part of the mahārasas.
- 815 The series consists probably of seven items; one of these (kāna) is not clear as to its meaning; another verse (1.28) suggests that cinnabar (darada) is regarded as a mahārasa.
- 816 The mahārasas and alparasas (= uparasas) comprise sixteen substances according to 2.11.
- 817 The metals are seven in number at 2.10, where kāṇṇṣya (and vaṭṭaloha) are called kṛṭrima(dhātus). Zinc is absent.
- 818 Probably the somānalayantra.
- 819 See the Introduction (3-6) to his edition.
- 820 This view is based on data found in the Paṭṭāvalīsamuccaya, *edited by Muni Darśanavijaya (see J.C. Sikdar's Introduction, 3).

- 1088 See V.W. Karambelkar's Preface to ed. a. V.W. Karambelkar refers to K.-P. Jayaswal's Introduction to his edition of the Rājanītiratnākara; Jayaswal informs his readers that Devāditya, Caṇḍeśvara's grandfather, Vīreśvara, his father, and Caṇḍeśvara himself held high posts at the court of the Karṇāta king of Mithilā, identified as Harisiṇhadeva, who came to the throne about A.D. 1304 (see: The Rājanīti-ratnākara by Chaṇḍeśvara, edited by Kashi-Prasad Jayaswal, Appendix to JBORS 22, 4, 1936). Compare the Prastāvanā to the edition by Gairolā and T. Jhā, where the same genealogy is mentioned; Devāditya is described as a well-known scholar, Vīreśvara as the pradhānāmātya of king Harisiṇha of Mithilā, who was of Karṇāṭavaṃśa and reigned until A.D. 1324, and Caṇḍeśvara as a mantrin of this king; Caṇḍeśvara wrote his Rājanītiratnākara on the request of king Bhaveśa of Mithilā, of Kāmeśvaravaṃśa, who ruled in A.D. 1370.
